ENGLAND OPENS WAR ON TURKEY

VOTE FOR G. O. P. TO SAVE NATION, SHERMAN PLEA

Blames Free Trade for Jobless Men and Boosts Protection.

DEFENDS HIS CAREER

This ends the series of articles in THE TRIBUNE in which the candidacy of the men in each of the three leading parties for United States senator was discussed by Clifford S. Raymond, followed in each case by an article by the candidate himself.

BY LAWRENCE Y. SHERMAN.

I would rather be the builder of a hut than the destroyer of a palace. If I have ever destroyed anything, it has been a useless cumberer of space needed for a better structure to serve the generation now on the stage of active life.

Constitutional government is now meeting its greatest strain in time of peace. Upon its headlands beat the tumultuous passions invoked by turbulent agitators who never maintained justice for either the weak or the strong when trusted to rule. The first element of government is justice. The first support of justice is stability. For law itself is but a fixed rule of action, the final justice and permanence of which rests upon the solid rock of great chartered rights and guarantees tested by the solemn experience of mankind.

Work Vital Issue Now.

The vital question in this campaign is to give work to the men out of employment. This requires constructive legislation. It cannot be done by the Democratic party. It can be done by the Republican party. It has been done by it in other years, and it will again be done by it when returned to power.

The tariff law of the Democratic party is sectional, not national. It was predestined to be sectional when the south dominated the congress that enacted it.

The Democratic party is a minority party. Seven million six hundred thousand Republicans voted against Wilson and 6,300,000 persons for him. The former vote, divided between Taft and Roosevelt, elected Wilson, although he was in the minority by nearly 1,500,000 votes.

Says South Controls.

Then the southern states assumed control of the Democratic party, and a minority of a minority became the legislative power for the whole of the American people. This is the key to the notorious sectionalism of that party's laws.

The tariff act was framed with the studied purpose or careless indifference that destroyed our pay rolls and crippled our farmers in the great areas of the north and west. Every factory has become a recruiting station for a great army of unemployed. Four million idle men with their families, seeing winter's approach, face the Democratic party asking it why they are denied the right to earn a living.

Let a few of the illustrations of Democratic practices falling under my observation be given.

Cites Sewing Machines.

The Republican tariff act gave sewing machines 30 per cent protection. They were free listed by the Democratic tariff. From Jan. 1, 1913, to April, 1913, inclusive, under the Republican tariff $2,595 worth of sewing machines were imported from Scotland by a single company. For the same months of 1914 under a free trade Democratic tariff $273,120 worth were imported by the same company from Scotland, an increase of over 1,000 per cent.

The head of the sewing machine and its parts call for skilled labor. The iron or steel in it is approximately worth 50 cents. The rest of it is labor. The $273,120 imports represent about $250,000 worth of wages at the Scotland standard of $7 a week—thirteen weeks in three months. There is in these imported machines, therefore, about $91 wages per workman invested in Scotland. This means the work of 2,600 men to make the sewing machines in Scotland assembled in the American factory and sold on our market. This item means 2,600 American workmen off our pay roll.

Sees Blow to Wage Scale.

If this be continued for one year, the sewing machines imported into the United States by one company from Scotland placed end to end would reach from Chicago to Springfield, 185 miles.

The cheaper made machine must be used

THE PARAMOUNT ISSUE.

The paramount issue before the people of Cook county and of Chicago is the one of electing competent and upright men to the many local offices.

The presence of three major tickets this year makes this selection more difficult than before.

In some cases there are two reputable and one disreputable contending for the same office. If the independent and public spirited vote is divided between the two reputable, the disreputable is apt to slip into office.

"The Tribune" prints below its absolutely nonpartisan recommendations. It has followed the recommendations of the County Union for such offices as the County Union has covered. It has accepted the recommendations of the Bar Association upon the candidates for judgeships.

The senatorial and the congressional candidacies, being partisan in their nature, are omitted from the subjoined recommendation, which is offered for the consideration of ALL GOOD CITIZENS OF WHATEVER PARTY:

TIP TOP INN DINERS FLEE FIRE PANIC

All Available Ambulances Rushed to Pullman Building Blaze.

MANY ARE OVERCOME

Three hundred patrons of the Tip Top inn deserted their after theater suppers and fled to the street late last night when a fire which started in a storeroom in the basement of the old Pullman building at Adams street and Michigan avenue filled the structure with smoke.

Numerous persons, including fifteen firemen and occupants of the building, are reported to have been overcome by the smoke. All available ambulances and pulmotors were rushed to the scene. Five of the firemen were taken to the Iroquois Memorial hospital.

Battle Through Smoke.

The fire for a time threatened to do serious damage, partly because of the age and condition of the building and partly because of the impetus gained by the flames while the firemen were vainly battling through dense smoke which filled the structure.

Finally the blaze was located in the storeroom of the Betsy Ross Candy company, which has a shop on the Adams street side of the building. While smashing their way into the storeroom twelve firemen were overcome. They were carried to the street by companions.

Among the firemen overcome were Lieut. Thomas Anderson of engine company 13 and Frank Higgins of engine company 40.

Theatergoers Watch Fire.

Cornelius Shea, the watchman, discovered the presence of the fire. He turned in an alarm and when firemen arrived, volumes of smoke were pouring from the basement. Hundreds of theatergoers gathered in the streets and alleys and in Grant park and for a time hindered the firemen in their work.

Diners in the Tip Top inn were aware of the fire only when the smoke entered through open windows and by the clanging of the fire apparatus. A panic was lessened by the manager, William A. Turner, and Miss Gertrude Kell, the cashier, who informed them of the nature of the fire and partly quieted them.

Only one elevator was in operation. Frank Schneider, 430 Webster avenue, the operator, remained at his post and ran his car up and down, carrying it full of passengers at each descent. Most of the occupants of the floor used the stairs and in a struggling mass emerged to the street. It is reported that several of the women who were dining in the restaurant fainted and were carried to safety by men.

SNAPS TRIGGER TO AMUSE BABY; THE CHILD IS DEAD.

Howard Cummings Uses Revolver He Didn't Know Was Loaded as Toy and Kills Little Nephew.

Robert Seitz, 1 year old, accompanied by his father, left his home at 3638 North Hoyne avenue to visit his grandfather, J. W. Cummings at 7303 Langley avenue, yesterday. Robert was amused by his 17 year old uncle, Howard Cummings, who donned a false face and shot peas through a bean blower.

Tiring of his uncle's antics the baby began to cry. While the rest of the family was at lunch Howard went to a drawer in his father's room and got a revolver. He did not think it was loaded. To stop the baby's tears Howard snapped the trigger. Five times the trigger clicked. Each time the baby laughed. At the sixth turn of the barrel the diners jumped from their chairs and ran into the room. The baby was lying on the floor dead.

LOOKS AT HAT; GRABS CASH.

Girl Asks to Be Shown Millinery, Then Snatches Customer's Pocketbook.

A neatly dressed girl about 15 years old last night entered the shop of Ella Johnson, a milliner at 3365 North Clark street, and stole a customer's pocketbook, said to have contained $45. Mrs. Johnson told the police the girl asked to be shown some winter hats. The milliner took out a few and then busied herself with another customer. While the customer was trying on a hat before a mirror with her back turned the girl, according to Mrs. Johnson, snatched the pocketbook and ran.

Loss of Germans in Belgian Field Is 150,000 Men

London Observer Says Thousands Drowned When Enemy Flooded Trenches.

BATTLE IS IN DOUBT

BULLETIN.

[By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The Observer's correspondent on the Franco-Belgian frontier says:

"The Germans' effort to hack their way to Calais has been defeated. A German officer taken prisoner estimated their losses in West Flanders at 150,000 in dead and wounded. Thousands have been drowned in their flooded trenches when the sea was let in by the Belgians.

BULLETIN.

LONDON, Nov. 1, 2:27 a. m.—The Flushing correspondent of Reuter's Telegram company says:

"Heavy firing can be heard in Sluis from the direction of Thourout. Everything indicates that the Germans are retreating from Dixmude."

[By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Oct. 31.—Fighting has been resumed in west Flanders after comparative peace for a few days. It is a give and take affair, the allies gaining at one point and the Germans at another. The net changes in the battle front are so small that the latest official French statements, given out in Paris tonight, summed up the situation in this manner:

"According to the latest advices there is no incident of any importance to report. In the center we have made progress in the region to the north of Souain.

"Everywhere else we are maintaining our positions."

In unofficial dispatches it is asserted that the allies now occupy the trenches which were held by the Germans a week ago.

The losses which the Germans have suffered have been out of proportion to the number of men engaged, and the number captured has been steadily increasing.

German Attacks Turned Back.

An earlier statement from the French ministry of war said:

"Yesterday was marked by an attempt at a general offensive movement on the part of the Germans along the entire front from Nieuport to Arras, and by violent attacks delivered at other points of the line of battle. From Nieuport to the canal of La Bassee there were alternate movements of advance and retirement.

"To the south of Nieuport the Germans, who had taken possession of Ramscapelle, were driven out of this town.

"To the south of Ypres we lost some points of support, Hollebecke and Zandworde, but we progressed to the east of Ypres in the direction of Pachendaale.

"In the region of Chaulnes we advanced beyond Lihons and we took possession of Laquesnoy in the district of Santerre.

"In the region of the Aisne also we have made progress on the heights of the right bank down stream from Soissons, but we were compelled to withdraw in the vicinity of Vailly.

"We have advanced in the region of Souain, and there has been a violent engagement in the Argonne.

"In the Woevre district we have again won ground in the forest of Le Pretre."

Dikes Cut and Land Flooded.

An official dispatch from the Belgian army headquarters to the Belgian minister of war sent here from Havre says:

"Fierce attacks were attempted yesterday morning by the enemy in the neighborhood of Ramscapelle and Pervyse. The second of these attacks was repulsed with great loss. The first forced our troops to cede some ground which later was partially retaken.

"In the afternoon the inundation resulting from the cutting of the dikes extended from between the Yser and the railway at Nieuport to Dixmude and reached the neighborhood of Pervyse.

"Between Dixmude and Huyghen the allied troops were able to cross the Yser and to gain ground. Toward the east the enemy lost Bixschoote."

German Official Statement.

The views of the Germans are contained in the following report:

SULTAN ANNEXES EGYPT; BATTLE IN BLACK SEA

Allied Fleets Prepare for Clash Following Ultimatum.

ITALY CABINET OUT?

WAR NEWS IN A NUTSHELL

GREAT BRITAIN announces that Turkey's Black Sea action has forced it to make war on Ottoman empire.

RUSSIAN ambassador demands passports and leaves Constantinople; French and British envoys expected to follow.

IT is officially announced that Turkey has issued proclamation annexing Egypt.

TURKISH Fleet said to have bombarded Sebastopol and that it is being engaged by a Russian fleet off that port.

IT is rumored that the Italian cabinet has resigned as result of the Turkish angle to war.

THE German attempts to reach the French channel ports were resumed with renewed energy. The Germans undertook general offensive tactics from the coast at Nieuport to Arras and while they made progress at some points they were repulsed at others and in some cases were compelled to give ground. Near the coast their advance was checked by an extension of the flooded area.

ANOTHER British light cruiser, the Hermes, has been sunk by a German submarine. The official announcement gives no details except that the Hermes was sunk in the Straits of Dover and that most of the officers and men were saved.

REPORTS from the long battle line in France are conflicting. Both the Germans and allies claim to have gained near Soissons and Berlin asserts disaster is near the allies near Verdun. Fighting of a most desperate character has been going on around Lille, and the villages surrounding Lille have been taken and retaken time after time.

[By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, via The Hague, Oct. 31.—It was officially announced tonight that a wireless message received from Constantinople says that the Turkish government has issued a proclamation formally annexing Egypt, which is already under Turkish suzerainty.

BULLETIN.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—It was reported here tonight that the Italian cabinet had resigned. Confirmation from government sources was lacking, but it was assumed that, if true, it represented a war move forced by action of Turkey.

BULLETIN.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 1, 3 a. m.—War has been officially declared between Turkey and Russia, according to a private message transmitted from Constantinople to the United States through the channels of the American government.

[By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Nov. 1, 3 a. m.—Turkey's raid on Russian ports in the Black sea has forced Great Britain into war with the Ottoman government, the foreign office announced early this morning.

The Turkish government summarily shut off communications with the British embassy at Constantinople on Friday, and it is now up to Great Britain to take whatever action is required to protect British interests and territory and Egypt from attacks made or threatened.

Send Ultimatum to Turkey.

Whether the sublime port received the ultimatum sent yesterday by the allies is unknown.

France, Russia, and Great Britain are acting in concert in this new crisis and in the ultimatum, which set a time limit, believed to be twenty-four hours, demanded:

An explanation of Turkey's naval action in the Black sea.

The dismissal of German officers from Turkish ships.

The dismantling of the cruisers Goeben and Breslau, said to have been purchased by Turkey from Germany.

The reported disavowal of the Black sea incidents and the bombardment of Russian ports and Russian shipping by Turkish fleet has not been received here.

Will Hold Turks Responsible.

The shifting of the blame by Turkey to Germany for the work of the German cruisers, Breslau and Goeben, now flying the Turkish flag, will not be accepted. An abject apology will be demanded.

It is held in official circles here that if the two cruisers were not sold to Turkey at the opening of the war, they should have been dismantled and the crews interned when the vessels took refuge in Turkish ports.

If they were sold to Turkey they should have shipped Turkish crews in view of the fact that the Ottoman empire held it was a neutral nation.

Dispatches from different points indicate that the Turkish fleet is continuing its activities in the Black sea.

The Rome correspondent of the Star says that Turk warships are bombarding Sevastopol. Another report says the Russians have engaged the Turkish fleet off that port.

Neither of the foregoing rumors can be verified.

What the Turk Fleet Did.

Regarding the activities of the Turks in the Black sea a telegram from Constantinople via Amsterdam says:

"A small part of the Turkish fleet on the Black sea on Thursday sank the Russian mine layer Prut, which had on board 700 mines; damaged a Russian torpedo boat, and seized a collier. A torpedo fired from a Turkish torpedo boat sank the Russian destroyer Kubanets, and the Turkish destroyer Mauvanet-I-Millet torpedoed another Russian coast guard ship, which was severely damaged. Three Russian officers and seventy-two sailors were saved by us and imprisoned. The Turkish fleet suffered no loss. The battle is being successfully continued."

Russ Envoy Goes Home.

A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company from Athens says that the Russian ambassador and his staff have left Constantinople.

It is believed in official circles in Athens that the question of peace in the Balkans depends solely upon the attitude of Bulgaria. Greece, although resolved to preserve neutrality, is closely watching its interests.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 31.—News of a formal declaration of war by Turkey on Russia is momentarily expected. It was admitted in official circles that the Turkish cabinet has been in continual session at Constantinople since yesterday considering a plan of action.

The diplomatic representatives of France and England will stand by Russia and demand their passports and leave Constantinople with the czar's envoy unless Turkey disavows the belligerent actions of its fleet and apologizes, agreeing at the same time to make proper amends. The Russian ambassador and the members of his embassy staff and the consulates already have left Constantinople, according to the best information obtainable here.

Russians Glad of Crisis.

Although rumors have been widely circulated today that the action of the Turkish fleet in attacking Russian Black sea cities was not authorized by the Turkish government, it is felt here that Turkey must accept responsibility and fight.

There is no disguising the exultation in Russia that at last Russian troops are to be permitted to work their will on the Turks. There are many old scores to be paid back and already a number of high officers of the army have applied for permission to serve against the Turks.

There has been little official news from the Black sea section today. The government has clapped on a sweeping censorship and refuses to confirm rumors of con-

[illegible] fighting between the Turkish warships and the Russian Black sea fleet.

Allies' Fleet Gets Ready.

ROME, Oct. 31.—The Anglo-French fleet in the Mediterranean is ready to strike at Turkey.

Advices received here tonight indicate that the fleet, made up of battleships, armored cruisers, and battle cruisers, with a large flotilla of destroyers and submarines, has left the mouth of the Adriatic and steamed eastward.

It is believed to be awaiting orders to steam to the Dardanelles and "feel out" the Turkish defenses. At the same time it may be used to convey transports with troops for Egypt if the Turks embark on a strong offensive there.

War in 24 Hours.

Although there has been no formal declaration of war, it is believed here that it must come within twenty-four hours.

Turkey can hardly be expected at this late date to disavow the acts of its Black sea fleet, even though assuming the offensive was not directly ordered by the Turkish government.

The Young Turks control the government, and they are heart and soul with Germany in the present war. They have been urging participation ever since the opening of hostilities, and if the Turkish cabinet council, which has been in almost continuous session since Wednesday morning, should repudiate the action of the fleet it would probably face a revolution.

Turks to Invade Egypt.

War with the allies by Turkey will most certainly be followed by the almost immediate invasion of Egypt by Turkey. The Suez canal would be the objective. If the Turks could block it or dynamite and destroy it they would effectively interfere with the further influx of Indian and Australian troops to the European fighting zone.

And this is exactly what England would be expected to prevent. It was because it was feared that certain of the German and Austrian vessels that were interned in the canal carried dynamite that the Egyptian government took possession of those vessels as prizes of war a fortnight ago.

And it was because there was no certainty that Turkey would remain neutral that England held its Australian and New Zealand forces in Egypt instead of letting them proceed to France, where they were badly needed.

Berlin Elated Over Situation.

BERLIN, by way of The Hague and London, Oct. 31.—Announcement of Turkey's participation in the war caused enthusiasm in Berlin.

A large crowd gathered in Potsdamer-platz and later marched to the Turkish embassy, cheering for the sultan and the Turkish minister of war, Enver Pasha.

The Turkish ambassador, Mahmoud Mukhtar Pasha, made a brief speech from the balcony of the embassy expressing his gratitude for the manifestation, which, he said, was certain proof of the affectionate relations of Germany and Turkey.

TURKS SHIFT THE BLAME.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 31.—The Turkish minister of finance informed the French ambassador at Constantinople yesterday that the raid of Turkish warships on Russian seaports took place without the knowledge of the Ottoman government, presumably under the influence of German officers and crew.

This information was conveyed in a dispatch today from Ambassador Morgenthau to the American government.

Mr. Morgenthau added that the Russian ambassador received instructions at 3 o'clock yesterday morning to demand his passports and made an effort to see the grand vizier, who pleaded illness and did not receive him.

Russ Envoy Transfers Interests.

The czar's envoy has placed the interests of Russia in the hands of the Italian ambassador.

The Russian, French, and British ambassadors, according to the same dispatch, are preparing to leave Constantinople together.

Ambassador Morgenthau's dispatch made no mention of any declaration of war nor of internal conditions in Turkey. He probably will take over the French and British embassies.

Ambassador Morganthau's dispatch was filed at noon yesterday in cipher and was read with interest by White House officials as well as by officers of the government generally.

The fact that no mention was made concerning missionaries led officials to believe that Mr. Morgenthau felt confident that Americans throughout the Ottoman empire would be safe.

In diplomatic circles the news that the ambassadors of the triple entente were preparing to leave Constantinople was no surprise.

Break Was Predicted.

On the authority of a prominent diplomat it was said today that A. Rustem Bey, the Turkish ambassador here, when leaving Washington three weeks ago, told a friend that Turkey would enter the war on the side of Germany within a month.

The campaign which Turkey is said to expect to wage against the triple entente is said by British officials to include extensive operations in Egypt, preparations to meet which, it is also said, have been in progress for some time by Great Britain.

Diplomatic Status a Secret.

Acting Secretary Lansing declined to state which of the powers had asked the United States to care for diplomatic interests at Constantinople, but he said the American government was the friend of all the belligerents and would, of course, comply with any requests of that character.

Great Britain several weeks ago, when the Turkish situation apparently had reached a crisis, asked the United States to care for its interests in case of emergency, and it is believed France will also turn its affairs over to this country.

Although there still was a view in some quarters that German officers and Turkish commanders of the war party might have forced the situation on the grand vizier and his counselors, nothing was contained in official dispatches, which could be construed as supporting that theory.

ITALY'S FOREIGN MINISTER TAKES UP HARD TASK

Baron Sonnino Enters on Work of Guiding Nation Through Critical Time.

BY EX-ATTACHE.

[Copyright: 1914: By the Brentwood Co.]

All those who have at heart the welfare of Italy will rejoice in the selection of Baron Sidney Sonnino to succeed the late Marquis di San Giuliano at the palace of the consulta at Rome. The direction of the foreign policy of Italy just at the present juncture is a matter of more than ordinary international importance.

It is upon the shoulders of the minister intrusted with the control thereof that must rest the heavy burden of the responsibility of determining the course which his country shall pursue in connection with the great war of nations.

There are three alternatives confronting Italy. One is that of drawing her sword in behalf of Germany and Austria, who have been her partners in the triple alliance for the last quarter of a century or more. The second is that of siding with France, Russia, and Great Britain against the kaiser and Emperor Francis Joseph, while the third is that of adhering to her present policy of neutrality.

King Between Two Fires.

Prudence would seem to indicate the last of these three alternatives. Public sentiment throughout the length and breadth of the peninsula is overwhelmingly in favor of the second, the declaration of war against Austria and Germany, while every possible influence in the way of alternate cajolery and menace is being brought to bear upon King Victor Emmanuel from Berlin and from Vienna to live up to what are alleged to be his solemn obligations to the triple alliance.

It is no exaggeration to assert that the entire future of Italy depends upon the policy which she pursues in the present great international conflagration.

It is therefore imperative that the Italian ship of state should have at its helm in these times of fierce storm and terrible stress a pilot who inspires confidence both at home and abroad by reason of his experience, his level headedness, and his reputation for being above everything else a safe man.

Not Popular with People.

Baron Sidney Sonnino, now in his sixty-sixth year, is a Jew by race, a native of Egypt, and a Protestant by faith—the first Protestant, indeed, to hold office as cabinet minister and as premier at Rome.

Born on the banks of the Nile, of an English mother, he received the greater part of his education in Great Britain, and it is perhaps due to this English training that he has always retained a certain degree of English aloofness, both in speech and in manner.

The result is that in spite of his manifold gifts and his altogether remarkable abilities he has never been able to win the affection, or even the liking, of his Italian fellow countrymen. True, they entertain the most profound respect for him and have great confidence in his statecraft in domestic as well as in foreign affairs. But he has not the gift of making friends. He is too cold and reserved for that.

By equalizing taxation, by lightening the fiscal burdens upon the poor and spreading them among the rich, by abolishing imposts that were oppressive and vexatious, and increasing duties that were less provocative of irritation, he has done more than any living Italian to arrest the steady and exhausting flow of Italian emigration to the new world.

Backed by Two Parties.

Formerly in the diplomatic service of his country, and attached in turn to the Italian embassies at Madrid, at Vienna, and at Berlin, Sonnino is in most things a moderate conservative, and in other matters an advanced radical; so that while the Conservatives look upon him as essentially safe, the Socialists are glad to give him their support.

If the Socialists and advanced Radicals lean toward him, it is because he was one of the principal champions of the policy of universal suffrage introduced by ex-Premier Giolitti, during his last administration, largely at Sonnino's instance, and thanks to his assistance.

Another project to which Sonnino stands committed, and which has had the effect of commending him to the good will of the Socialists, has been that of old age pensions, on the lines of those introduced by the British chancellor of the exchequer Lloyd-George, in England.

Disliked Triple Alliance.

But what will interest people most, in connection with his new appointment as minister of foreign affairs, are his views upon matters of international policy.

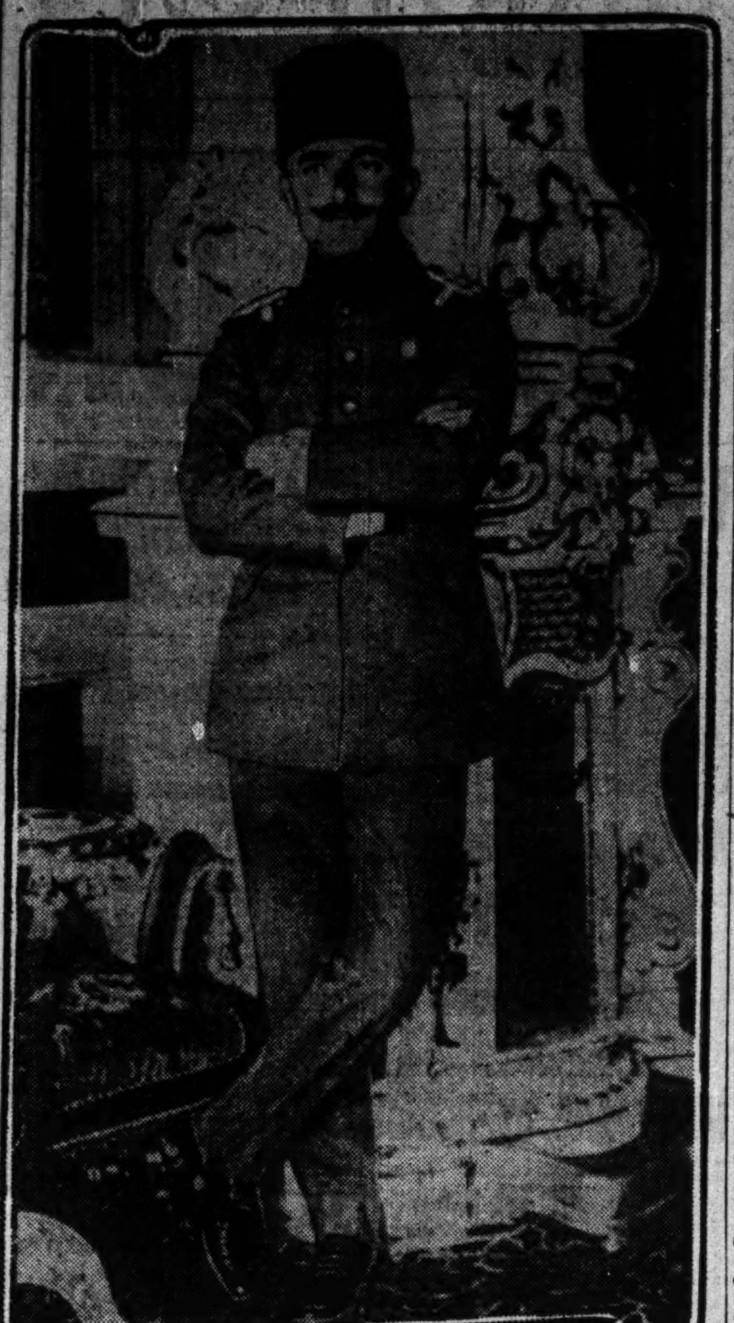
While minister of finance in the Crispi cabinet he saw so much of the incalculable harm done to Italy in an economic sense by her inclusion in the triple alliance that he ever afterwards has manifested ill will towards his country's participation in this agreement—an agreement which compelled Italy to embark in extravagant expenditure in order to satisfy the military and naval requirements insisted upon by Germany and Austria, and which had the effect of committing her, at the instance of the Berlin government, to a tariff war with France, with the result that the latter closed all her markets to Italian produce, reducing many hundreds of prosperous Italian industries to wreck and ruin.

Sonnino contributed largely to the termination of this tariff war, and to the restoration of friendly relations with France, and has consequently never been regarded with any particular approval, either at Vienna or at Berlin, while in the latter city the fact that he had an English mother and had received the greater part of his education in England has always been counted against him.

Sonnino's Future Course.

Just what Sonnino's policy as minister of foreign affairs will be it is difficult to predict. That he will favor any cooperation with Germany and Austria against the triple entente is not to be thought of for one moment. For he realizes, as does every other Italian, that aside from any question as to the interests of the nation in the matter, his country was under no obligation whatsoever to draw its sword in behalf of Germany and Austria.

Turkey's Minister Blamed for War



ENVER PASHA

[Copyright: 1914: By Underwood & Underwood.]

As leader of the war party in Turkey, the sultan's minister of war, Enver Pasha, is responsible for the entrance of the Ottoman empire into the European conflict. Under his urging the government gave its consent for the mobilization of the army, and his hand is seen in the actual beginning of hostilities by the fleet in the Black sea. Enver Pasha received his military training in Germany, and it was his plan that was followed in placing all the training of the Turkish troops in the hands of German officers. He is credited with being the dominant figure in Constantinople today.

pied Ramscapelle and Preischoon and our attacks on Ypres are progressing. Zandworde, Chateau Hollebecke, and Wambeke have been stormed.

"Farther south we also have gained ground to the east of Soissons. The enemy has been driven from several strongly fortified positions to the north of Vailly. The enemy retreated across the River Aisne and suffered severe losses. We captured 1,000 prisoners and two machine guns.

"In the Argonnes and to the west of Verdun and to the north of Toul several French attacks were repulsed with heavy losses for the enemy."

Germans Gain Near Verdun.

The Germans claim to have had the advantage of the fighting near Verdun. Information given out in Berlin today said:

"Military experts of the Berlin newspapers consider that yesterday's developments around Verdun were of the greatest importance, and say there is promise of their resumption with renewed strength.

"In the fighting south of Verdun the French are straining every effort to crush and drive out the army which at the end of September penetrated as far as St. Mihiel and which for a month has been fighting hard to hold the ground gained.

"The Germans have captured the main position and their forces are operating from the direction of Toul. The French attack from Pont-a-Mousson also was without results."

Gallieni Predicts Victory.

Paris considers the success of the allies on the front in Flanders so certain that Gen. Gallieni, military commander of the capital, today predicted that by Nov. 20 the Germans will have been forced to retire entirely from French soil.

The impression here is that a general advance of the allied forces has been ordered.

BRITAIN LOSES ANOTHER BOAT

Light Warship Hermes Is Sunk by German Submarine in Dover Straits.

MOST OF CREW SAVED.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The British light cruiser Hermes was sunk by a German submarine in the Straits of Dover today. This official announcement was made tonight. Nearly all the 450 officers and men were saved.

Take Two German Cruisers?

MELBOURNE, Oct. 31.—It is reported here that the German cruisers Scharnhorst and the Gneisenau have been captured as a result of the failure of their coal supply. There is no official confirmation of the report to be had here.

The Scharnhorst and Gneisenau are sister ships of the battle cruiser type, launched in 1906, and having a displacement of 11,420 tons.

On Sept. 22 they bombarded Papeete, capital of Tahiti, the principal of the Society islands and under French control. Considerable damage was done to the town and a small loss of life was reported.

CO-EDS SEW FOR RED CROSS.

Northwestern and Evanston High School Girls Spend Day Making Bandages.

More than fifty co-eds from Northwestern university and girls from the Evanston High school met yesterday at the residence of Miss Mary Bartelme and spent the day sewing for the Red Cross. They were directed by Miss E. D. Miller, superintendent of Grove House for Convalescents in Evanston. Miss Miller was formerly a British nurse.

The girls made bandages of all kinds, "nightingales," bed slippers, and other articles, and in the bandages alone they used up more than five bolts of muslin.

The cash contributions to date total $76,000, in round numbers.

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 31.—The Canadian government today placed an embargo on the exportation to any country at war with Great Britain of any articles which will be of use to them in prosecuting the war.

EXPERT TELLS OF MARNE BATTLE; BLOW TO KAISER

Teutons, Caught in Dangerous Trap, Forced to Fall Back Leaving Many Wounded.

BY HENRY J. REILLY.

PARIS, Oct. 20.—The first general engagement of the German and French armies during the present war was the battle of the Marne in the early part of September. The turning point of the battle was the morning of the 7th, when the German advance was stopped.

At this time their line, roughly, was from Compiegne on the right, some thirty odd miles north of Paris, through Meaux, less than twenty miles to the east and north of Paris, through Esternay and Sezanne, the point farthest south reached by the Germans, thence by Vitry-le-François, thence up to St. Menehould thence to the north around Verdun, and south and east along the eastern face of the line of barrier forts which stretch from Verdun to Toul, and so on to southern Alsace.

Some experts claim the object of the Germans was to drive the allied British and French army back on Paris, thus cutting it off from the fortified east frontier of France. Others say, and probably with more reason, that they cared more about defeating the allied army and then going for Paris, because as long as the allied army was in the field they could not properly besiege Paris.

German Position Was Dangerous.

Whatever their object, the position of their maximum advance was a dangerous one for them, with the French and English pressing them hard on their right flank, while their left was threatened by the French troops from Verdun to Epinal, and their center sagged away to the south of the line joining Compiegne and Verdun.

The result of the battle was that the Germans retreated and took up a position strongly fortified with field works roughly from Noyon on the right, to the north of Soissons on the Aisne river, through Reims, and across just to the north of Verdun, and thence down past the barrier forts into Alsace in very much the same position in this part of the line as before.

While this battle is of tremendous interest, not only because of its result but also because, probably, up to that time, the biggest the world has ever seen, it has been difficult because of the rigid censorship to get a clear idea of what actually happened. Those fortunate enough to be in the vicinity of any part of the battlefield could observe but a small portion of it. The great majority of these were not competent observers.

Describes Impressions of Fight.

One skilled onlooker, who happened to be in a town which the French left, and which was subsequently occupied by the Germans, and later on reoccupied by the French, described quite vividly his impressions. He said the first sign of the proximity of the Germans was the passing through town of French supply and ammunition trains bound south. These filled up all the parallel roads running south. Along with them, and tangled among them, were thousands of French refugees from the villages farther north.

They consisted of old men, women, children, and boys just short of manhood. They were on foot, on bicycles, in wagons, and were carrying every sort of household articles and favorite pieces of wearing apparel.

They had no definite objective, but were simply drifting to the rear as the army retired. They did not seem to be in terror, but seemed to feel hopeless. They all said they were retiring because they had heard such tales of German actions in towns which they occupied that they were afraid to stay.

Germans Pushed On in Night.

During the nights the Germans still pushed on. The French kept some of their artillery in action to cover the retreat of their troops. The last position taken by the French, from which the Germans did not succeed in driving them, was well occupied by early in the morning of the 7th.

At first the number of guns in action was small enough so that, though the noise made by their discharge was great, the sound of individual guns could be distinguished.

This was just before daylight. The picture was a tremendously exciting one; faint breakings of dawn in the east, the flash of the French guns along their line, the burst of flame in the darkness as their high explosive shells fell in the German position, and the fire coming from the replying German guns, with here and there along the French line a storm of German shrapnel.

Fire Increased at Daylight.

With daylight the fire increased on both sides. It became so intense that it was no longer possible to distinguish the sound of individual guns. It was simply one continuous roar, not a sharp one, but a dull, full throated one. The fire from the French guns was so rapid that times it seemed as if there was a sheet of flame stretching along the long line of muzzles.

The German fire, which had been slow at first, also increased. The German shrapnel burst first in front of the French line, then back, then it commenced to find its targets and hit the French batteries, here and there knocking over men and officers.

No infantry firing line, either of the French or of the Germans, could be distinguished, though before the artillery had become so intense the rattle of infantry rifles and the riveting hammer sound of machine guns could be heard.

Village Was Deserted.

When the Germans were forced to retire and the French again marched to the north, they found in many places, particularly in the towns, large numbers of German wounded. The experience of one good sized town which had been occupied was probably typical of that of many. When the French abandoned it probably three-fourths of the population, including the mayor, fled to the south.

While the last French troops were leaving town the German artillery fired at them. Comparatively little damage was done by these projectiles, however. When the fire ceased the assistant mayor went to the entrance of the town, met the Germans, and assured them that the French soldiers had all left. He and several other prominent citizens were taken as hostages and were kept for several days in the town hall under guard.

Little Pillaging Done.

As the French cavalry got clear of the town on one side the German uhlans rode in from the other. After them came regiment after regiment of infantry, accompanied by regiments of artillery. The Germans began their entry in the afternoon.

For the rest of that afternoon, all that night, and all the next day their troops passed through the town in one continuous stream. The inhabitants who remained reported that they were not in any way molested by the Germans. They said that the Germans paid in all cases for the goods that they took. Supplies taken for the army also were paid for.

The only pillaging was in the houses of richer people who had run away. Here the Germans took practically all the liquor they could lay their hands on, and most of the bedclothes, apparently being both cold and thirsty. All the inhabitants united in saying that the Germans had no idea of retreating until the order came.

They left behind them between 1,500 and 2,000 wounded, and a number of drunken soldiers found in various wine cellars.

Apparently everywhere over the battlefield of the Marne the Germans left behind them quantities of wounded. For ten days after the battle of the Marne small bodies of German soldiers, still armed, and who had gotten well beyond their lines, or who had known nothing of the retreat and had been left behind, were found in various wooded parts in the southern edge of the battlefield.

There can be no doubt that this battle will take its place in history as one of the most important which has ever been fought.

MORE BRITONS OF TITLE FALL ON BATTLEFIELD.

Among the killed was Capt. Sir Francis Ernest Waller, Royal fusiliers, while among those who died of wounds were Lieut. Col. B. E. Ward, Middlesex regiment, and Lieut. Col. W. L. Loring, Royal Warwickshires.

RUSSIANS FORCE FOES TO RESUME DEFENSIVE FIGHT

Czar's Army Bends Back German Lines; Austrians Now Bearing Brunt.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The Russian tactics of bending back the line of invaders in Russian Poland one section at a time, and the retreat of each section endangering the position of the section next to it on the south, appears to London observers to have been successful everywhere except on the extreme Russian left, where the Austrians still maintain the positions they succeeded in retaking from the Russians.

Along the frontier of east Prussia the Germans are fighting stubbornly to prevent another invasion of their territory at a point further south.

It is argued here that the Russians cannot expect to assume a full offensive movement until the Austrians are driven back from the River San. But even this will not mean an immediate invasion of Germany, as it is known that the Germans, in preparation for a possible retirement, have established heavily entrenched positions along the River Warthe.

Weather Delays Russian Advance.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 31.—The weather is cutting a distinct figure in the fighting on the Polish-Prussian frontier. Snow squalls and heavy cold rains have seriously hampered the pursuit of the fleeing Germans, who are now reported near their first line of defense inside the Prussian frontier.

During the last eighteen days there has been almost continuous fighting in which the Russians have pressed the Germans back at all points, so that the entire country from Warsaw to points west and south of Lowicz and Skiernewice is now clear of the enemy.

Naturally, operations will be slower now that the Germans are fighting a defensive campaign, but it is officially stated that there will be no halting.

Germans Repulsed in North.

The following official communication was issued from general headquarters tonight:

"On the East Prussian front the plan for breaking through the center of our fortified position around Bakalarzewo projected by the enemy has failed. During five days of unsuccessful attacks the Germans suffered immense losses. Our troops have progressed in several districts.

"Beyond the Vistula we occupy strongly the towns of Gostynin, Lenczica, Lodz, and Ostrovec.

"In Galicia the fighting continues without any essential change in the situation."

Austrians Report Progress.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 31.—An official dispatch from Vienna, dated today noon, says:

"Near the Galician-Bukowinian frontier, north of Kuty, a mixed Russian column was defeated yesterday. In middle Galicia our troops have occupied Russian positions northeast of Turka, near Stary, Sambor, east of Przemysl, and on the lower San. Several Russian attacks around Misko have been repulsed. At Misko, Stary, Sambor, and other points, hundreds of Russians have been captured.

"The operation in Russian Poland yesterday passed without fighting."

CLICKS CAMERA UNTIL A SHELL CLICKS HIM--BUT

Thompson Awakes In an Ambulance to Find He Is Still One Piece.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Oct. 31.—Donald Thompson, the Kansas photographer who carried a camera through Belgium, arrived in London this afternoon looking as if he had just escaped from the surgery ward of an ambulance hospital, or, as he put it himself, as if he had just come through a Kansas cyclone.

His face was hidden in bandages and his lips were so swollen and torn that it was with difficulty that he could tell the story of his adventures in getting photographs between Antwerp and Ostend and, nevertheless, escaping safely to England.

Thompson is the only war correspondent or photographer of any nationality, so far as is yet known, that has been wounded. He suffered no injury during all the weeks before and after the bombardment of Antwerp until he reached Nieuport.

Shell Drops Through Roof.

There, as he was dining with three German officers, a big shell from one of the British war vessels bombarding the German position, dropped through the roof into the room where they sat.

The three German officers were killed outright as the shell exploded inside the dining room, but Thompson managed to escape with minor, though painful injuries, and he at once made up his mind to get right back to headquarters. His story of his adventures is best told in his words:

"I know my nose is still attached to my face," began Thompson, "because I can feel it, but for several days I was quite sure that it had gone forever."

Arrested, Freed Again.

Thompson said he had come to London after the fall of Antwerp and had then gone back. He was immediately arrested, but was released when he showed his United States passport. He visited several of the Belgian towns southeast of Antwerp, where he said there were hundreds of bodies still unburied. Finally by one pretext and another he made his way to the front at Dixmude. He continued:

"Through my field glasses I watched Belgian soldiers running for cover through the Dixmude streets, but the most thrilling sight was a Red Cross motor ambulance loaded with wounded proceeding through a whirlwind of shrapnel toward the rear of the Belgian line. I expected momentarily to see it blown to bits, but it never was touched.

"Many Belgian prisoners were brought in by the Germans, but I saw few British. In fact, the Germans told me that the Belgians were doing all the fighting at this point

Gets Into the Trenches.

"I spent the night at Bruges and the next day started for the coast again with a cavalry officer, who supplied me with a horse. He volunteered to show me the trenches near Nieuport and also kept telling me about the big guns they were getting ready to go into action. He said the Germans would have two 42 centimeter howitzers and ten 32 centimeter guns within a day or so, and with their aid it should be easy to open the way to Calais.

"He also declared that the German army would reach Calais if it took the last man in the German empire to get there, but when I left it seemed to me that they were far from attaining their goal.

"Outside Nieuport I climbed down into a trench in the sand dunes and dug a sort of cave for myself a few feet from the main firing line. Soon we were under a heavy fire from the British fleet and also from the land batteries. The Germans offered me some canned beef for lunch from the supplies captured in Belgium, but the din of cannonading was such that I had little appetite.

Gets Lost in a Trench.

"I saw at closer range than ever I had before the incredible slaughter caused among the men in the trenches by the enemy's shells, and the sight was sickening. Suddenly the Germans fell back by underground passages from their trenches and I found myself alone. I wandered around these trenches as if lost in the maze at Coney Island and didn't find the right exit until after dark, when there was a lull in the firing.

"That night and the next day I spent at the German headquarters in a small village nearby. Friday night, just eight days ago, while German officers and I were having dinner in a private house used for the army headquarters a shell from a British warship dropped through the roof.

Awakes in an Ambulance.

"I remember nothing more until I found myself rocking about in an ambulance on my way to Bruges. In the hospital there I was told I had been thrown through a window by the force of the explosion and that my face was rather badly torn up. They also said that my three officer companions had been killed by the shell.

"The German Red Cross nurses, clothed in white even to their hats and shoes, dressed my wounds. As soon as I was able to get up I rode to Antwerp on an ammunition cart and after a few days there I came on to London."

HOLDS COPPER CONTRABAND.

Britain Puts Metal on List of Commodities Subject to Seizure on Seas.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 31.—Copper shipments hereafter will be considered absolute contraband of war by the British government, according to the revised contraband list cabled to the state department today by Ambassador Page in London. The previous list classed copper as conditional contraband. The only other important change in the revised list is the placing of illuminating oil, heretofore unmentioned, on the conditional list.

The state department late today directed Ambassador Page to request the British government to release at once cargoes of American copper on the Italian steamers San Giovanni and Regina D'Italia detained at Gibraltar, on the ground that the cargoes are destined to Italy—neutral territory.

Formal protest against the detention of the American copper laden steamer Kroonland at Gibraltar was made at London earlier in the day through Ambassador Page.

ALL NOMINEES OUT FOR LARGER NAVY AND ARMY

Sherman, Robins, and Sullivan Favor More Protection for U. S. Shores.

All three Illinois senatorial candidates went on record yesterday as favoring an American navy adequate for the protection of American shores and American commerce.

Lawrence Y. Sherman, Republican; Raymond Robins, Progressive, and Roger C. Sullivan, Democrat, each advocated substantial encouragement of an American merchant marine. They believe the United States should take tangible steps to extend trade and guard American interests at home and abroad. The rehabilitating of the army is urged as also necessary.

"Criminal Negligence"—Sherman.

Mr. Sherman's statemnt follows:

"Our lack of adequate military defenses is notorious. To permit its further continuance is criminal negligence.

"An increase in the regular army will not serve to impose militarism upon the country. It will be but a proper foundation for the rapid recruiting and formation of a sufficient land force in the event it is needed.

"Our navy needs strengthening. It has not kept pace with our defensive needs. A great coast line is ours. We have some insular possessions. Our coast defenses ought to be supplemented by a sufficient navy. The foregoing cannot be viewed as military force to be used for purposes of conquest or aggressiveness. It is solely the prudent safeguarding of our country by such adequate means as are proper to be taken in time of peace and by a peace loving nation.

"We are at peace, and every American prays that we may remain so. This must not, however, be permitted to obscure our present palpable state of unpreparedness."

Stronger Navy, Robins' Demand.

Mr. Robins said;

"I believe in a strong navy—in a stronger navy—to safeguard our shores from war, to protect our growing trade upon the seas and our increasing interests in foreign lands.

"In common with Theodore Roosevelt, as well as countless others, I hope for the time when an international police may support decisions of international tribunals, but today it is necessary for us to build and to maintain a naval force so strong and so trained as to shield the union from the horror that now is in Europe.

"Four years ago an effort was made to secure a comprehensive survey of the requirements for our national defense. That survey should be made now, by a dispassionate, competent board, its members chosen for their knowledge and their judgment and not for partisian bias; to study our needs as peaceable people determined to protect ourselves and safeguard our rights; to look abroad for information, as well as at home for weakness; to see if the Swiss system of a general and really popular militia may be adapted to American purposes."

Sullivan for Adequate Navy.

Mr. Sullivan expressed his views as follows:

"I am a sincere advocate of peace in America, not only that we may save our people from the horrors of war but to promote the happiness and prosperity of our people. To further our prosperity I am an earnest advocate of a merchant marine, for which we have both the opportunity and the occasion at hand.

"To give protection to the merchant marine that I hope may become a reality at an early day and to safeguard our peace by showing our ability and readiness to defend our shores, I advocate an American navy adequate to those ends. To meet that idea I favor a building program for the navy that will keep it modern, efficient in all its branches, and sufficient for the purposes I have named."

Fortunes of Week in Europe's War.

BY J. W. T. MASON.

[Former European Manager of the United Press.]

New York, Oct. 31.—The bombardment of Russian ports on the Black sea coast by Turkish warships is the dominant event of the week. If not repudiated at Constantinople to the satisfaction of Russia, this action of the Ottoman navy may lead to complications second only to the rivalries that began the pan-European war.

The opportunity now has come for realizing the Slav's age-long ambition to seize Constantinople and secure an outlet to the sea blocked neither by winter ice nor a foreign coast line. It is understood by Berlin to cause an important change in Russia's strategy.

If Russia had no important interests to further by adopting strong retaliatory measures against Turkey there would be no difficulty in holding the Turks at bay with a small force. In this case there need be no change of importance in Russia's offensive movement against Austria-Hungary.

But, as facts are, Russia can gain enormously by subduing Turkey. A serious campaign against the Turks, however, will require Russia to divert a large part of the army that had been designated for action against the Germans. This is where Germany expects to gain initial advantage, to be followed up by creating possible discord among the allies in the peace conference, when, if there should be an allied victory, Turkey's fate must be decided. Whether the Slav will remain wholly true to the allied interests or whether self-interest will step in remains the most momentous question of the immediate future.

Germany has failed to carry forward its offensive in western Belgium during the week. The dominant German military maxim to be always doing something has been well emphasized in the coastal assault, but without result. This route to Paris, which was planned originally by Frederick the Great, to proceed via Dunkirk and Abbeville seems to have been closed to his twentieth century successor.

The allies have held their own in Flanders and northern France throughout the week. That they have been unable to carry out a counter offensive is not as serious as is the failure of the Germans to resume the initiative.

The German campaign when enemies appear on both flanks has been explained by German writers from Bernhardi down, to require that one enemy be crushed before the other has developed his maximum strength. For the first time the western enemy has resisted the crushing process, and it is doubtful whether a third attempt as powerful as either of the two others is possible. Certainly the battle of Flanders did not have the strength behind it of the first assault directed against Paris.

Germany has admitted, in the course of the week, that a retreat has been necessary in Poland. Nevertheless, there have been intimations from Petrograd, as the week ended, that the German retirement had been checked and a new offensive, apparently, was being planned by Gen. von Hindenberg.

Policeman Shoots Saloonkeeper.

Grover Fleck, a saloonkeeper at North Ashland and West Chicago avenues, was shot in the left lung by Policeman Edward Mach in an anteroom off Lipman's dance hall at California avenue and Division street early yesterday. Fleck had drawn a revolver during a quarrel with William Volquarts of 1704 West Chicago avenue and refused to put it away at Mach's command. When he made a menacing gesture, Mach fired.

MILITARY CHIEFS KNOW OF PERILS TO U.S. SEAPORTS

Roosevelt Warning Backed Up by Views of Those Leading in Work of Defense.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 31.—[Special.]—The statement by Col. Theodore Roosevelt at Princeton yesterday that he had seen the war plans of two nations for the capture and holding for ransom of New York and San Francisco attracted much attention here today.

Among military and naval men there is not the slightest doubt that the colonel saw just what he says he did. Neither is there any doubt in the minds of officers here that the nations the former president had in mind were Germany and Japan.

It is admitted by all men familiar with the military situation in the United States that there is nothing to prevent the successful execution of these plans once the United States navy has been defeated and scattered.

Navy the Only Defense.

Only the navy stands between the American seacoast cities and their occupation by the enemy, with resultant extraction from them of millions and perhaps even billions in wealth. Once the city is in the hands of the invader, it is pointed out, the banks, stores, and factories are helpless. All the immense resources of the rest of the country are of no avail to them.

The strong fortifications of New York and other coast cities are merely certain assurances that the enemy will not make an attack from the sea, or attempt a landing, at those points. There is nothing except the strength of the navy to prevent a landing near these fortifications and taking them by attack from the rear.

None of the guns in our coast defenses can be turned against an enemy approaching on the land side. The United States army is too weak to be of service and there is no provision for creating one in less time than from six months to two years.

Capital May Have Plans.

Mr. Roosevelt has never been in Japan, but he has been in Germany and elsewhere in Europe. It is not known here where he saw the plans he speaks of, but it is suggested as a possiblity that he might have seen them in Europe, where for years rival governments have been spying out the military plans of one another.

It is also possible that he might have seen them while in Washington. Our military and naval attachés are frequently digging up abroad matter which, they are satisfied, represents the plans of this nation or that in case of war with the United States. Similarly the plans which the United States naval and army war colleges have devised are pretty well understood in foreign general staff offices.

SON OF LANSDOWNE KILLED.

Lord Nairne, Relative of Conservative Leader in House of Lords, Victim of War.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—Lord Nairne, the second son of the Marquis of Lansdowne, Conservative leader in the house of lords, has been killed in action. He was a major in the First Dragoons and served in the South African war. Since 1910 Lord Nairne has been an equerry in waiting.

Chinese Stowaways Caught.

When an employe of the Michigan Central railroad broke the seal of a car of apples in the road's yards at South Water street yesterday two Chinese jumped out. With the aid of other employés the Chinese were taken into an office, and Immigration Inspector H. D. Eby was notified. The Chinese said they had boarded the train in Windsor, Canada, and during the trip to Chicago subsisted on the apples.

ITALY CONTROLS AVLONA HARBOR

Navy Occupies Saseno Island, Claimed by Both Greece and Albania.

INFANTRY IS LANDED.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—A Stefani agency dispatch from Rome says:

"A semi-official note has been issued stating that the island of Saseno was occupied yesterday by Admiral Patris of the Italian navy, who disembarked one battery and a company of infantry.

"The ownership of this island, which commands the entrance to the harbor of Avlona, Albania, has long been a matter of dispute between Greece and Albania."

GEORGE F. WILLIAMS SEES MORE TROUBLE IN BALKANS.

Former Envoy to Greece and Montenegro Says Albanian Problem Will Embroil Neutral Nations.

New York, Oct. 31.—George Fred Williams of Boston, former United States minister to Greece and Montenegro, whose criticism of the European powers for their conduct in Albania led to a request for his resignation early in July, arrived in New York today.

Mr. Williams said that he was not forced to resign but he admitted that the statement attributed to him was undiplomatic, and he, therefore, tendered his resignation and is now on his way to Washington officially to sever his connection with the diplomatic service.

"I had to make the statement that I am charged with," continued Mr. Williams. "It was my last cry for freedom and justice for Albania before the nations of Europe began to fly at one another's throats. Albania, surrounded by six powers, was in the hands of usurpers who had no business there and who were setting one religion against another.

"I have been told that Italy and Greece have entered Albania, and if they have it means a fight to the finish. When Essad Pasha went to Albania, it was understood that he was backed by Italy. With Turkey now in the field, armed against the allied powers, it means that the Balkans will again become a seething caldron."

FEDERAL JURY INDICTS UNION PLUMBERS AS TRUST.

Fourteen Members of City, State, and National Association Accused by Salt Lake Panel.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Oct. 31.—Indictments charging members of the city, state, and national master plumbers' associations with having operated for the last three years in restraint of trade were returned by the federal grand jury for the District court of Utah against fourteen master plumbers of Utah and Colorado today.

The indicted plumbers were placed under a bond of $250 each for their appearance when the court convenes Nov. 9.

All except Chris Irving, president, vice president, and director of the National Association of Master Plumbers, are Utah plumbers and hold some office in one or more of the three organizations.

JAP AND BRITISH FLEETS HAMMER TSING-TAU PORT

Warships, Masked by Mist, Go Close In; Some of Defenses Destroyed.

TOKIO, Oct. 31.—The navy department announces that the Japanese squadron, assisted by English warships and masked by a mist, approached and vigorously and effectively bombarded the forts at Tsing-Tau on Oct. 29. Some of the defense works were destroyed, and on the next day the bombardment was repeated. Only the northeast fort replied to the bombardment.

The funnel of a gunboat was shattered by the Japanese shells.

The Japanese-British-Indian troops are reported to have captured another outlying fort near Tsing-Tau, and to be attempting to take the entire position by a series of assaults. Every effort is being made by the Japanese to take the city, and advices received today say that already a good portion of it has been destroyed by fires set by the exploding shells.

Squadron Hunting the Emden.

Meanwhile a flying squadron, comprising the swiftest cruisers of the Japanese fleet, has been dispatched to search for and destroy the German cruiser Emden, which is raiding Japanese and British shipping in the Indian ocean and that vicinity. The Japanese cruisers assigned to this task are faster than the Emden, and unless the latter is able to make a neutral port and is interned by its commander, officials at the admiralty believe it will be sunk within the next few days.

Pekin Confirms Bombardment.

PEKING, Oct. 31.—A wireless message received in German circles here from Tsing-Tau declares that the naval bombardment of the German position in Kiau-Chau began today, but makes no mention of a land attack. On the other hand, a Japanese report declares that both a naval and a land attack are now being pushed against the German position.

For several weeks the Germans have been maintaining a heavy artillery fire in their attempts to delay the work of intrenching and gun mounting by their antagonists, but this fire eventually proved unavailing. The British forces occupy a position on the front of the attacking line.

Japanese Delay Storming Forts.

German officers in Peking say that Tsing-Tau could be captured quickly if the Japanese would storm it in force, but Japanese officials here are of the opinion that the forts must be silenced first.

A correspondent with the British force writes confirming the previous report that the Germans at Tsing-Tau purpose to destroy all government buildings in the city when surrender becomes inevitable.

HEAVY SEA HALTS RESCUE OF HOSPITAL SHIP VICTIMS.

Forty Survivors Still Aboard Rohilla, Many Clinging to the Rigging as Vessel Pounds on Rocks.

WHITBY, England, Oct. 31.—With a heavy sea breaking over the wreckage and a high wind baffling all attempts of rescuers to reach the stricken vessel, forty survivors of the hospital ship Rohilla were fighting for their lives late tonight. Fifty more men were saved during the day.

Since the vessel went ashore and broke in two during a gale, all on board have put up a brave struggle. Twelve bodies have been washed ashore. Despite the apparent hopelessness of the attempt, many jumped into the sea and endeavored to swim ashore. Several dived into the sea tonight and were dragged ashore safely, though unconscious from exposure.

The captain of the Rohilla signaled this afternoon that he would "hold on to the last." Many survivors can be seen clinging to the rigging, but rescuers have been unable to get a line to them.

MADERO KIN IN MEXICAN RACE

Runs for Job of Carranza, Who Is Ordered to Resign.

RIOT AT CONVENTION.

El Paso, Tex., Oct. 31.—Emilio Madero, brother of the martyred president of Mexico, will be a candidate for provisional president of Mexico before the peace conference now in session at Aguas Calientes.

This was the word received here tonight in dispatches from the convention city which told of the passage by the convention of a resolution ordering the resignation of Gen. Venustiano Carranza from the provisional presidency and his reduction in rank to general of a division in the army.

It is stated authoritatively, say the dispatches, that Dr. Miguel Silva also will be a candidate for Carranza's place. Both Silva and Madero are Villa adherents. The convention will name a new provisional president and cabinet.

Two Leaders Subordinated.

Under the resolution demoting Carranza both he and Gen. Francisco Villa are instructed to take orders hereafter from the new secretary of war, who is to be named by the convention. Neither Carranza nor Villa yet has answered to the convention whether he will abide by the mandate.

The convention later will consider the case of Gen. Emiliano Zapata, leader of the rebels of southern Mexico.

Disorder again has marked the sessions. President Antonio I. Villereal interrupted an address by Col. Gonzales Garza, personal representative of Gen. Francisco Villa, last night, calling the speaker a "liar" when he asserted that Gen. Venustiano Carranza had violated the peace agreement of Torreon.

Riot in Convention Hall.

A riot ensued, but in view of the order forbidding delegates from carrying firearms into the convention, the early restoration of order was possible. Col. Garza was demanding the enforced resignation of Carranza from the Mexican provisional presidency when the incident occurred.

Gen. Villa continues his military activities. He has ordered all rolling stock and motive power of the railroads he controls concentrated at Zacatecas for the movement of troops. Gen. Carranza also continues mobilizing below Aguas Calientes.

FAREWELL DINNER CLOSES CALUMET CLUB FOREVER.

Nineteen Remaining Members Banquet for Last Time, Nail Flag to Staff and Lock the Doors.

Nineteen men in evening dress, buttoning their overcoats about them against the chill, stepped into Michigan avenue from a darkened building on the Twentieth street corner early this morning. The last of them turned a key in the lock, then tossed the key back over the transom.

The Calumet club, after forty years, had become a memory.

Up above the stars and stripes were nailed to the flagstaff on the clubhouse roof. Those who "sank with the ship" had substituted the nailed flag scheme for the less dignified proposition that they shoot out the lights with revolver bullets.

For many hours before the lonely nineteen left there had been a farewell party in the club's dining room. Out of the cellars came cobwebbed crusted bottles of wine which had been aging thirty years or more.

Those who were on hand to say good-by to the Calumet club were James M. Adsit, James E. Verree, Dr. T. A. Woodruff, J. D. Purdy, G. H. Taylor, Charles W. Emerson, W. T. Alden, Ralph C. Otis, Thomas R. Jenkins, Charles Cromwell, Richard P. Murray, E. R. Owens, A. J. Braun, J. F. A. Halbach, C. R. White, Ferdinand W. Peck Jr., Carl M. Williams, Dr. W. T. Gilmon, and Clinton Collier.

The building reverts to the bondholders.

AID OF AMERICA TO FEED BELGIANS ASKED BY ALBERT

King Says Many of His People Will Starve Unless Given Support in Winter.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—Albert, king of the Belgians, has asked the American people, through the American commission for relief in Belgium to help feed his starving people during the winter.

The king's message, written under fire in the battle before Dunkirk, follows:

"I am informed that American officials and citizens in Belgium and England are working to save my people from the horrors of the famine which now threatens them. Despite all that can be done the suffering in the coming winter will be terrible, but the burden we must bear will be lightened if my people can be spared the pangs of hunger with its frightful consequences of disease and violence. The whole hearted friendship of America shown my people at this time always will be a precious memory."

Hoover Tells of Needs.

The American commission for relief in Belgium is the only channel through which food can be introduced into Belgium. H. C. Hoover, chairman of the commission, which has headquarters in London, makes the following appeal to all American newspapers:

"We have received reports from members of this commission who were sent into Belgium. Their reports show that there are still some 7,000,000 people in Belgium. In many centers the people are receiving an allowance of a little more than three ounces of flour per capita daily.

"This is not a question of charity or relief to the chronically poor—it is a question of feeding an entire population. The situation affects the wealthy and well to do as well as the poor. It touches every home in Belgium. Our experts say that in order to avoid actual starvation Belgium must have every month a minimum of 60,000 tons of wheat, 15,000 tons of corn, 5,000 tons of peas or beans, and a limited amount of bacon or lard. All this will cost $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 monthly.

Need $2,500,000 a Month.

"A plan may be devised whereby such Belgians as possess property may give obligations to pay when the war ends, but even if we could realize on these obligations we must still have at least $2,500,000 monthly.

"During the last week we have received and expended $600,000, and yet this is only four days' supply. The problem is immediate. The Belgians are helping themselves, but they can do little. The British and French are under such strain that they also can do little.

"Americans must feed Belgium this winter. There never was such a call on American charity, and there never was a famine emergency so great."

RED CROSS LACKS MATERIAL TO CARE FOR THE WOUNDED.

Nurse in Great Britain Says Even if They Had Money Supplies Would Be Hard to Procure.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 31.—"We have 42,000 wounded in this little corner of Brittany alone," wrote a nurse at Val Fleuri, in a letter received today by Miss Mabel Boardman, chairman of the relief committee of the American Red Cross.

"Even if we had money," she says, "it would be impossible to buy the things we most need over here. One morning last week before 6 o'clock, 380 wounded men were brought here without warning. There were so few doctors that some of the men did not get their wounds dressed until the following day, and they had been traveling for four days. Some died.

"A friend sent word to me that she had sixteen dressings to do at once and not one bandage. We have no gauze for compresses, no anti-tetanus serum, and almost no alcohol. I have already many cases of pneumonia and bronchitis, but thank God no cholera or typhoid."

DRYS FEAR WETS WILL BE VICTORS IN LEGISLATURE

Number of Saloon Interest Candidates Alarms the Prohibitionists.

Strong fear is expressed in the final campaign statement of the Anti-Saloon league of Illinois, that the next state senate may be "wet."

"There are enough candidates nominated who are with the saloon interests to make possible one of the worst legislatures which Illinois ever has seen," is the warning issued over the signature of F. Scott McBride, state superintendent of the league.

The statement follows:

"The campaign for the election of members of the Forty-ninth general assembly has closed with the preliminary work in the best shape we have ever had it.

Many Dry Candidates.

"There were three times as many dry candidates nominated in Cook county as two years ago and a large increase downstate. With the general following by the temperance voters of the Anti-Saloon league indorsements, it will mean a legislature that will pass the county option and other legislation we are seeking.

"The hardest fight centers around the election of candidates for the state senate. There are twenty-six to be elected, of whom sixteen are from Cook county. The chances are the result of the election will be a senate with a very narrow margin. This result is rendered inevitable on account of there being two dry candidates in most of the districts against one wet. Therefore, it is doubly important that our constituency vote for men, regardless of party, recommended by the league."

These Men Recommended.

The legislative candidates indorsed by the Anti-Saloon league follow:

"Sweeping Victory" Forecast for All Candidates.

BY GARRETT DE F. KINNEY.

[Chairman State Republican Committee.]

OUR pollbooks show such a defection from the Progressives as would indicate the practical extinction of the Progressive party. In one county where Roosevelt polled 1,400 votes the county committee reported it was unable to find but thirty-two Progressives. In a county that gave 6,196 votes for Roosevelt in 1912 the county committee reported 307 Progressives.

The voters in all parties downstate have not been particularly pleased over the candidacy of Roger Sullivan. For the first time in history they have an opportunity to select their United States senator by direct vote. The people know that the contest is between Sherman and Sullivan.

The whole shifting of the week has been toward Sherman and in favor of the Republican ticket. Sherman should carry Cook county and will come to the Cook county line with 100,000 plurality. I believe that the entire Republican ticket will be elected. I think we will elect eighteen congressmen and seventy members of the Illinois house of representatives. Our polls indicate the election of sixteen state senators.

BY DAVID F. MATCHETT.

[Chairman of the Republican County Committee.]

THE Republican county committee has made a more complete canvass of the county than ever before. We have taken 344,000 total votes as a basis of computation. Of this number we claim that the lowest vote cast for a Republican candidate will be 160,000 votes.

We have given a total vote of 125,000 to the Democratic ticket, 35,000 votes to the Progressive ticket, 25,000 to the Socialists, and have made liberal allowances for scattered and illegal ballots.

From these figures it will appear that by the lowest estimate, based on accurate and painstaking canvass of the county, the Republican county ticket for which men alone vote will be elected by a plurality of 25,000 votes. I believe that the final count will show a very much larger plurality, but we prefer to err on the side of conservatism.

Allowing a loss of 20 per cent of the registration, there will be a total women's vote of 120,000 votes. The best information that we can get warrants us in stating that the Republican ticket will receive not less than 60 per cent of the women's votes. That is also a conservative estimate.

There is no doubt that the great majority of Republicans who left the party in 1912 have returned. Quite apart from the fact that there no longer is reason for the existence of a third party, we have abundant evidence that Progressives have realized that in this campaign it is of vital importance to make their votes count.

The big job in this campaign is to rescue the government of Cook county from the Democrats and all good citizens will bear this fact in mind.

I look for a Republican landslide.

BY ARTHUR W. CHARLES.

[Chairman Illinois Democratic State Committee.]

WE can safely estimate that Mr. Sullivan and the state ticket will receive 80 per cent of the vote cast for Gov. Dunne and the state ticket in 1912, and that the vote for Sherman and Robins will be approximately 70 per cent of the vote cast for Deneen and Funk. All indications are that there will be but little difference between the vote of Sherman and Robins. This makes it safe to figure on Sullivan having a lead of 75,000 to 100,000 over his leading competitor, the size of his plurality being dependent upon the relative strength of the two opposing candidates.

The other candidates on the Democratic state ticket will run right up with Mr. Sullivan and will receive approximately the same plurality he does.

We are also certain of electing enough state senators to control the upper house of the legislature and the chances are in our favor for the election of a majority of the members of the lower house. The Democrats have in the field a total of eighty-four candidates for the legislature, as against eighty-seven Republicans and fifty-five Progressives. We are practically certain of electing all or nearly all of our candidates.

BY HAROLD ICKES.

[Manager Progressive Campaign in Cook County.]

FIRST—The Progressive ticket is, in fact and in the general opinion of the well informed, by far the best offered to the voters by any political party.

Second—Public realization of this truth has crystallized so rapidly within the last week that the result is no longer in doubt.

The plurality of Raymond Robins in Cook county for senator over Mr. Sullivan will be not less than 60,000. Alexander A. McCormick will run up with Robins, and the entire Progressive ticket will have a safe margin. Not only will our county ticket win but the Progressives will make notable increases in their local delegations to congress and the state legislature.

Thousands of votes will be brought to the whole ticket by the presence upon it of Miss Harriet E. Vittum and Miss Mary E. McDowell, who are the only women nominated at the primaries of any party. The indorsements given to both the women and men nominees by nonpartisan organizations and individuals prominent in the older parties emphasizes the high standing of our candidates.

In view of the Republican fiasco of two years ago, when the G. O. P. managers claimed everything for Taft, Deneen, Rinaker, and the rest of their ticket, only to be disclosed as idle boasters on election day, no consideration should be given the hollow Republican claims at this time. Recognizing their own desperate condition the while they boast, the Republicans are trading off Sherman in return for votes for Northup, Powell, and Litzinger in an eleventh hour attempt to save something from the wreck.

BY MEDILL M'CORMICK.

[Of Robins' Campaign Committee.]

THE Progressive forecast published Saturday morning papers stands. Mr. Robbins will carry Cook county by 60,000 over Mr. Sullivan, and by 90,000 or 100,000 over Mr. Sherman. Mr. Robins' plurality in the state outside of Cook county will be between 20,000 and 30,000. Mr. Robins' total plurality over Mr. Sullivan will be in the neighborhood of 90,000. Mr. Sullivan will lead Mr. Sherman by a few thousand votes. There is a veritable rush of independent voters to Mr. Robins. Progressive Democrats by thousands and Republicans in large numbers are going to vote for him. In Chicago and in some of the larger cities of the state Mr. Sullivan will receive notable support from stalwart Republicans. The fact that three Republican United States senators and a Democratic senator, upon the record of the three candidates in Illinois, should be for Mr. Robins is evidence of the independent uprising and has been profoundly influential.

BY A. J. SABATH.

[Chairman Cook County Democratic Committee.]

COOK county will give President Wilson either three or five more votes in congress and will elect a full set of Democratic county officials, who will be ready to aid the president in 1916.

It will roll up a tremendous plurality for Roger C. Sullivan, the Democratic candidate for United States senator, which will assure his election regardless of how the rest of the state goes.

It is certain to replace Republican congressmen from the First and Ninth districts with Democrats. It may elect Democrats in the Second and Tenth districts. The Democrats will hold all the seats they now possess.

The candidates on the Democratic county ticket will all be elected by pluralities which will range from 40,000 to 75,000. A majority of the women's vote will be cast for the Democratic candidates.

OFFICIAL INSTRUCTION: HOW TO CAST YOUR VOTE.

Election Commissioners Explain Way to Mark Ballots for Legislators and County Board Head.

Instructions to judges and clerks, issued yesterday by the board of election commissioners, warn against the "plumping" of votes cast for any candidate on the ballot except for representative in the general assembly. Special instruction is given as to the counting of votes for this office in instances in which a straight ticket has been voted. The instructions read in part:

"A cross in the party circle and a cross in the square before the name of a candidate for representative in the general assembly is three votes for that one candidate and one vote, of course, for candidates of all other offices under that party circle."

The vacancies on the Republican ticket are referred to as follows:

"There are vacancies in the Republican column for two offices—president of the county board and for one county commissioner. In this case a cross in the Republican circle and a cross before any other party candidate for president of the county board and a cross in the square before any one candidate for county commissioner of any other party counts as follows:

"1. One vote for the candidate or candidates individually marked.

"2. The regular party vote for the entire Republican ticket, including one vote for each one of the nine candidates for county commissioner."

ROBINS' FINAL WORD TO VOTERS

"Battle Is Won," He Says; "Consult Your Conscience as You Vote."

FLAYS BIPARTISANISM.

BY RAYMOND ROBINS.

The last campaign bomb has been exploded. All day Friday reports from the Democratic citadel announced a new attack was to be launched against the Progressive candidate. Friday night the charge was fired, but it came from the Sherman camp.

A better example of the unity of the two old party machines would be hard to find. The Sullivan forces made a demonstration upon our right and the Sherman forces led the real attack. The old row in the school board is again paraded before the public. The significant details disregarded, there was a sincere disagreement, engendering many bitter words, over educational policies which now have been accepted and are being carried out by Mrs. Young.

Nails Eleventh Hour Attack.

No eleventh hour calumnies can cloud the issues of this campaign. The man who waits until the day before election to present a charge against his opponent stamps himself as unworthy the support of honest men. I have made my charges in this campaign and I stand by them. I shall not add to them at this late day. My opponents have had three months in which to read every page of my open record to the people, and their eleventh hour bomb, their most vicious attack of the campaign, has been to quote those who, in the heat of honest disagreement with me and my coworkers, called me names.

If there are any more bombs to be announced by Sullivan and fired by Sherman or announced by Sherman and fired by Sullivan we can rest assured there will be little execution. The public knows too well that cowardly eleventh hour attacks are the last resort of the desperate politician striving to save himself from inevitable defeat.

Points to Wilson's Silence.

We are now at the close of the campaign. The bipartisan combination is beaten. The plan to make either Sullivan or Sherman senator for the benefit of the gas and electric companies and other special interests in Illinois and the nation has been exposed. The people are aroused and determined to defeat the Sullivan-Sherman combination. President Wilson's silence upon Sullivan, while writing letters for obscure congressmen, is eloquent repudiation of Sullivan's claim that the president wants him in Washington.

Mr. Sherman is the pathetic figure of the campaign. Deserted by his old cronies, who prefer the direct boss to the shining servant, he is stranded upon his island of cynical partisanism, fighting this straw man and shouting the old party cries to unwilling ears.

The defeat of Sullivan and Sherman is inevitable, not merely because of Ogden Gas and the Allen law, but because Sherman and Sullivan have gone on as they begun—the friends of privilege; enemies of the public interest—Sullivan open and bold; Sherman furtive and timid.

"Consult Your Conscience."

Consult your memory and your conscience. Sullivan and Sherman have been obstructive and destructive, but never constructive. Never in the history of the state has either of them stood forward to widen the popular control of government, through primaries and women's suffrage, through the initiative and referendum or by constitutional revision, until the movement for reform had won and their support then was mere submission to necessity.

"Battle Is Won"—Robins.

The battle is won. Nothing can now alter the fixed intention of the people to destroy the bipartisan machine and regain control of their own government.

We are finishing the most thorough campaign ever made for progressive principles in Illinois. All the parties will be more representative and progressive as a result of this campaign of education.

Strenuous as it has been, I count my share in this battle of the first direct election of senator of the United States for Illinois as the best service of my life. It is now up to the free voters of this state. We are confidently awaiting their answer.

WOMEN HOPEFUL IN MANY STATES

Mrs. Antoinette Funk Tells of Nebraska, Montana, Dakotas, Missouri.

BITTER FIGHT IN OHIO.

BY MRS. ANTOINETTE FUNK.

The suffrage campaigns in the seven states this year present different aspects from those waged in times gone by. Perhaps the principal reason for this is that where heretofore the matter of opposition has been more or less disorganized, or, rather, unorganized and sporadic, this year presents a very unusual and a very significant situation.

A small organization of women, 10,000 or 15,000 perhaps, who call themselves antisuffragists, or those opposed to women suffrage, have given their names to all of the organized forces of evil and greed that have always opposed our cause, and those interests are supplying money, speakers, and organizers to defeat the suffrage resolutions submitted this fall. In spite of this enormous organized activity the work of the suffragists has gone on apace. The old prejudice seems to have vanished. The enemy now is inertia or indifference on the part of the people.

Sees Victory in Nebraska.

It is extremely probable that the state of Nebraska will carry the suffrage amendment. The women are wide awake. The issues are well defined and clearly drawn. The liquor interests are in the open against the passage of suffrage legislation, but the women are organized into a fine fighting unit, and their leaders confidently expect to carry the state by between 5,000 and 10,000 votes.

The two Dakotas are suffrage strongholds. Owing to many facts—the preponderance of Scandinavian citizens being one reason—both states are practically prohibition. In North Dakota, however, it is necessary that the resolution carry by a majority of the highest number of votes cast. No such state resolution has ever carried yet, but it is confidently expected that a majority vote on the proposition will favor suffrage. If this transpires a constitutional amendment will be submitted amending the constitution and making the legal majority the majority of the votes cast for the measure.

A marvelous fight has been waged in Montana. The liquor interests and Amalgamated Copper are back of the anti-suffrage movement and will fight to the last ditch, but the men of the state, so far as can be ascertained, are strongly in favor of the suffrage amendment.

Nevada is a wonderful state, much larger than Illinois, with a population of a little over 100,000 and only 18,000 voters. Of these, 15,000 are conceded to be socialistic. Suffrage in Nevada appears to be a foregone conclusion.

Missouri Breaks Record.

Missouri has been a record breaker. Although there is doubt about whether the measure will carry, it was taking the war into the enemy's country, and the amount of propaganda and education that has been accomplished by this campaign is almost beyond belief.

In Ohio the situation is extremely complicated. The largest initiative petition ever signed was signed for the submission of this measure. The liquor forces are organized antis, working with machinelike precision against the passage of this bill. The state is literally plastered—along railroads and every available public place—with "Vote No for the Suffrage Amendment." It is a hand to hand tussle between the onward marching army of democracy and intrenched interests backed up and controlled by organized politics. Regardless of what happens in Ohio at the elections this fall, the campaign is big in results.

BIG LOSS BY COAL STRIKE.

Colorado Fuel and Iron Company Reports Drop in Earnings of $1,221,320 for Year.

Denver, Colo., Oct. 31.—A decrease of $1,221,320 in the net earnings of the fuel department of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company during the fiscal year ending June 30 was attributed mainly to the coal miners' strike by President J. F. Welborn in his annual report, made public today.

WORTHY COUNTY CANDIDATES GET "TRIBUNE'S" O. K.

City and Sanitary Board Aspirants Who Should Get Your Vote Listed.

Elsewhere in THE TRIBUNE are printed its recommendations for the various county offices. Nothing, in the judgment of THE TRIBUNE, is of more vital importance to the people of Chicago and of Cook county than the personality, capability, and potential efficiency of the men who will be placed in control of the county positions of trust by the elections of next Tuesday.

Partisan lines are brushed aside and merit alone is the sole consideration in the recommendations which THE TRIBUNE makes at this time to the voters of Cook county.

These Are Recommended.

Herewith is presented a summary of the qualifications and history of the candidates who are included within the list of recommendations to voters made by THE TRIBUNE:

CLERK OF APPELLATE COURT.

Franklin S. Catlin, the Republican nominee, is recommended by THE TRIBUNE because it is essential to centralize a vote which will defeat James S. McInerney, Democrat, former city prosecutor. The Progressive nominee is Louis A. Boening. Mr. Catlin lives in the Twenty-fifth ward, and was for two terms one of the "young bloods" on the Republican side of the house of representatives which had much to do with shaping the progressive legislation of the last two sessions. He is a lawyer of good personal and professional reputation.

SHERIFF.

Frederick S. Oliver, the Progressive nominee, is indorsed by THE TRIBUNE. He is in the real estate business and has lived in Chicago for forty years; was president of the Chicago real estate board in 1912, and is president of the real estate firm of Oliver & Co.

He had a conspicuous part in the preliminary campaign for Theodore Roosevelt for the Republican nomination for president, and was intensely active in the organization of the Progressive party. He has a very high standing in business circles, and never has been a candidate for office.

George K. Schmidt, former alderman from the Twenty-fourth ward, is the Republican nominee. John E. Traeger, former collector of the town of Lake, former coroner, former city treasurer, and now city controller by appointment of Mayor Harrison, is the Democratic candidate.

COUNTY TREASURER.

Charles S. Peterson, Progressive, is indorsed by THE TRIBUNE for county treasurer. Mr. Peterson has lived in Chicago since 1895, and is highly esteemed by those who know him. For several years he was the owner of Hemlandet; is president of the Peterson Linotyping company, and was president of the Swedish Club of Chicago for six terms.

He has agreed to make public monthly reports of the receipts of his office, where the money is deposited, and promises to turn over all interest to the city. He is now the chairman of the finance committee of the board of education.

His Republican opponent is Edward R. Litzinger, a well known and highly respected attorney, with an excellent record as a former alderman from the Fifth ward. Henry Stuckart, Democrat, is a former city treasurer and a former alderman. The Municipal Voters' league condemned his aldermanic record.

COUNTY CLERK.

Robert M. Sweitzer, Democrat, ending his first term in that office, is recommended by THE TRIBUNE for reëlection. He had no part in politics until four years ago, and for seventeen years was one of the responsible officials of the John V Farwell company. Mr. Sweitzer has lived in Chicago since his birth, forty-five years ago. He instituted a system of efficiency and service in the office which has secured the commendation of those who have had occasion to look it over.

The Republican nominee is Ald. Lewis D. Sitts, who has been one of the high grade members of the city council. Charles F. Thoma is the Progressive candidate.

COUNTY JUDGE.

John E. Northup, the Republican nominee for county judge, has the unqualified recommendation of THE TRIBUNE. Since June, 1913, Mr. Northup has been the special state's attorney in charge of the investigation of the vote frauds alleged in the election of 1912, and because of the thorough, relentless, and conscientious method of handling the investigation has earned the enmity of all of the bad elements in Chicago politics.

He is a graduate of the Illinois College of Law and was assistant state's attorney under John E. W. Wayman. All of the anti-Northup elements are centralized behind the candidacy of Thomas F. Scully, Democrat, who won his nomination in the primaries by a similar combination. He is a former assistant city prosecutor, member of the legislature and of the city council. In the council he was repeatedly condemned by the Municipal Voters' league. William Prentiss is the Progressive nominee.

PROBATE JUDGE.

Noble B. Judah Jr. is indorsed by THE TRIBUNE for probate judge. Mr. Judah's public experience was as a member of the Illinois legislature in 1911, where he made an excellent record of independence and constructiveness, rapidly becoming one of the leaders of the young and new element at Springfield. He is an alumnus of the Northwestern University Law school and was strongly indorsed for the probate judgeship by the vote of the Chicago Bar association.

Henry Horner, attorney for the board of assessors and former south town collector, is the Democratic candidate. Albert M. Kales, member of the faculty of the Northwestern University Law school and known as one of the ablest lawyers in the city, is the Progressive nominee.

CLERK PROBATE COURT.

Matthias A. Mueller, Republican, is indorsed by THE TRIBUNE. He is in the real estate business in the Twenty-ninth ward, which he represented for three terms in the city council, securing a high grade voting record. He was born in Germany in 1865 and has lived in Chicago since 1883. He has been conspicuous in the Deneen Republican organization in the town of Lake.

John A. Cervenka, the present probate clerk, is renominated by the Democrats. Edward Vail was nominated by the Progressives.

CLERK CRIMINAL COURT.

Robert R. Levy, Republican, is indorsed by THE TRIBUNE for this office. Mr. Levy has lived in Chicago since 1874 and has an exceptionally wide business and personal acquaintance. He is a druggist on the South Side and is president of an important moving picture company.

Frank J. Walsh, the present clerk of the court, was renominated by the Democrats, with a good official record. Samuel Keller, an attorney, is the Progressive candidate.

COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT.

Edward J. Tobin, Democrat, the present incumbent, is indorsed by THE TRIBUNE for reëlection as county superintendent of schools. He has been very much "on the job" during the four years he has been in office, directing particular attention to the needs of the rural schools, which he has brought to a high state of efficiency.

J. E. Lemon of Blue Island is the Republican nominee. The Progressive candidate withdrew in Mr. Lemon's favor.

BOARD OF ASSESSORS.

Adam Wolf of the west side and William H. Weber of Blue Island, the retiring members of the board of assessors, are indorsed for reëlection by THE TRIBUNE. Under the law, it will be necessary to elect one of the members from the country towns and one from Chicago. Mr. Weber has been on the assessors' board since its organization in 1898, his services never having been criticised during that period. Mr. Wolf has been a member of the board for the same period, with a never varying record of efficiency and fairness.

The Democratic nominees are Dennis J. Egan, former legislator and alderman, and C. R. Walleck, from the country towns. The Progressive candidates are Walter C. Bruce, alderman of Blue Island, and Lewis M. Smith of Chicago.

BOARD OF REVIEW.

THE TRIBUNE makes no distinction between the three excellently qualified candidates for the board of review, Towner K. Webster, Progressive, of Evanston, Isaac N. Powell, Republican, former city treasurer and former chief clerk of the board of election commissioners, and Frank S. Ryan, present county controller and chief clerk of the board of county commissioners.

SANITARY DISTRICT TRUSTEES.

Wallace G. Clark, George W. Paullin, and Harry E. Littler, the three Republican nominees recommended by the county union, are indorsed by THE TRIBUNE. Mr. Clark and Mr. Paullin are ending their terms, and Mr. Littler was nominated in place of Paul A. Hazard. Mr. Clark is a member of the real estate firm of Clark & Trainor. Mr. Paullin lives in Evanston, having an extensive fur business in Chicago. Mr. Littler, a present alderman from the Twenty-eighth ward, is president of the Chicago Pie company.

Trustees Paullin and Clark have carried the brunt of the fighting waged during the last three or four years against the Democratic majority in the drainage board, attempting to stop the wild-eyed methods which have marked the conduct of sanitary district affairs since the business administration of former years was put out of control by Democratic victories.

The three Democratic nominees are Patrick J. Carr, present alderman from the Fifth ward; Timothy J. Clohesey, publisher of the Chicago Review; and Martin J. McNally, said to be one of the richest saloonkeepers in the country. If elected these three would be in entire sympathy with the present Democratic majority on the board.

One of the Progressive nominees, Andrew J. Martin, has made a particularly energetic campaign and has extraordinarily strong support from organized women, who have the right to vote for sanitary trustees. Mr. Martin is a manufacturing printer, with the highest class of personal and business indorsements. Walter Raster and Edwin W. Sedgwick are the two other Progressive candidates.

PRESIDENT COUNTY BOARD.

Alexander A. McCormick, Progressive, has the complete indorsement of THE TRIBUNE for reëlection as president of the county board, on the strength of the independent and fearless administration of that office during the last two years in the face of tremendous and relentless opposition from the Burg-Bartzen combine against him and the Progressive-Moriarty minority.

Mr. McCormick has lived for the greater part of his life in Chicago and has made an intensely personal study of local conditions affecting the charities service of city and county, a knowledge which he carried into the office and was largely responsible for the modern and humane policies upon which he insisted in the county institutions.

He was nominated by the Republican primaries, and by the decree of the Supreme court was compelled to withdraw from either the Progressive or the Republican ticket, choosing to remain as the Progressive. The Republican vacancy was not filled.

The Democrats nominated against him Peter Reinberg, former alderman and now the president of the Chicago board of education.

MEMBERS COUNTY BOARD.

THE TRIBUNE indorses for the ten members of the county board from the city districts the ten candidates recommended by the County union:

Alexander A. McCormick, Andrew M. Anderson, Mary E. McDowell, and Harriet E. Vittum, Progressives.

Peter Reinberg and Daniel Moriarty, Democrats.

Charles H. Wilson, William J. Roberts, George W. Hanson, and Herman A. Ott, Republicans.

For the five commissionerships from the country districts, THE TRIBUNE recommends:

William Busse, Republican.

Harley B. Mitchell, Ellsworth M. Board, Avery M. Coonley, and Shelby M. Singleton, Progressives.

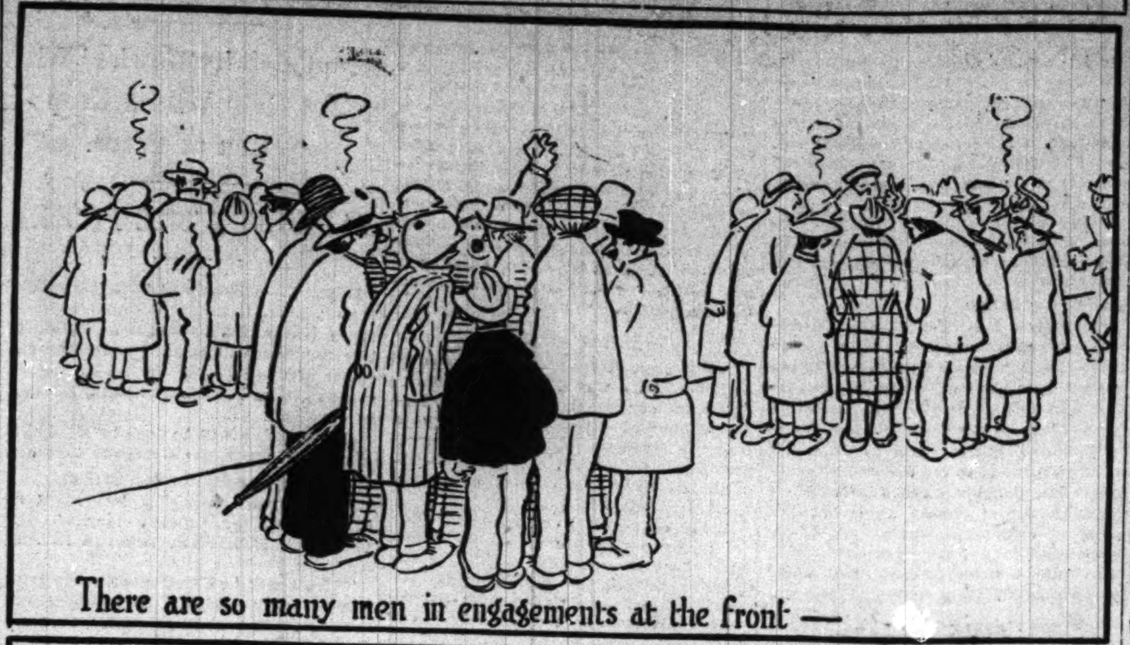
MUNICIPAL COURT JUDGES.

For the ten places for the full terms as Municipal court judges, THE TRIBUNE follows the recommendations as made by the vote cast in the bar primary of the Chicago Bar association, as follows:

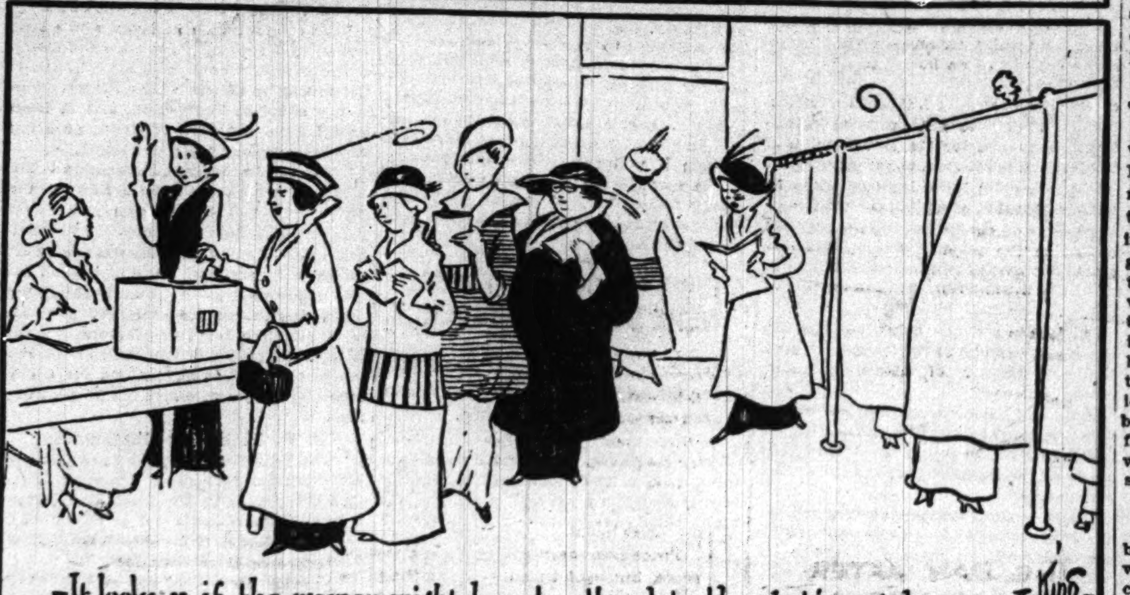
Charles N. Goodnow, Republican.
Sheridan E. Fry, Republican.
Samuel H. Trude, Republican.
Arnold Heap, Republican.
Joseph Z. Uhlir, Republican.
Hosea W. Wells, Republican.
Frederic Burnham, Republican.
Frank H. Graham, Democrat.
John Stelk, Democrat.

For the vacancy THE TRIBUNE follows the same course in recommending Charles L. Billings, Republican.

EFFECT OF THE WAR.



There are so many men in engagements at the front —



-It looks as if the women might have to attend to the duties at home.

SANITARY LAW DEPARTMENT CALLED "PUBLIC SCANDAL."

Trustee Paullin Charges Drainage District Maintains an Excessive Staff of Attorneys.

"The wanton extravagance in the management of the law department of the sanitary district is a disgraceful public scandal," charged Sanitary Trustee George W. Paullin last night at a Republican rally at Harvey, Ill.

"Show me a private corporation with annual expenditures of $8,000,000 a year that would keep a regular, permanent staff of twenty-six attorneys, six investigators, five stenographers, and one clerk in its legal department, and then, in addition to that spend tens of thousands of dollars each year for special counsel. It is ridiculous. Such a concern would go bankrupt from the burden of its law department alone.

"The monthly pay roll of the law department, including the suppressed staff, whose names do not appear on the published roster, amounts to $9,000 a month to attend to no more work than the law department formerly accomplished with a pay roll of $3,500 a month.

"Conditions in the sanitary district are so deplorable that they cry aloud for a remedy—that it does not seem possible that a thinking people should tolerate such a reign of spoils, greed, and mismanagement."

PALOS PARK TO BE A VILLAGE.

Women Outvote Men in Election on Incorporation of Suburb—Project Wins, 82 to 72.

Voters of Palos Park approved yesterday the proposition submitted to them to incorporate the town as a village by a vote of 82 to 72. It will be conducted under a commission form of government. The women made a better showing than the men, casting 82 votes to the men's 72.

ROBINS' SCHOOL RECORD DEFENDED BY JANE ADDAMS

Hull House Leader Denies Progressive Was Faddist and Dreamer on Board.

Jane Addams yesterday issued a formal statement, defending the record of Raymond Robins, Moose candidate for United States senator, at the time he was a member of the Dunne school board.

"I speak of Mr. Robins and his school board work only as a citizen of Chicago and as one of his colleagues on that board of education," Miss Addams said. "I have noticed in today's newspapers that Mr. Robins and his confreres are being characterized as 'disturbers,' 'radicals,' 'faddists,' and 'dreamers' by orators who are not of Mr. Robins' political faith. I also notice these campaign speakers are reading from the Chicago newspapers of that time to give a bad light to Mr. Robins' work as a school board member. I suggest that the thoughtful citizen recall that the Chicago papers of that day were virtually all opposed to Mayor Dunne and the so-called Dunne school board majority. Whatever those newspapers may have said then should be interpreted from that viewpoint. Mr. Robins, in my opinion, never was a disturber while a member of the board, nor a dreamer, nor a faddist, nor anything else of that kind. He was a faithful, hard worker for the schools.

"He and the rest of us endeavored to branch out a bit to the end of obtaining wider views as to school management and curriculum. We endeavored to have questions vitally affecting the schools publicly discussed at board meetings. We also invited university professors to talk to us in open meetings so that we and the public could profit by this expert advice. It was Mr. Robins' aim and the aim of the rest of us who were fighting the cause together to take such steps as would most effectually aid the school children and the school teachers.

"When that school board came into being, it inherited a suit from the board immediately preceding, instituted by school teachers for higher pay. Our view was that the teachers really deserved higher pay in most cases, and so that suit was nolle prossed and our board members straightened out that tangle.

Has Executive Ability.

"In this connection I like to recall the old City Homes' association. That was a homeless man body and Mr. Robins was made secretary of it. This association had to deal with homeless men, with men out of work and down on their luck. Any one of any experience can realize that this work demands the highest order of executive ability. Mr. Robins in this field handled a delicate and difficult task with great skill, patience, and thoroughness.

"He showed executive ability of a high order. It was this good work on his part that laid the foundations for the municipal lodging house, which he conducted so successfully."

White House Wires Crossed; Wilson 'Indorses' Progressive

A mixup in the White House "indorsement" bureau at Washington on the eve of the election caused alternate joy and sorrow yesterday for John C. Vaughan, Progressive candidate for congress in the Second district against Congressman James R. Mann.

It also caused alternate sorrow and joy for M. B. O'Leary, Democratic candidate for congress in the same district.

It appears that President Wilson desired to indorse Mr. O'Leary in his fight on Mann and wrote a telegram to that effect. But in getting the telegram on the wire some one made a mistake and had it sent to Mr. Vaughan, with the result that Mr. Vaughan was one of the happiest persons in Chicago for several hours.

Corected by Tumulty.

It was not until late in the day that the mistake was discovered at the White House, and then followed a telegram to Mr. Vaughan, apprising him of the mistake and requesting him not to make use of the telegram.

At the same time Mr. O'Leary received a telegram from Secretary Tumulty, notifying him that the telegram sent to Vaughan was intended for him, and now Mr. O'Leary is is high fettle over the president's personal indorsement of his candidacy.

The following telegram from Secretary Tumulty to Mr. O'Leary explains the mixup:

"Have just sent following telegram to the Hon. John C. Vaughan: 'If you have received telegram from the president expressing interest in your candidacy please make no use of it, as it was erroneously addressed to you.' The president has indorsed the Democratic candidate, Mr. O'Leary."

Vaughan Issues Statement.

Mr. Vaughn submitted the following statement on the case:

"Because of my personal friendship and intimate acquaintance with President Wilson during his primary and election campaigns here, I wired him as follows on Oct. 27:

'If not inconsistent with your views and policy, please telegraph me a letter of indorsement in my fight against James R. Mann in the Second Illinois district. While I am on the Progressive ticket, so far as the anti-Mann fight is concerned, you know my position in your primary and election fight and I have not changed as to supporting your policies.'

"Not receiving a reply on the 28th, I asked the Western Union for a reply and on the night of Oct. 30, at 7 p. m., I received a reply, as follows, signed by the president:

"'May I not upon the eve of election send you my greetings and express my earnest hope that you will be sent to my support by the people of your district.'

Sends Out Copies.

"I immediately circulated copies of the above in the district. Shortly after 1 o'clock on the 31st I received the following telegram, signed by Secretary Tumulty:

"'If you have received telegram from the president expressing interest in your candidacy, please make no use of it, as it was erroneously addressed to you. The president has indorsed the Democratic candidate, Mr. O'Leary.'

"Because of my former acquaintance with the president and my belief in the intent of the indorsement as shown on its face, and being a direct answer to my request, I tried to verify or disprove by long distance telephone, but have been unable to reach the president direct. Because of this printed matter being in circulation, I cannot withdraw it, but herewith make to your readers a full statement of the matter.

"If the president had intended to indorse the Democratic candidate, would he not have done so long before this, and not in direct answer to a telegram from me?"

LABOR CHIEFS INDORSE CUNNEA FOR COUNTY JUDGE.

President and Secretary of Chicago Federation Issue Statement Urging Election of Socialist.

John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and Edward N. Nockels, secretary of that organization, yesterday issued a signed statement in support of William A. Cunnea, the Socialist candidate for county judge.

This is the first time the federation officers have issued a strong signed indorsement of a Socialist candidate. The indorsement expresses their personal views.

The statement follows:

"Trade unionists of Cook county will make no mistake in giving their support to William A. Cunnea in his candidacy for the office of county judge.

"He has ever stood ready and willing to aid the trade unions in their struggle for better conditions.

"His loyalty to the cause of labor is not questioned by any who know him.

"In 1912 Cunnea was elected state's attorney, but was defrauded out of the office by an organized combination of the worst political workers of Chicago.

"In William A. Cunnea, as judge of the County court, organized labor of Cook county will not only have a loyal friend, but his ability, as proved in past years, convinces us that he will administer the affairs of the County court wholly in the interest of the common people of the county of Cook."

"Auto Thief" Shot in Foot.

Arthur Smith, 18 years old, of 6217 South Marshfield avenue, was shot in the left foot early yesterday by Policeman Ernest Johnson when he and three companions were attempting to steal an automobile from the garage of James B. Snider at 1714 West Sixty-third street. Smith and his companions, Dennis Anderson, William Ryan, and Stanley McFarland, were arrested.

NORTHUP GIVEN O. K. BY MOOSE

Seventh District Progressives Indorse Republican Candidate for Judge.

SCULLY A "CALAMITY."

The Seventh district Progressive party organization yesterday swung into line for John E. Northup, Republican candidate for county judge.

At a meeting in the Hotel La Salle, at which were representatives of the Moose organization from all wards and country towns of the Seventh district, resolutions were unanimously adopted holding that it would be a calamity to elect Judge Scully to this important post. Because of the three cornered fight the resolutions set forth that all good citizens interested in good government should forget party labels and vote for Northup as the sure way of defeating Scully.

These Resolutions Adopted.

The resolutions follow:

"Whereas, The Republican party has recently performed a real service to the community and to the Progressive party by refusing to fill the vacancy on its ticket caused by the withdrawal of A. A. McCormick and uniting on him as the Progressive candidate; and,

Bad Judge a Calamity.

"Whereas, The Seventh congressional district Progressive organization believes that it would be calamity if the election machinery were controlled by a political judge and further believes that the present is an opportune time for the Progressive party to perform a service similar to that of the Republican party in the interest of good government.

"Therefore be it resolved, That we, the Seventh congressional district Progressive party organization, urge the voters of this county to unite on John E. Northup, the Republican, in order to defeat Thomas F. Scully, and thereby secure honest elections in this county."

VOTE REPUBLICAN TO SAVE NATION, SHERMAN PLEA

Blames Democratic Free Trade for Jobless Men and Boosts Protection.

by the companies here to supply the trade. The American wage scale of $22, compared with the $7 in Scotland or the $8 in Germany, compels the American sewing machine manufacturer to use the imported article to supply his trade.

Under a Republican protective tariff we imported in July, August, and September, 1913, $99,368 worth of glue. In October, November, and December, 1913, the first three months of the Democratic free trade tariff, we imported $429,912 worth of glue. In January, February, and March, 1914, $667,715 worth. This is at the rate of over $2,000,000 imports per annum. This takes the work away from the men on the pay roll in an important industry in Chicago.

A single freight road in Illinois has returned eighty leased engines to their respective owners and has thirty of its own engines idle in its roundhouses. The decrease in tonnage has killed its freight trains.

The Mount Vernon Car works feels the depression in 1,400 men out of employment when it shut down. There is practically nothing in car building lines but repair work. The idle train crews are recruits to the army of idleness.

Says Farmer Suffers.

The farmer suffers the natural results of the Democratic tariff. His corn and oats meet with competition from Canada and South America with a resulting low price. The manufacturer and workingman have sunk to the level of the greatest depression known since the Democratic administration twenty years ago.

The ability to earn wages or conduct business has been enormously impaired. The high cost of living has mounted upward. The Democratic tariff act has done nothing but cruelly to cripple the earning power of the American people and send the necessities of life to still higher figures.

The soldier on the five hundred mile ttle line in Europe is economically bet r off today than the unemployed man h a family dependent upon him, facing frosts of winter. The warring nations s the sea care for the soldier and his and orphans, if he never returns. weapons in his hands.

Faces Greater Enemy.

American workingmen's hands mpty and idle. He is helpless in ace of a greater enemy than armed ons at war. It is harder to starve in idleness or to see dependent ones in want than to fight.

Our export trade shows temporary gains in certain lines. Meats, breadstuffs, harness, saddles, cavalry equipment, barbed wire, motor trucks, and the like are sought by the warring nations. Peace is the only basis for a permanent prosperity. War is temporary. It is unnatural. Peace is the natural condition of mankind. When the embargo on imports is removed by peace in Europe they will again flow in increased volume through our custom houses.

The end of the demand for war supplies will again reduce our exports until the balance of trade will be against us. The natural effect of the Democratic tariff act will recur instantly upon the suspension of the European war.

Sees Exports End After War.

The war's end will come. Some army will yield. Destruction or exhaustion is inevitable under the modern methods of warfare. With the resumption of peace the conscripted armies of Europe will return to the factories. Our export trade will cease at the same time they begin to flood our markets with their merchandise.

A great majority of the American voters are protectionists. If the protectionists divide, the free traders win. If enough votes be cast for a third party ticket by protectionists, it continues the Democratic tariff act and defeats the vital belief of the protectionist voter who supports a third party ticket.

The utter hopelessness of the election of the third party ticket is so clear as to amount to an absolute demonstration in view of admitted facts.

In the Seventh congressional district of New Jersey the Democrats in 1912 cast 10,810 votes; in 1914, 5,240 votes. In 1912 the Republicans cast 5,349 votes, and in 1914, 10,620. In 1912 the Progressives cast 11,701 and in 1914 they cast 719 votes. The Democrats lost 51 per cent of their votes the Progressives lost 94 per cent, and the Republicans gained 98 per cent.

In the Maine election the reports of the September, 1914, election are equally conclusive. The Democrats in 1912 cast 51,113 votes; in 1914, 61,832. In 1912 the Republicans cast 26,545 votes, and in 1914, 58,497. The Progressives cast in 1912 48,493 and in 1914 17,860. The Progressives lost 65 per ent of their vote. The Republicans ained 120 per cent. These are actual ections.

The direct primary figures are equally convincing. In the 1912 election the Republicans in Minnesota cast 64,334 votes. In the primary of 1914 they cast 195,295 votes. The Progressives in the 1912 election cast 125,856 votes; in the 1914 primary, 2,896 votes. The Progressives lost 97 per cent and the Republicans gained 208 per cent. Minnesota is an agricultural state.

Gives Pennsylvania Data.

The Republicans in Pennsylvania in the 1912 election cast 273,305 votes. In the 1914 primary they cast 332,265 votes. The Progressives in the 1912 election cast 447,426 votes, and in the 1914 primary, 46,782 votes. The Progressives lost 88 per cent and the Republicans gained 21 per cent. Pennsylvania is a manufacturing and mining state.

In Illinois the Republicans cast 253,618 votes in the 1912 election, and in the primary in 1914 cast 210,935. The Progressives in the 1912 election cast 386,478, and in the 1914 primary cast 25,043 votes, or a loss of 93 per cent.

The Republicans polled at their primary 83 per cent of their election vote of 1912, while the Progressives polled less than 7 per cent. Illinois is an agricultural, manufacturing, and mining state.

Says Moose Are Vanishing.

These figures prove conclusively that the Progressive party cannot win. In many counties of this state it has entirely disappeared. The only protectionist members of congress who can be elected are Republicans. The Progressive candidates can do no more than to elect Democrats. A vote for a Republican is a vote for protection and prosperity.

The Republican protectionists turned the government over to the Democrats in 1912 because of a division over the rules in force in the national convention. Those rules have been abolished by a resolution of our national committee. That resolution has been ratified by the required number of Republican conventions in the several states. Rules for the next and succeeding national conventions reduce the southern representation to a fair basis and recognize and adopt the primary laws of the several states as the valid method of electing delegates to a national convention. No further cause of dispute exists.

His New Bill.

I have framed and introduced in the senate a bill regulating presidential nominations. Its purpose is to secure by law for all political parties the justice embodied in the amendment made by the resolution of the Republican national committee. It recognizes and adopts the primary laws of the several states so that the voters of the district or state as the state law provides shall choose and instruct delegates to national conventions, such vote to be the credentials that entitle the delegates to their seats beyond the power of the national committee to unseat them.

The principles of this bill since its introduction have been adopted by the Republican national committee in the amendment of the rules governing the Republican national convention of 1916 and thereafter.

U. S. Power in Election Frauds?

The wholesale frauds in election, especially in Chicago in 1912, led me to prepare and introduce a bill giving the United States courts power to protect the election of senators and representatives in congress by appointing supervisors of elections with power to purge poll lists and to inspect the conduct of elections to the end that fair elections of such officers be had. I believe this is a justifiable exercise of national authority to preserve from pollution the election of members of congress.

The civil service laws in the United States or in this state are worthy of preservation and extension in all reasonable ways. Partisan administration of such laws has weakened and made some lose their faith in the principle. The federal income tax employés and others in recent legislation ought to have been included by the Democratic party in the civil service laws. They were, however, sent to a spoils basis by the affirmative action of that party. I believe in constructive legislation advancing the law properly to cover every branch of public service where applicable.

Favored Direct Senator Election.

Long before the constitutional amendment for the direct election of senators was adopted, I favored it. It will be recalled in 1912 it was one of the planks in my primary campaign platform. I voted in the Glass-Lee election contests from Maryland and Alabama to make the seventeenth amendment for the direct election of United States senators by the people immediately effective.

The other course would have postponed the operation of the amendment and permitted legislatures to have filled any vacancies made in the office of any sitting senators until the end of any such senator's term, and provided two methods of electing senators for the next five years. I was among the first of the senators to take this position, which resulted in a precedent that advanced the remedy intended to be applied by this constitutional amendment.

Defense of Allen Bill Vote.

Critics have attacked my vote on the Allen bill over seventeen years ago. I have uniformly made the same reply. If it were an error in 1897, I balanced the account in 1899. I was then speaker of the house of representatives. I appointed the committee having charge of street car legislation. The chairman of that committee and its members were told on appointment that a repeal bill for the Allen law must be fairly considered, reported out to the house, and thereafter put upon the calendar for roll call. It was done.

I personally amended certain parts of the repeal bill so as to conform to constitutional requirements. I was in the chair when it was taken from the calendar and put to a roll call by my ruling. It was my hand that directed the legislation that repealed it.

Why He Didn't Vote.

With it and nearly every other matter of important legislation during the eight years of the time I presided over either the house or state senate, I seldom voted. Presiding officers do not vote as a rule unless their vote be needed. I wrote many bills that have long been in the statute laws of Illinois. Others introduced them and they alone are known in the records.

Still every man knows that upon the shoulders of the presiding officer more than upon any other member of the legislature rests the entire burden of legislation. I have taken that responsibility. I have accounted for it to the people of Illinois. They have never failed to support me loyally in the face of such criticisms. If I were in error, that error has been more than corrected by the honorable part which my friends and myself took in its repeal.

Elected Six Times.

"I have since then passed through six elections, three district and three statewide. Each time I have met this criticism and been elected by the people. I have had no machine, no organization save that coming from confidence in me by many thousand voters in Illinois.

Bipartisan alliances are a hackneyed text. The Progressive party has been guilty of the most unjustifiable bipartisan alliances known in this country. At Springfield four out of the twenty-seven Progressive members of the legislature were constantly seeking a selfish combination. They designedly blocked for many weeks the transaction of business.

Cites Mueller Law.

Many good bipartisan alliances have been made in Springfield. Direct primary laws, civil service laws, acts of social justice have been passed by the joint vote of Republicans and Democrats.

Has Chicago forgotten 1903? A bipartisan organization for weeks blocked a roll call on the Mueller bill, which gave Chicago the right to own the franchises in her own streets. Is it not remembered that a proper bipartisan alliance was formed to reorganize the house? It succeeded.

Has Chicago forgotten that Gov. Deneen, then state's attorney; Carter Harrison, then mayor; my associates, and myself joined our forces, compelled recognition and a roll call on this measure to enable Chicago to secure her municipal rights? The criticism of bipartisan alliances fails to take note that people actuated by good motives in each party may combine to execute their purposes. Bipartisan alliances for good seem to have been overlooked in this campaign.

Compares Record to Moose.

The Progressive party occupies considerable time in telling what it will do for social justice. During the time I served in the legislature I wrote more bills for social justice which were enacted into laws than the Progressive party now promises in its platform.

The federal grain inspection bill would have destroyed the state inspection system in which are found primary markets for grain. It is for the benefit of the farmer that our inspection system in Illinois should be kept, but uniform standards should be fixed by the United States department of agriculture and uniformity be secured by requiring all state inspections to grade up to the standards fixed by the government.

The standards on corn have already been promulgated by the department of agriculture, and state inspections are grading up to those standards. I think I could successfully invoke the deliberate judgment of the Illinois utilities commission on this subject.

It favors uniformity of standards and grading to those standards, but does not favor the destruction of our state inspection systems and its transfer to a bureau at Washington, 1,000 miles away. It was both constructive and preservative.

My vote was in favor of the farmers and not against them in any instance.

I was raised a farmer. The first twenty-three years of my life, from early childhood, I labored on a farm. I think I know their life, their toil, and what they favor in the way of legislation. I am as intimately in touch with them as when I worked side by side with them in the field. I believe my vote, neither in the senate nor in the legislature, has ever been contrary to the welfare of the farmer either in Illinois or elsewhere.

Wilson's Failure to O. K. Sullivan.

The Democratic party's campaign cry is, "A vote for Sullivan is a vote for Wilson." It says he will hold up and strengthen the hands of the president. Up to this time President Wilson has given only a roundabout indorsement of his party's candidate for senator.

Sundry indorsements have been sent broadcast for other candidates for senator and for representatives in congress.

The omission directly to indorse the Democratic candidate in this state seems to be as significant as it is studied.

Single Tax Not a Diversion?

Single tax is not an intellectual diversion. Illinois had as well wake up on this subject now as later. In the minds of those who palliate this economic sin it may be regarded as a mental pastime. Those who believe in it are far from adopting this view. They are constantly endeavoring to change the constitutional law of the states.

The propositions submitted at many elections constitute the unanswerable proof of this. It is far from a harmless excursion into the realm of abstract theory. Those who lecture and paint it as the goal of all things desired are as earnest as misguided.

Its purpose is to confiscate private title in land by removing taxes from all other forms of property and placing it solely upon land values. This, in the language of Henry George, leaves the shell of the title to the private owner and gives the kernel to the government.

Activity of Single Taxers.

If this scheme is an intellectual diversion, it is difficult to understand why its disciples are continually placing before the people in various states proposed amendments to state constitutions, or why the initiative and referendum are so constantly employed for that purpose.

Refuge is taken in the federal constitution. It denies to congress the power to levy a direct tax upon land. Why quote constitutions when single taxers are concerned? Are constitutions not all arrant trash? Are not such charters fetters upon a pure democracy? Ought the rule of the multitude be restrained by a piece of parchment on which are written some words limiting the absolute rule of a factious and often temporary majority?

Single Tax Conference.

The fourth annual single tax conference of the United States on Jan. 16, 1914, went on record as committed to the following amendment to the federal constitution:

> Congress shall have power to levy and collect a direct tax on land values, without apportionment to the several states and without regard to any census or enumeration.

If a candidate were, as happens to be the case, on the advisory committee of the Joseph Fels single tax commission, it must be of some consequence in this campaign. It is a deliberate, well planned, amply financed, persistently followed purpose of confiscating the private ownership of land in this country.

I believe in a revision of the tariff on protective lines. Rates ought to be high enough but no higher than necessary to protect our wage scales and the American standard of living.

I believe in a tariff commission of reasonable men whose power and duty shall be to obtain accurate information as the basis for legislation. A nonpartisan expert who has not decided the case before he investigates it is a rather difficult creature to find, but reasonable men whose chief purpose is to see the wants, weakness, and dangers affecting the whole country may be found. Evidence taken when no campaign clamor is on will address itself to the good sense of the American people more forcibly than under present methods.

For Anti-Trust Laws.

I believe in an enforcement of the anti-trust laws and their amendment so as to make certain to an honest man what he may or may not lawfully do—stability and certainty and rest from the harassing disturbing influences of threatened legislation are needed for the recuperation of the legitimate business of the country.

I believe child labor laws ought to be advanced within every lawful exercise of the power of congress. Other laws that humanize the relation of employer and employé ought to be enacted as rapidly as developments and remedies can be worked out.

I believe in strict economy in appropriations and the end of the so-called "pork barrel" method of obtaining public money.

River and harbor appropriations should be made only after a thorough and impartial investigation and a favorable report made by the engineer corps of the United States army.

I believe the existing agencies and departments of local, state, and federal government must be utilized as means of bringing together without cost the persons wanting work and those wanting work done.

I believe that the shortening of the ballot and simplifying primary laws are subjects of state rather than national legislation. The tendency to clog the ballot, weary the public by frequent elections, multiply issues and questions to be placed on the ballot, and confuse and perplex the honest expression of public opinion is a menace to republican government. Representative government insures more justice, stability, and tolerance than constant turmoil and resulting weariness and disgust that are a real danger to popular government.

I believe in an act of congress to regulate the nomination of candidates for president. The plan that adopts the local law of the state seems to be best to attain the end desired. The people are familiar with their own state election laws, and they can exercise under them their governmental power more wisely than an attempted code made by congress.

I believe in the usefulness and integrity of political parties. No better method is known for collection and directing of the opinion of men on public questions. Party responsibility is direct and can be known and fixed. The destruction of parties could produce nothing but chaos and misrule. The scattered power would at last be gathered in the hands of one man. That man would be the greatest of political bosses and dominate instead of leaving it on the vital issues to the body of the voters now affiliated with the respective parties.

Increase of Navy.

The prompt increase of our navy equal to the nation's wants and the strengthening of our coast defenses and land forces are imperative. Our present condition is intolerable and a constant menace. As one step in this direction the concentration of army posts is a practical move not to be overlooked.

Above all, let it be remembered there is no psychology in an empty dinner pail. There is only despair. The Republican party from the days of Lincoln has preserved personal rights, administered justice, given us orderly development by sane and progressive laws, protected our own people at home and abroad, given our own markets to our wage earners. It promises no impossible, revolutionary, or lawless program to any of our countrymen. It will create and give all an opportunity to earn a living by honest toil. It will disperse the great army of the unemployed; it will turn every idle factory into a recruiting station of industry, and march forth to a new era of prosperity, with peace at home and an extended commerce abroad.

SHOWS M'CORMICK TAXES WERE BOOSTED SUDDENLY.

Peter Reinberg, Opponent Candidate for County Board Presidency, Infers Assessment Dodging.

Peter Reinberg, Democratic candidate for president and member of the county board, addressed several meetings last night. He read excerpts from records of the county collector showing that in eighteen months Mr. McCormick's personal property tax payments increased more than 1,000 per cent.

Mr. Reinberg's statements were based on the figures taken from the records which are as follows:

Year.	Owner.	Property value.	Personal tax.	Per cent inc.
1911.	A. A. McCormick..	$333.00	$16.81	.....
1912.	A. A. McCormick..	500.00	22.00	39

From these figures Mr. Reinberg drew the inference that prior to 1913 Mr. McCormick might not have been paying his proper quota of taxes.

Flagman Drops Dead.

James Metcalf of 731 Chicago avenue, Evanston, a flagman for the Northwestern Elevated railroad, was found dead on the floor in his dining room last night.

SULLIVAN ENDS STATE CAMPAIGN

Says Calamity Howlers Will Not Help Wilson Keep Nation at Peace.

TALKS FOR THE TICKET

Roger C. Sullivan will bring his speaking campaign to a close in Cohan's Grand opera house this afternoon at 2 o'clock. The meeting will be held under the auspices of the Building Trades Council of Chicago, with President Simon O'Donnell in the chair.

The speaking will be done by Mr. Sullivan and Congressman George E. Gorman.

Sees Landslide for Ticket.

Mr. Sullivan, speaking last night at Forest park, predicted a landslide for the entire Democratic ticket in Illinois. He said:

"There will be a Democratic victory in Illinois next Tuesday. The Democrats of the state will elect Roger Sullivan United States senator; they will elect two Democratic congressmen at large and a state ticket, and they will send a solid Democratic congressional delegation to uphold the president of the United States. That is my absolute conviction, and in times past I have not been regarded as a bad hand at reading preëlection signs.

"We, the Democrats, have made a campaign of which we have a right to feel proud. It has been clean and direct. Our end has been to arouse the voters to the realization of the importance of the issues before them. And we have had the people with us—not merely the Democrats, but the people at large. We have used all our efforts to promote the welfare of the people of Illinois, and the people know it. We have stood for a constructive program, which the people know also.

G. O. P. Object Obstruction.

"The Republican campaign has had obstruction for its object. From its inception it has been half-hearted, unconvincing, and almost pathetic in the effort of those making it to arouse an enthusiasm they did not feel themselves.

"General Mendacity has been in charge of the Bull Moose campaign. But no one ever gets very far under his leadership.

"Our country is prosperous—the most prosperous nation on earth today; our prosperity has been kept because our peace has been kept.

"The calamity howlers ask you to send them to Washington in the name of prosperity. I tell you that the bare act of electing a congress hostile to the president would be to endanger prosperity. So upon every patriotic citizen rests a double duty for next Tuesday—to go to the polls and vote, and to vote for the only candidates whose election will assure prosperity—myself for United States senator and the Democratic candidates for congress throughout the state."

TODAY or Election Day

If you have not already seen our subdivision at Sixty-third street and Western Avenue, extending over the largest area of any subdivision in Chicago, spend a couple of hours with us Sunday or Election Day, and let us show you just what we have to offer you.

If you are interested in buying a home, or if you are looking for a safe investment, where the value is bound to increase, let us show you our property. We have been making sales right along in spite of war and there is no better time to buy than today. All we want you to do is to visit us and let us show you this property and its great possibilities.

This property is located along Sixty-third Street, the greatest cross-town street in the world, passing nineteen main trunk line depots, and running between Western and Kedzie Avenues—two of the greatest north and south streets of Chicago passing through the heart of the great west side and the central manufacturing district.

It has unexcelled transportation facilities, no lot being farther than two blocks from one of the main lines of transportation with a five-cent fare to all parts of Chicago.

All street improvements are in and paid for, including water, sewer and gas, and stubs for the same to curb line, and sidewalks and asphalt-macadam paving.

The building restrictions protect all residence streets from any frame buildings; no building in the subdivision can cost less than $3,000; the business section is centered, and there is a uniform set-back of 15 feet from the building line.

The future great growth of the southwest is assured, it being the only available territory remaining that is accessible to both the inner and outer belt line and water transportation, which can be had at reasonable prices for the location of diversified manufacturing industries.

Let us point these facts out to you on the property. You will not obligate yourself in any way by paying us a visit, and even if you do not buy we should be glad to have he opportunity of showing to you the greatest subdivision in Chicago.

IS YOUR HAIR RIGHT FOR THE NEW FALL STYLES?

You will delight in arranging your hair in the new and interesting modes of this season if you keep it perfectly soft and fluffy so that it appears naturally heavy. This will be a simple matter if you use the right shampoo. It is not advisable to use a makeshift but always use a preparation made for shampooing only. You can enjoy the best that is known for about three cents a shampoo by getting a package of canthrox from your druggist; dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and your shampoo is ready. After its use the hair dries rapidly with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its lustre and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.—Advertisement.

Cadillac Eight-Cylinder Enclosed Cars

We are beginning deliveries this week and will shortly be receiving our usual monthly allotments.

In character and finish the new Cadillac Enclosed Bodies are as distinctive as the Eight-Cylinder chassis on which they are mounted. They are of all aluminum construction with cast aluminum top and frames. The uncut velvet upholstery and the inlaid Circassian walnut panels are a notable departure in interior finish. There is more than usual room inside these bodies and the disappearing extra seats add much to comfort and convenience.

But the restful comfort of these Eight-Cylinder Cars is what you will most appreciate. There is absolutely no vibration or sound to suggest the presence of an engine. Gear noises are needless, because gear changing is practically unnecessary. The Cadillac "8" will run slower than two miles an hour on high gear, and accelerate very quickly. This flexibility, combined with the moderate wheel base, makes it a remarkably easy and responsive car to handle in thick traffic. Open cars are $1975 F. O. B. Detroit. Enclosed cars as follows:

The Berline Limousine
Seven passengers. Three on extra wide rear seat. Two disappearing seats. Driver's compartment enclosed so a sixth member of the party may sit in front. Window between front and rear compartment may be dropped out of sight. Price $3600 F. O. B. Detroit.

The Standard Limousine
Seven passengers. Same arrangement as Berline except that driver's compartment is not enclosed. This is car illustrated above. The rear compartment is unusually large and the disappearing seats fold out of the way, permitting comfortable entrance and exit. Price $3450 F. O. B. Detroit.

The Sedan Limousine
Five passengers all in one compartment. The ideal enclosed car for the family who may do their own driving. Wide rear seat for three. Both front seats comfortably upholstered. Aisle between. The same high class construction as in the larger limousines. Price $2800 F. O. B. Detroit.

The Landaulet Coupe
The smartest enclosed car for the family of two or three. In summer the rear half of the top may be folded back and yet it may be instantly raised in case of need. Americans who have traveled much abroad were quick to appreciate the exclusiveness in this type last season. Now it is here to stay. Price $2500 F. O. B. Detroit.

Now on Exhibition Here: the Various Standard Parts of the Cadillac V-Type Eight-Cylinder Motor

Many have remarked to us that the inside of the "Eight" would be mighty interesting. So we arranged this exhibition of parts to show how the "Eight" is actually being built. Come and see it. This exhibit is interesting to all—not only because of the new type of motor—but because it shows that the workmanship on Cadillac cars is of the highest quality. It shows that the workmanship the Cadillac organization puts into eighty cars a day is even superior to that of the maker of only a few cars a day.

ALL PROMISE THEY WILL WIN FOR SENATE

Sherman, Robins, and Sullivan End Campaign with Big Claims.

The Illinois senatorial campaign—the first to be settled by direct vote of the people and the most significant since the battle of the giants in 1858—is at an end.

If any man among the campaign managers and expert politicians connected with the general staff of any of the three battling contestants knows what the result is to be on Tuesday, he is concealing it behind a mass of claims, figures, and guesses.

Forecasts Wide Apart.

Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman's reelection is claimed by the Republican politicians by a "landslide" plurality running above 100,000. That is, they say he will come to Cook county with 100,000 and that he will "carry" Cook in addition.

The Progressive claim made in behalf of Raymond Robins is that he will sweep the state, winning by 90,000. They aver that this figure is based on close, detailed reports by counties.

Roger C. Sullivan's election is claimed by the Democratic managers over "his leading competitor by 75,000 to 100,000." They give Sherman a lead of 60,000 downstate, showing thereby that they "expect to win in Chicago" by a huge vote.

Flood of Uncertainty.

The innocent bystander may pay his money and take his choice of this trio of preelection figures and then make his own guess. The chances are that his own private "dope" will be as close to the real result as the average of the campaign management.

The campaign terminates in a flood of uncertainty almost without precedent in Illinois political affairs. The one persistent note that has been heard during the last forty-eight hours has to do with an "old time Republican victory" downstate. Republican leaders from all of the fifteen downstate districts decline to argue the question, and stand on the assertion that there is to be a repetition of the 1894 affair, which left the Democrats without a solitary congressman in the entire state. This is largely the basis of a Republican optimism that concedes nothing and claims everything.

Moose Party Wiped Out?

Its foundation rests upon a self-alleged belief that the Progressive party has been wiped out, and that the vote for Raymond Robins in Chicago and downstate will not total 100,000.

The Progressive management concedes nothing of the sort, and there is a confidence at Progressive headquarters that reaches through the entire organization that Robins is in position to win and that he will be elected.

Roger C. Sullivan's expectation and hope are founded on an anticipated vote for Robins which will total around 175,000. The Progressive claim made in behalf of Raymond Robins is that he will win by 90,000 in the state.
000, thereby dividing the anti-Democratic vote hopelessly and permitting the election of Mr. Sullivan through an extraordinarily heavy total which he expects to obtain for himself in Chicago.

"What Will Cook County Do?"

"What will Cook county do?" is the big question that confronts the dopesters, and upon the result in the Chicago precincts, casting one-third of the entire vote in the state, depends the final answer, in all probability.

It is noted in all of the election eve guessing that neither Republicans nor Democrats grant to the Progressives a real chance to elect Robins. The Democrats profess the belief Robins may run second in Cook county, and this is quietly feared by the Sherman people. The Republicans are afraid Robins will run second downstate, and this is fondly hoped for by the Democrats.

Standpatters May Win.

Congressional fighting has been intensely bitter in only a few of the districts. "Uncle Joe" Cannon's management, William B. McKinley's lieutenants, and William A. Rodenberg's advisers are confident all three of the old guard, standpat leaders will be elected.

The Republican claim is that at least ten of the seats lost in the unpleasantness of 1912 will be regained, and some of the forecasters look for a stronger gain than ten. In Chicago the chief interest centers around the district now represented by James R. Mann.

PUTS QUERIES TO LITZINGER

Peterson, Moose Candidate for County Treasurer, Replies to Republican.

Charles S. Peterson, Progressive nominee for county treasurer, has made the following statement respecting the public declaration issued by —. R. Litzinger, the Republican nominee:

"Mr. Litzinger was disingenuous in his reply to my statement that he was evading the issues with respect to the office of county treasurer.

"Mr. Litzinger says he will turn back all interest and will accept, as compensation as county treasurer, only $4,000 unless the county board allows him more. The present county treasurer is accepting $10,500 per annum as county collector. What will Mr. Litzinger do with the 2 per cent inheritance tax collections? The present county treasurer, it is charged, has been holding out this amount on the public, estimated at $25,000 a year. Mr. Litzinger's statement that he will accept $4,000 salary as county treasurer does not cover these fees and $10,500 salary as collector, amounting to over $35,000."

Her Dog Stolen by Auto Women?

EVELYN STEERS

Miss Evelyn Steers of 219 West Sixty-sixth street on Thursday lost her pet poodle, Snooks. Ever since then school children, policemen, letter carriers, milk wagon drivers, butcher boys, and plain neighbors, under the guidance of Snooks' mistress, have been seeking him.

So far all Miss Steers' efforts and all her tears have yielded neither hide nor hair of Snooks. But there is a clew.

Toward dusk Thursday, as the story comes to the Snookless house of Steers, two silk clad women were seen trying to entice a reluctant but curious poodle in their electric motor. When the poodle, his curiosity satisfied, would have gone elsewhere, it is reported, one of the women reached out her silken arm and grabbed the dog to her bosom.

Then, ding, ding! went the electric on its way.

GEN. A. R. CHAFFEE AT POINT OF DEATH IN LOS ANGELES.

War Veteran of Long and Distinguished Record Has Disease Which Puzzles Physicians.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 31.—[Special.]—Gen. A. R. Chaffee is lying at the point of death at his home in this city. The physicians' statement tonight leaves no hope for the general's recovery.

Gen. Chaffee is suffering from a malady that has puzzled physicians. They say it is a species of typhoid fever, but not typhoid itself.

Gen. Chaffee was born in Orwell, O., in 1842. He has served in all the wars of the United States since that date, except the Mexican war.

He fought against the Indians and distinguished himself in the civil war. He commanded two divisions in Cuba, served in the Philippines, and was at the head of the China relief expedition.

SEND ABLE MEN TO LEGISLATURE, L. V. L. LAST WORD

Experienced Lawmakers Needed at Springfield to Handle Big Questions.

The final pre-election statement of the Legislative Voters' league, concerning the composition of the next Illinois general assembly, was issued yesterday from the league's headquarters over the signature of Clifford W. Barnes, president, and Ralph Ellis, secretary.

The "big" propositions which confront the next session at Springfield, and the important contests in some of the senatorial districts are indicated in the report.

The report reads:

"If the Forty-ninth general assembly is to solve the half dozen big governmental problems that Illinois has on its hands, the voters of the state must use discrimination in the choice of their lawmakers at next Tuesday's election.

"The percentage of able, experienced men who are asking to be returned to the assembly is smaller than usual, and their election is absolutely necessary if the citizens are to be given the legislative relief they expect. There are good men among the new candidates for the assembly, but efficient legislative veterans will be needed to organize the assembly and handle properly the big legislative questions.

Situation in Senate.

"In the senate especially a number of the old time leaders have dropped out. Untried men have become candidates in their places. It is of the greatest importance that the few senators who have made good records and who are seeking reëlection should retain their seats. Among these men might be mentioned Senators Frank A. Landee, Edward J. Glackin, and Willett H. Cornwell. All have made good records in the senate.

"Other senatorial nominees who have had legislative experience and whose election is extremely desirable are Morton D. Hull, Clayton C. Pervier, John M. Curran, John A. Swanson, and Thomas Chester Angerstein.

Hull an Authority.

"Representative Hull has been one of the house leaders for several sessions. No man in the assembly knows more of the legislative needs of the state, and he is an authority upon governmental subjects.

"Representative Pervier also is a house veteran who for nearly a decade has been an efficient legislator. Representative Curran is a student of legislative matters. His judgment and activity during the last session drew praises from his fellow house members. Mr. Swanson as a member of the house of the Forty-seventh general assembly showed legislative ability that is needed in the senate.

"Mr. Angerstein has had no legislative experience. He is an aggressive young man of character who has a good knowledge of legislative subjects. Voters of all parties in this district (the Twenty-ninth) are urged to support his candidacy to defeat P. J. Sullivan, one of the old time undesirables of the house, who is trying to break into the senate.

Medill McCormick Needed.

"Representative Medill McCormick, leader of the Progressives of the Forty-eighth general assembly, is one. He is by far the ablest legislative nominee of any party in his district. The state needs his services. Representative George H. Wilson, one of the Republican leaders, is another able man whose constituency should see that he is returned.

"Voters of the Sixth senatorial district should see that Representatives Joseph A. Weber and Charles S. Graves and former Senator William M. Brown are elected. Democrats should unite behind Weber to retire the undesirable Robert E. Wilson, while Republicans should back Brown to defeat William E. Anderson, Wilson's bi-partisan crony.

"Representative Norman G. Flagg, William A. Hubbard, James M. Etherton, Francis E. Williamson, and James A. Watson are others that are needed again next year in the house."

CALLS GOOD ROADS AID TO MAKING PERFECT CHILDREN.

Speaker at Milwaukee Congress Terms Highways Barometer of Country Youths' Efficiency.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 31.—"Perfect children are to be the greatest asset of humanity," said Mrs. Frank De Garmo of St. Louis in discussing "Good Roads and Child Welfare Movement" before the northwestern road congress at the closing session here today.

"It is indisputable," she added, "that perfect roads are an incalculable asset in determining the degree of mental, moral, and physical efficiency that a perfect child may attain."

Mrs. De Garmo pointed out that country children in this country were at a decided disadvantage in all those respects.

"They tell us," said Mrs. De Garmo, "that ancient nations built roads for war, that modern nations build them for commercial greatness and incidentally for war. Shall not the United States launch a movement to build good roads for a greater purpose than any of these—that of building good roads for perfect children?"

DEMOCRATS TO RULE CONGRESS, REPORTS SHOW

Party Likely to Retain Majority, Despite Gains by the Republicans.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 31.—[Special.]—While reports received in Washington from practically every state during the last week indicate that the drift in the congressional campaign has turned slightly in favor of the Republicans, they have not been substantial enough to demand a revision of the forecast printed in last Sunday's CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

That forecast indicated a Democratic majority in the senate of twelve to fourteen and a Democratic majority in the house of thirty to forty. Even though they are claiming everything, the managers of the Republican campaign privately admit that the Democratic majority will be in the neighborhood of twenty-five.

The Democratic managers likewise are making extravagant claims. In a statement issued tonight they will not admit any prospect of losses, although their present majority over all other parties in the house is 147, and their plurality over the Republican 167.

Democrats See Senate Victories.

The Democrats also make bold claims with regard to the senatorial contests. They announce that New York, Illinois, Connecticut, Kansas, and Ohio will certainly send Democrats to the senate in place of sitting Republicans. They expect an even break in South Dakota, North Dakota, Utah, California, and Wisconsin, and they have hopes in Pennsylvania and Iowa.

Democratic chances in New York are dwindling hourly, according to reports from that state. Gov. Glynn, up to a week ago, was looked upon as a sure winner. Today he is being pushed hard by District Attorney Whitman and the Republicans are claiming practically all of the congressional districts upstate and even a few in the city of Greater New York.

Democrats Sure of Control.

Getting away from these extravagant claims, it appears that the Democrats will win the house by a comfortable margin and increase their lead in the senate slightly.

Up to today the Democrats were waging their fight largely on President Wilson's personal popularity with the people. For weeks they have been using the president as their chief argument for the election of Democratic candidates for the senate and house. All the while President Wilson has been busy writing letters indorsing many of these candidates.

The president was particular not to indorse Roger Sullivan in Illinois and John Walter Smith in Maryland, however. Although these letters were looked upon here as merely formal communications, reports of their favorable reception in the districts throughout the country became so numerous that the president was urged to increase the number materially.

The present campaign throughout the country has seen many reversals of form.

Prior to the outbreak of the European war, the betting in Washington was about even that the Republicans would control the next house. When the war started, however, the situation changed in favor of the Democrats, largely because of President Wilson's outspoken stand for peace, coupled with his plea for support from the people. All reports received in Washington up to the last few days indicated that the people were willing to go right along with the president.

That there has lately been a change in the situation in some of the big states that make up the framework of the house cannot be denied by Democratic leaders. One Democratic leader claims that his party is certain to elect 215 Democrats.

Latest Drift Against Democrats.

This Democrat lists twenty-one districts as doubtful, but probably Democratic. Conceding the election of the twenty-one doubtful, this would give the Democrats 235 members, or a majority of thirty-seven. If, however, the Democrats fail to capture all of the doubtful districts there will be a very close division in the house.

An unofficial statement from Republican sources claimed the election of 198 candidates of that party. This is in agreement with one of the unofficial estimates made by a Democratic leader. This coincidence only tends to confirm the statement that within the last ten days the drift of sentiment has been against the Democratic party.

CALLS SULLIVAN SUGAR COATED; LABEL FALSE.

Carl Vrooman Says Farther Biscuit Man Stays Away from White House the Better.

Roger Sullivan was characterized as "an adulterated political pill, sugar coated and falsely labeled" by Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Carl S. Vrooman. He spoke in behalf of the candidacy of Raymond Robins at a mass meeting last night in the Oak Park high school.

"As assistant secretary of agriculture, it has been my duty to inspect food products," said the speaker. "If there were a pure food law to apply to politicians, I would have indicted Roger Sullivan long ago. He has appropriated many high sounding labels, but in spite of his sugar coating he is an adulterated product."

"As a Democrat, I denounce Sullivan as the betrayer of my party," he continued. "He secured his nomination through the 'steam roller' tactics of a minority, and is no more welcome by the party as a whole than he is by the rest of the people of Illinois.

"Friends of Roger Sullivan admit his past indiscretions, but declare that he was converted at the Baltimore convention when Wilson was nominated. His conversion is only a part of his sugar coating, and at heart he is still the same corrupt politician that he has been.

"He says that Wilson needs him to uphold the administration policies. As a member of the cabinet, I wish to say that the farther that Sullivan stays away from the White House the better the president will be pleased. Sullivan, in all his political career, has never championed a progressive, humanitarian measure. What assurance have the people that he proposes to keep his word now?"

Famine

is unknown in the United States. There may be widespread crop failures—but there is always food for all and the rise in prices is never large.

The reason for these fortunate conditions is The Cold Storage Industry—Uncle Sam's Refrigerator. It does the same for the nation that the ice box does for the housewife, but on a larger scale and in a more scientific and sanitary manner.

If it were not for cold storage, it would hardly pay farmers to gather eggs in the spring, while in the winter they would sell for upwards of $3.00 a dozen and be a luxury, even for the rich.

We Ask a Fair Deal

Scientists and government officials have given the cold storage industry enthusiastic praise because of its twin services in keeping food in a sanitary, healthy, wholesome condition, and in keeping prices down while preventing famine or scarcity.

Yet there is an unreasoning, ignorant public prejudice against cold storage goods. To overcome this and to show our faith in the merits of modern cold storage, we Chicago business men are placing this series of advertisements in The Tribune telling

The Truth About Eggs

We ask the grocer to label the fine, large, clean, wholesome eggs that he gets from cold storage as "Cold Storage Eggs." We ask him to sell them for what they are, and we ask the public to buy them for what they are.

If this is done, we are willing to stand by the verdict—for we know that it will result in free and increased purchasing of cold storage eggs by the public this winter and the winters to follow.

CHICAGO WOMEN THINK. They keep posted. They make their husbands leave THE TRIBUNE at home every morning so they can keep posted. And their husbands get other Tribunes at the corner stand.

ORIGINAL DEFECTIVE

WOMAN IN DAZE BEGUN ROBBERY STORY, IT IS SAID

Negro's Statement Mrs. Steinhaus Gave Him Gems Partly Substantiated.

THE TRIBUNE, in common with the other newspapers, printed a story Thursday morning about an alleged attack on Mrs. Eva Steinhaus, wife of the orchestra director at the Wilson theater. It was stated in the story that Mrs. Steinhaus was found lying in an alley by the De Luxe theater with bruises on her face. Her jewels had been stolen in the attack, the story stated.

When the attack was reported Detective Stephen Barry immediately went to the rooms of Ernest Gatewood, a negro employé of the De Luxe theater, and arrested Gatewood, charging him with attacking Mrs. Steinhaus and taking her jewels.

Sleuth and Husband Source.

The facts on which the story was based were furnished by the City News bureau. Detective Barry and the husband of the woman who alleged she was attacked gave the story to the City Press bureau. Barry is responsible for that part of the story which stated that the negro started to escape and was prevented by the detective drawing his revolver and threatening the negro.

Steinhaus told the City News bureau reporter that his wife had been attacked as she passed the alley, choked and robbed.

THE TRIBUNE has investigated the story, and the story of Steinhaus and Barry cannot be substantiated entirely.

Found by Earl Waters.

Earl Waters of 4518 Clifton avenue found Mrs. Steinhaus walking on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul tracks near Wilson avenue about 11:30 Wednesday night. Here is the story he told about finding her:

"I was on my way home and saw a woman walking along the railroad tracks. She was walking unsteadily and seemed as if she was in a stupor. I saw that she was in no condition to be walking on the railroad tracks alone. A train might hit her. I asked her if I might help her. At first she didn't want me to help her. Soon, however, she asked me if I wouldn't et her diamonds, which some negro had tolen.

"I asked her where she lived, and she old me somewhere on Beacon street. he guided me to the residence on Beacon eet, and I took her to the door and the bell. A man who said he was Scheuerman came to the door and the woman in. Then I notified the ter in a restaurant near the De theater said that a woman answer- Mrs. Steinhaus' description had purased three drinks in the restaurant about 10 o'clock Wednesday night.

The negro, Gatewood, was a trusted employé of the De Luxe theater. He is left at the theater at night to guard the receipts which have been taken in after the banks close. His story, which has been substantiated so far as possible, follows:

"A woman appeared at the rear of the theater about 10 o'clock; maybe a little later, and started on to the stage. I stopped her and asked her what she wanted. She said she was sick and wanted a place to lie down. I told her there wasn't any place in the theater. She insisted she had to lie down. I then told her that the only place that I knew was my room upstairs in the back of the theater. She went up there. Soon I heard her walking around and making a lot of noise.

"Taking Her Rings Off."

"The show was going on and I couldn't let her disturb the show. I went to the room and she was taking her rings off. She said she wanted me to keep them for her. I put them in a cigaret box and put them in her handbag, which I laid on a shelf. Then she went away.

"When the police came they asked me about the jewelry and I got it just where I had put it when she left it. I never intended to steal it and never asked her to leave it. She insisted that I keep it for her."

40 SMALLPOX CASES IN ZION.

Waukegan Fears Infection and Plans to Ask for Guards About Voliva's City.

Waukegan, Ill., Oct. 31.—[Special.]—Dr. Crawford of the state board of health today admitted he knows of at least forty cases of smallpox in Zion City, this number having developed since two weeks ago when the first eight were located by him. Among the victims is Theodore [illegible], a deacon of Voliva's church. Commissioner of Public Safety Carl Atterbury [illegible] expressed great fear for Waukegan because of the failure of the Zionites to observe quarantine rules. CLAYTON MARK MUST FACE TRIAL

Clyne Ends Delay of Case Against Former School Head and Chauffeur.

AUTO KILLED SOLDIER.

After slumbering in the files of the United States District court for two years and nine months the manslaughter case against Clayton Mark, former president of the board of education, and Carl Styberg, his chauffeur, will soon be called up for trial.

District Attorney Charles F. Clyne took steps yesterday to dispose of more than 300 criminal cases pending on the docket of the United States District court. Many of these cases, among them the indictments against Clayton Mark and Styberg, have been pending several years on account of the rush of business and the lack of a sufficient number of judges, it is said.

Grosscup Seat Never Filled.

The vacancy in the District court created by the promotion of Peter S. Grosscup to the Circuit Court of Appeals has never been filled. The importance of disposing of the mass of old cases was shown during the day by the conference held on the subject by Judges Landis, Carpenter, and four out of town judges.

The conference was held in Judge Carpenter's chambers in the federal building, the out of town judges having been called in by Presiding Judge Baker of the Court of Appeals to have cases assigned to them and assist in the work of clearing the docket.

The out of town judges who attended the meeting were Judge Wright of Danville, Judge Humphrey of Springfield, Judge Geiger of Milwaukee, and Judge Sanborn of Madison, Wis. All pending cases will be distributed among these judges, who will all sit at Chicago at various times during the present term.

Auto Killed Private.

The indictment against Clayton Mark and Carl Styberg was returned by the federal grand jury on Jan. 29, 1912. The defendants are charged jointly with manslaughter as the result of running over with an automobile and killing James Durney, a private in the United States army, on the post grounds at Fort Sheridan July 8, 1911.

Mark and his chauffeur were driving along the Waukegan road in the post grounds, according to the indictment, at the "unreasonable speed of thirty miles an hour." Private Durney was crossing the road and failed to see the swiftly approaching machine. He was knocked down and the wheels of the car passed over his head and body.

Attorneys Herrick, Allen, and Martin represent the defense. A question of federal jurisdiction was raised before Judge Landis, who ruled that the federal courts have jurisdiction because Fort Sheridan is a federal reservation.

Escaped Insane Patients Caught.

Three women patients who escaped from the Chicago State Hospital for the Insane at Dunning Thursday night were caught early yesterday. One of them, Miss Anna Veath, returned of her own accord. The others were Mrs. Clara Church and Miss Patience Clem.

ALIENATION SUIT LOSER TO JAIL

Dr. Englert Held for Nonpayment of $5,000 to Husband.

SAYS HE'S FUNDLESS.

Another "star boarder" yesterday was added to Jailer Davis' "debtors' table" at the county jail. He is Dr. Victor I. Englert.

Henry I. Kors has deposited $4 for the payment of the doctor's board at Jailer Davis' "hotel" for at least a week or until the former Edgewater physician or his friends pay over $5,000 in satisfaction of a judgment obtained by Kors against Dr. Englert for alienating the affections of his wife. Dr. Englert's cell mate is T. P. Keyes, a forced guest at the county "hotel" at the request of Miss Clauzen Van Dam, who asserts he defrauded her in a theater deal.

The arrest of Dr. Englert at the Chicago Eye, Ear, Nose, and Throat hospital is the latest chapter of a sensational divorce and alienation suit which occupied the attention of a branch of the Circuit court during April, 1913.

Gmelin Also Named.

In his suit for divorce Kors charged that his wife had been indiscreet in her actions with Eugene C. Gmelin, president of the Art Glass company, and with Dr. Englert, who had been living at the Kors home as a boarder. After being granted a divorce by Judge Dever Kors started suit against Dr. Englert, who was said to have a large practice in Edgewater, charging that the physician had won away the affections of his wife.

A verdict for $5,000 was awarded Kors in the Circuit court. Dr. Englert appealed the case to the Supreme court of Illinois. A recent opinion of this court affirmed the verdict of the lower court and ordered the $5,000 judgment paid.

Attorney E. A. Moran, who represented Kors, said he had difficulty in finding Dr. Englert to arrange for a settlement of the judgment.

Moved Many Times.

"Englert moved four times during the last week and we were compelled to put private detectives on his trail before we could locate him," said Attorney Moran. "We propose to keep Englert in jail for the full limit allowed by law, six months, unless the judgment is paid."

At the county jail last night Dr. Englert said he is resigned to his fate and is prepared to stay out the full six months that the law designates he may be held in jail.

"There is absolutely nothing I can do," said the doctor. "I am without money and have no one to whom I can turn to help me in this difficulty. As I declared when Kors' suit against me was first tried, I am the victim of a grudge nursed against me by a man who has lost his wife through no fault of mine."

Geographic Society Holds Luncheon

Travelogues on Switzerland during the mobilization and interesting parts of North America, formed a program at the annual postvacation luncheon of the Geographic Society of Chicago in the Hotel La Salle yesterday. Paul J. Goode, Dr. Rollin T. Chamberlin, Mrs. John C. Bley, and E. K. Warren spoke.

STANDARD OIL SUED UNDER THE "SEVEN SISTERS" LAW.

New Jersey Grand Jury Brings Action as Result of Recent Rate Cutting War.

New York, Oct. 31.—[Special.]—Indictments under the "seven sisters" act, charging violation of New Jersey antitrust laws, were returned against the Standard Oil company of New Jersey and the Gulf Refining company by the Hudson county grand jury in Jersey City. The act in question prohibits foreign or domestic corporations from owning stock in other companies. The papers will be served on the local representatives of the indicted concerns.

The indictments grew out of a cut rate war during the summer. The Standard and Gulf Refining companies cut the price of gasoline until it was down to 9 cents a gallon. The matter was brought to the attention of the grand jury by the Crew-Lavick Oil company, which instituted suit against the Standard Oil company of New Jersey on the ground that it had entered into a conspiracy with the Gulf Refining company to drive the plaintiff out of business by starting the price cutting war. The case was thrown out of court by Judge Swayze of the State Supreme court, who directed the grand jury of Hudson county to investigate the charge.

It is alleged that the Standard owns stock in the Gulf Refining company, in violation of the "seven sisters" act. The constitutionality of the law was upheld yesterday in a decision handed down in Trenton by the New Jersey Supreme court.

ROBINS

ONCE again Illinois can have, and should have, a truly great man in the United States Senate—one who has devoted his life to the good of the masses of the people; one who has been heard all over this state and nation in earnest appeal for the betterment of the conditions of the common people; one who is known internationally for his championship of the masses; one who has never had a dollar from public taxation; one whose ambitions have never been for self, but always for the public good—Raymond Robins—strong, capable, unselfish, public-spirited, a good orator, a right reasoner, a sound man; wise in counsel, temperate in action; in his sympathies more like Lincoln than any man of our time, and as certainly honest.

Forget party, forget personal preferment, forget personal considerations and give the state a vote for Raymond Robins for United States Senator. Let Illinois be once more represented in the United States Senate by a man who will take place and rank with the best men who have ever represented Illinois there. Go early and vote for Robins. Help restore the good name and great fame of Illinois.

We have had a Lincoln; we have had a Grant; we have had a Logan—we need a Robins. He will be as surely for the public good and as little for personal gain as was Lincoln. With the greatest stretch of your imagination and conscience could you say as much for either of the other two candidates?

In this campaign Raymond Robins' integrity, his ability, his right-mindedness, have never been questioned. He stands before you with an untarnished record. His chief aim in life has always been to serve his fellow man. His acceptance of this nomination was prompted by a desire to do the most good for his country. Give Robins your vote.

SHERMAN

In 1914 as Senator

Voted against:

Investigation of New York, New Haven & Hartford scandal—

Against Parcels Post and in favor of express company combine—

Against grain inspection in the interest of farmers—

He has been publicly repudiated by three Republican Senators, La Follette, Norris and Clapp—who are for Robins.

"Absentee" Sherman

It appears from the records that since Mr. Sherman took his seat there have been 251 working days in the Senate and of these Mr. Sherman has been absent 96. In other words Mr. Sherman's average attendance in the Senate during one of the most important sessions in years has been 62 per cent.

"Missing" 468 Times

During these 251 working days there have been 802 roll calls, of which Mr. Sherman turned up missing on 468 which means he responded to only 42 per cent of the roll calls during his present term as senator.

Why Take Sherman?

"What reason can the Republican leaders give for making Lawrence Y. Sherman Speaker of the Illinois House of Representatives? The Republican party is not lacking in men of a better type. Why should it select for honor one who is recognized throughout the state as the champion of private as opposed to public interest."—Record Herald Editorial, January 3, 1899.

"The leading candidate for the speakership is Judge Sherman, one of the eight re-elected republicans who voted for the Allen Law and who has persisted in calling it a good law even after the voters have condemned it * * * he has the support of the traction companies which in Chicago buy up aldermen to get franchises and jurors to escape verdicts for damages and in Springfield buy up legislators to get friendly speakers and bad laws."—Tribune Editorial, January 3, 1899.

The Chicago Record editorially (June 5, 1897) listed those who voted for the Allen Bill—including Lawrence Y. Sherman—and said: "If ever the time comes that one of these men asks for the votes of the people again his record on the Allen Bill will be on hand to defeat him."

"The Allen Bill is bad essentially. It was constructed through fraud and violence. It is rejected by the people of Chicago through every agent or agency that can speak for them with authority. Its course has been attended from the beginning by shameless corruption. Boodle, boodle, boodle, has marked every step. There has been no concealment, no evasion of the horrible fact."—Editorial in Chicago Times-Herald, June 5, 1897

Don't Waste Your Vote

The citizen who votes the Republican ticket this year, throws his vote away. The Republicans are beaten. Two years ago they predicted the Progressives would be a bad third. They claimed the Presidency and got—8 electoral votes.

The actual vote for President in Cook County was:

Roosevelt,	166,061
Wilson,	130,702
Taft,	74,851

The actual vote in Illinois was:

Roosevelt,	386,478
Wilson,	405,048
Taft,	253,593

A vote for Sherman is a wasted vote. Can anyone believe Sullivan without Wilson's endorsement, which has failed to come, can win? Robins and Progressive principles will win. Don't throw your vote away.

SULLIVAN

Draws a Blank

Secretary Houston has come and gone in silence. Secretary Lane has come and gone in silence. Secretary Bryan has come and gone in silence. President Wilson has written endorsements for senators and congressmen all over the Union. We all know that Mr. Sullivan has pleaded for some written or spoken word of cheer from the President. We all know he has drawn a blank.

The words of Senator Owen, the Wilson leader in the Senate, ring true: "President Wilson does not want Sullivan."

"Every corruptionist in the democratic party in that state will support Sullivan, and so will all whom the corruptionists can influence. There will be no division among the reactionaries, the veneered republicans and the representatives of the predatory interests—they all want Sullivan in the senate 'to steady the boat,' as he puts it. There should be no division in the ranks of those who oppose the special interests."—W. J. Bryan, in The Commoner, August, 1914.

"Roger Sullivan is not a good Democrat. He never was and he never will be. He bolted the ticket in 1896 and helped to defeat William Jennings Bryan for the presidency. He bolted the Democratic ticket in Chicago in 1907 and helped to elect Fred A. Busse mayor of Chicago. He has been a traitor time and again. He is not deserving of the votes of good Democrats."—Governor Dunne to Chicago voters in August, 1914.

"The Chicago Federation of Labor refused yesterday to take the name of Roger C. Sullivan off its unfair list.

"The question was raised by a resolution introduced by representatives of the electrician's union, who declared that Mr. Sullivan had shown himself a friend of labor by helping the electrical workers adjust their difficulties with the sanitary district. The resolution was voted down at the end of a heated debate by a rising vote of 236 to 56. * *

"'In all Mr. Sullivan's career he has steadily and consistently opposed labor's just requests and demands,' said Mr. Fitzpatrick. 'It has been thus from the days when his notorious Ogden Gas and Cosmopolitan Electric ordinances were put through the city council.'"—Chicago Herald, Oct. 5, 1914.

Ogden Gas "Hold-up"

The Ogden Gas franchise and the opportunity it gave Sullivan to "hold-up" the People's Gas company has imposed upon the people of Chicago a tax of 4 cents on every dollar's worth of gas that passes through their meters, a princely revenue of $600,000 a year, a tribute for forty-five years, amounting to $27,000,000 for Roger Sullivan, his heirs and assigns.

The Daily News Endorses Raymond Robins

"He stands for humanity.

His coat is off to help the under dog.

He says of the worker: "He is my brother."

He specializes in plans and specifications for a nobler manhood—not forgetting the distaff side.

His platform is the old Christianity—primitive, out of fashion, but wholesome and lasting.

Why not make him United States senator from Illinois?

Human beings are better than "interests." Ideals are better than deals.

Robins for the senate!

Help the movement along."—Editorial, The Chicago Daily News, Oct. 31, 1914.

Roosevelt on Illinois' Senatorial Fight

Chicago Coliseum Address, Oct. 19, 1914, Charges Sullivan and Sherman "Stand Together in the Essentials"

"Mr. Sullivan, the Democratic candidate for senator, has had his whole career shaped by his part in the Ogden gas ordinance which practically the solid press of the city at the time denounced. The passage of this ordinance was not an incident in the career of Mr. Sullivan. It was the foundation for his political and commercial career, and shortly after its passage he appeared as an officer of the corporation."

"The foundation for Mr. Sherman's whole political career was laid when in the legislature he was one of the most prominent supporters of the so-called Allen law. The Allen law was passed in the interest of Yerkes and Lorimer to confer upon city councils the right to grant fifty-year franchises."

"In all the essentials of their actions Mr. Sherman and Mr. Sullivan stand together. The essence of a bi-partisan machine is that on certain questions hostile to the interests of the public the members of the two machines vote against the interests of the public, and, furthermore, that in various crises the members of the one machine come to the help of the members of the other machine."

"I may make my appeal in Illinois not merely to the Progressives, but to all honest Republicans and honest Democrats to repudiate both the Sullivan and Sherman machines. This they can do only by electing to the United States senate as able and upright and genuine a popular representative as Illinois has ever sent to that body—namely, Raymond Robins."

EMPLOYES FORM GOOD FELLOWS' FACTORY CLUBS

Workers in One Plant Give One Per Cent of Wages Weekly to Aid the Poor.

The Right Rev. C. P. Anderson, bishop of the diocese of Chicago, in a letter to THE TRIBUNE discussing the Good Fellow movement, says:

Permit me to congratulate you on your Good Fellow scheme. It brings in the personal equation where it is so much needed. The philanthropies of a great city are so apt to be cold, mechanical, and lacking in warmth and love.

By bringing the giver and receiver into personal touch both are benefited, the feeling of brotherhood is quickened, and the cause of justice and charity helped.

In a small community everybody knows everybody, and the personal element is to the front. In a large city this is not the case. Your plan tends to establish personal contact between the haves and have nots.

Good Fellow Clubs Formed.

By combining efforts groups of Good Fellows in many instances are accomplishing results in constructive aid of the poor which individually they could not reach. Several "Good Fellow clubs" have been formed, whereby the contributions of the members are pooled and devoted to the relief of special cases.

An example of this plan is afforded in a letter received by the Good Fellow department telling of the method of the employés of the Hedman Manufacturing company, at 227 West Erie street. The letter follows:

"The seed of Good Fellowship which your paper has so graciously spread among your many readers has taken root among the employés of our factory. They have formed among themselves a Good Fellow club, with the aim and purpose of aiding those who deserve it.

Give 1 Per Cent of Wages.

"Their form of organization in a financial way is to give 1 per cent of their weekly wage to a fund which is to be devoted to charity.

"The Hedman Manufacturing company, recognizing the spirit and sincerity of purpose, has pledged itself to give an amount each week equal to the sum they, the employés, pool together. The amount may not be great, but surely will help to aid some one in need of assistance.

Asks Names of Needy.

"Their committee has requested the company to ask your coöperation in giving them the names of three or four families who are in dire need and worthy of help. If you would kindly do so they will investigate and report to you the disposition they have made of the matter and the extent of their good will.

"Along with the same idea, as stated above, is our sincere belief that, should the factories and corporations located in Chicago today organize similar clubs of good fellowship there would be less families and widows in need."

"Whatever credit attaches to this offer," remarked H. R. Hedman, secretary of the company, "should be given to the employés, for it is primarily their plan and proposal."

Apple Shipment Arrives.

The Good Fellow department yesterday received a shipment of 108 bushels of apples from the Kendall farm, near Douglas, Mich. The apples will be distributed this week among families receiving aid from and through the United Charities in coöperation with the Good Fellow department of THE TRIBUNE. Every step in the collection and distribution of the apples represents a service in good fellowship.

The apples were given by Charles J. Kendall, baskets for the packing by President Gerber of A. E. Weed & Co., transportation from Douglas to Chicago by the Indiana Transportation company, and teaming service here by the Joseph Stockton Transfer company, which annually gives free service to the United Charities.

Record in One District.

In lower north district of the United Charities fifty-six Good Fellows have given aid to the poor. A report from that district yesterday indicated that $107 a month had been pledged for regular pensions to families through the winter months. Others are giving aid in supplies and personal service.

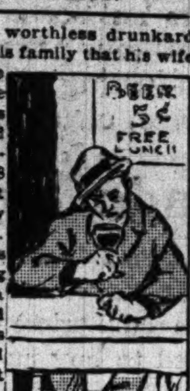
The boys of Allendale farm, Lake Villa, have become interested in the S family of lower north district, which has six small children. In the R family, where special medical assistance is needed, a doctor and his wife are giving both professional and material relief.

In response to the Good Fellow column appeal for a farming opportunity for one of the families in lower north district a good home in the country has been given free of rent and farming work is offered which will mean a living for the family. Two old women, dependent for years, have been relieved of financial worries by Good Fellows and have been given some happy times by their benefactors. Good Fellows get results.

As You Rest Today Think of the Woes of These Unfortunates.

HERE are some more chances to be a Good Fellow. There is a very simple direct way to help these unfortunates through their troubles—a way to be sure that none of your effort is wasted and that your attempts to do good cannot go wrong. The Good Fellow plan makes it merely a matter of your own desire. If you want to help send your name and address to The Good Fellow headquarters, THE TRIBUNE.

CENTRAL DISTRICT.



P.—Man was a worthless drunkard and so abusive to his family that his wife had to get a divorce three years ago. The United Charities found Mrs. P. and four children ranging from 12 to 8 years in a basement which was really more like a cellar. The mother was working in a rag shop, earning $5 a week. The United Charities told this woman if she would give up her work at the rag shop and follow the directions of the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium that it would assist her. The family was moved to sanitary quarters and pensioned all summer. Now Mrs. P. is able to do a few days' work a week. The county is furnishing food. Will some Good Fellow help to meet the rent of $9?

C.—Husband died suddenly one month ago, leaving a widow and eight children ranging from 16 years to 8 months (seven of the children are boys), penniless. There are two children of working age, a boy of 16 and a girl just 14, who are anxious for work. Mrs. C., who is not strong physically and is at present very much dazed over the suddenness of her husband's death, applied to the United Charities for work. This was refused her, as she was needed in her home to care for her little children, but work at the hospital was offered the eldest boy at once. Mrs. C. is very anxious to keep her family together. The landlord has made his contribution by reducing the rent from $12 to $10 a month. It will take $8 a week for food. Who will help find this boy a job?

SOUTH CHICAGO DISTRICT.

P.—Husband died suddenly in April, 1914, leaving his widow and four little children dependent. The small insurance was used for burial expenses. Mrs. P. speaks no English and has no relatives in this county. She is not eligible to the mother's pension because her husband was not naturalized. However, she is a splendid mother and the home should be kept together. The United Charities is pensioning this family at the rate of $2.50 a week for food, $8 a month for rent, one quart of milk daily, besides the necessary fuel.

B.—B. was shot by a watchman in January, 1913, while picking grain, and his insurance just covered the burial expenses and paid up a few back bills, leaving Mrs. B. absolutely dependent with four children, and a fifth one born a short time after the father's death. The home is kept in immaculate condition. To keep this home together they will have to have $11 a month for rent, $3.50 a week for food, and one quart of milk daily.

CITY IS SUED FOR $5,500.

James Healy and Cornelius Finerty Bring Action Against Controller on Contract.

Suit seeking to force John E. Traeger, city controller, to pay them $5,500 on a contract entered into with the city was filed by James Healy and Cornelius Finerty yesterday. It is set forth that M. T. Rutherford was engaged by the petitioners to do certain work under the contract; that he served notice on Mr. Traeger that certain money was owing to him for services, and that the controller refused to pay their claim. It is alleged that the amount due Mr. Rutherford has been paid, and that, therefore, it is the controller's duty to pay the amount due the petitioners.

The attendants were in costumes of corn yellow satin with brown velvet and hats of the brown velvet trimmed in pale yellow. The costumes had a dainty finishing touch in the bronze slippers and old fashioned bouquets of mixed flowers. Mr. and Mrs. Fisher will live at 122 East Eighty-second street, New York.

Home Service Held.

The marriage of Miss Marie Evelyn Bryan, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John C. Bryan of 5536 Sheridan road, to Dr. Franklin Bennett McCarty of Chicago, son of Mrs. John F. McCarty of Lynn, Mass., was a home service of last night. Miss Theresa Gately was the maid of honor and Miss Marjorie Corson of Lockport, N. Y., and Miss Marjorie Warner of South Bend, Ind., stretched the ribbons. Raymond Conron of Danville served as best man and the ushers were Ralph Gately and William McCarty, a brother, from Lynn, Mass.

The bridal gown was of white satin, with duchess and rose point lace and pearls, and the veil of tulle was edged with rose point. The bouquet was of lilies of the valley and sweet peas. The maid of honor wore pale green satin, with a crystal tunic, and carried pink roses. Miss Corson was in pink satin and Miss Warner in yellow satin, both carrying hats filled with roses and hung from their arms on ribbons. Dr. and Mrs. McCarty will live at 5536 Sheridan road.

Oak Park Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Alice Marie Bouchard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Bouchard of 831 South Cuyler avenue, Oak Park, to Arthur H. Meyers, also of Oak Park, took place at 10 o'clock in the morning. Miss Alma Bouchard, a sister, was maid of honor, and Fred Meyer, the bridegroom's brother, was best man.

INVENTION BRINGS DEATH

Gas Escapes, Killing Inventor and His Wife.

HAD HOPED FOR FORTUNE

Kin Finds Couple Asphyxiated in Their Residence.

An invention on which he hoped to obtain a patent and reap a fortune was responsible for the death of Edward Roscoe and his wife, Caroline. The couple were found in the bedroom of their residence at 5648 South Union avenue, yesterday. Three burners on the gas stove were found lighted by Mrs. Catherine Smith, Roscoe's mother. The odor of gas was also discovered, but the source remained a mystery for several hours.

Roscoe had worked on his invention, a gas heating contrivance, until late into the night. He was so engrossed with his labors that he did not hear Mrs. Smith when she knocked on the door Friday evening.

When he retired he left the gas turned on in the heater. There was a hole in the rubber tube which connected the heater with a jet. This cause of the double tragedy was discovered by Thomas Roscoe of 916 West Fifty-seventh street, a brother.

Mrs. Smith returned in the morning. With the aid of Mrs. Minnie Nixdorf, a neighbor, the door was broken in. Coroner's Physician Joseph Stringer made a postmortem examination and decided that gas had caused their deaths. A verdict of accidental death was returned by a coroner's jury.

ARRESTED ON PEACE MISSION

Wife Held for Re-Wedding After Divorce Has Husband Taken for Contempt.

Kenosha, Wis., Oct. 31.—[Special.]—Cleo Sloan Anderson Benischek, the Chicago woman arrested here following her too hasty marriage after a divorce, turned the tables on her former husband today when David K. Anderson of Chicago was arrested on a charge of contempt of court. A warrant was issued for his arrest by Judge Randall on the complaint of the former wife that Anderson had failed to pay alimony and attorneys' fees as directed by the court. Anderson was held on bonds of $200 for his appearance next Friday. He had come to Kenosha seeking a reconciliation with his former wife. She was with the second husband, Frank Benischek, at a local hotel.

ADMITS KILLING FAMILY OF FIVE

Illinois Farmer Dynamited His Home for Love of Resort Inmate.

COOLLY TELLS STORY.

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 31.—[Special.]—Scott Stone, arrested in St. Louis yesterday after enlisting in the United States army under an assumed name, today confessed that he had murdered his wife and four children at his farm home at Tolona near here Sept. 28.

"I blew up my house with ten sticks of dynamite and then set fire to it," Stone told Deputy Fire Marshals Roberts and Sloan, who had been sent to bring him back to Champaign county.

Stone's crime has few parallels in the criminal history of central Illinois. He is the son of a wealthy and respected farmer who refuses to believe his guilt.

Knew Her Only as "Lucille."

For the love of a girl, "Lucille," whose last name he did not even know, Stone committed the deed. While the charred, mangled body of his wife still lay in the smoking ruins he hurried to the resort where Lucille was an inmate and remarked boastfully:

"Now I've got the divorce I wanted."

On the night of Sept. 27, Stone said, the family retired early after returning from a drive. After midnight he slipped out to the wheat bin, where he previously had hid the dynamite, leaving his wife and four babies asleep in a room directly over the kitchen.

Waits to See Explosion.

Creeping back to the house, he placed the dynamite under the kitchen table, lighted the fuse, and then coolly took up a position in the yard to await the explosion. The blast, Stone said, shook the house, which immediately burst into flames.

"I waited awhile," he said in his sworn confession, "to see that she was burning all right. Then I called a couple of the neighbors. When they came I told them it was no use—my wife and the babies were burned up—and they didn't try to do anything but save the furniture."

Woman Betrays Him.

Stone disappeared, but through the woman the police traced him to Mattoon, Ill., where it was found that, as Joseph A. Talbort, he had enlisted in the army.

From Mattoon, "Talbort" was traced to St. Louis and to the Jefferson barracks. State's Attorney Busch had him put under [illegible] ne had been sweated all day he broke down tonight and confessed.

Stone was to be returned to Champaign tonight. Precautions were taken here to prevent a demonstration by his former neighbors.

Fugitive from Justice Caught.

John J. Edson, indicted three years ago with Fred C. Foster on a charge of having swindled the National Lead company at 900 Eighteenth street, out of $5,000, and who then jumped his bond, was arrested yesterday in Los Angeles, Cal., according to a message received by the Chicago police.

28 7/10 Miles Per Gallon

"THIS is Economy Year and Jeffery made it so." Some people perhaps think that this is just a pretty little advertising slogan with possibly only a 50-50 basis of fact.

That Jeffery economy is not a matter of mere claim, was proven beyond question last Tuesday, Oct. 27th, in the most remarkable test of "Six" economy ever made in Chicago.

On the day, unknown to us, the Contest Board of the Chicago Automobile Club made a test of the Jeffery Chesterfield "Six," in the words of the official report—"To find out how far it would go on a gallon of gasoline, how slow it would run on high gear, as well as how fast it would run, in other words its flexibility, its acceleration and its power in hill climbing."

The car weighted with passenger load, 4,100 pounds, and the speeds and distances were tested with the Stewart speedometer.

The economy test started at the intersection of Garfield and Southwestern boulevard, via 31st street boulevard, South California boulevard, 24th street boulevard, Marshall boulevard, to Douglas Park. Douglas boulevard, Independence boulevard, up the east side of Garfield Park, around Garfield Park to Washington boulevard. West on Washington to Maple avenue, Oak Park. To Madison street, to Home avenue, to Washington boulevard. East to Garfield Park, around park to Franklin boulevard, Sacramento to Humboldt Park; via Humboldt boulevard to Palmer Square; to Logan Square via Logan boulevard to Diversey, and south thru Lincoln Park, where the fuel was exhausted.

HOW'S THIS FOR ECONOMY

Last Tuesday, you will remember, it was decidedly cold. The economy test started at 10:40 A. M., with the temperature at 42 degrees Fahrenheit. The test was concluded at 12:05 noon, with the temperature at 48 degrees. The distance run was 28.7 miles. The fuel was measured with a standard gallon measure which has been tested by the city sealer, and the car was driven at from 18 to 22 miles per hour. The clutch was not declutched during the trip, except where necessary to stop for traffic. The dash adjustment on the carburetor was disconnected, so that it could not be used during any of the tests. The fan belt was on, and the fan operative, during the test.

ACCELERATION TEST.

With the carburetor adjustments the same as during the economy test, the car was driven from a standing start to 30 miles per hour in 12 4-5 seconds.

FLEXIBILITY TEST.

With the same carburetor adjustment as used in the economy test and acceleration test, the car was driven at 4 miles per hour on high gear, and was speeded up to 44 miles per hour. Road conditions would not permit of any greater speed than this.

HILL CLIMB.

The hill climb was made coming south on Hubbard hill, starting from the cross walk and going thru the gears the car attained a speed of 15 miles an hour in high at the finish. Crossing the walk at 11 miles per hour in high gear, the car finished at 18 miles per hour at the top of the hill.

TON MILES.

The car traveling 28.7 miles with a load of 4,100 pounds gives a ton mileage of 58.8 ton miles to the gallon of gasoline.

These facts and figures are taken from the official report of the Board, signed by Mr. F. E. Edwards, Chairman of the Technical Committee, and Mr. Harry A. Tarantous, member of the Technical Committee. The facts speak for themselves.

We end where we started: "This is Economy Year, and Jeffery made it so."

ORIGINAL DEFECTIVE

NEWLYWED SPAT PARTS MOST OF DIVORCED PAIRS

County Clerk's Statistics Show Rift in Wedded Bliss Occurs in First Year.

The first year of married life is the most disastrous for Chicago's Darbys and Joans. Records compiled by County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer from 2,660 divorce cases heard between Jan. 1 and July 1 show the largest percentage of couples find their way into the divorce courts during the first year of wedded life. If the first nine years are passed successfully, the chance of the marriage ending unhappily is slight.

Of the number of cases noted 1,934 were those of persons married from one to nine years.

Here Is Table.

The table given out by Mr. Swietzer follows:

Years of married life.	No. seeking divorce.	Years of married life.	No. seeking divorce.
8	142	18	29

2,849 Suits for Divorce.

Exactly 2,849 suits for divorce, separate maintenance, and annulment of marriage were filed in the period covered by the table, but some of these are still in process of litigation. Mr. Sweitzer attributes the large number of first year divorce cases to hasty and ill advised marriages of persons who fail to take into consideration the responsibilities which the married relation imposes.

"From the first year on," he pointed out, "the number seeking separation decreases gradually, and after the ninth years falls off rapidly. I am told that English statistics show that most divorces are sought in the eighth year of married life. It appears to be different in this country, at least in Chicago. A table for the whole country would be interesting."

Trixie Friganza in Court.

Fifty-eight divorce cases, in which only the complainant appeared, were heard in the Superior and Circuit courts during the day. Trixie Friganza, whose marriage two years ago to Charles A. Goetler, a manager, caused a stir in the theatrical world, appeared before Judge [illegible]ll and testified she had paid her husband's bills and bought his clothes during the whole period of their married life.

"Once on New Year's Eve, when I had [illegible] kept up late by extra work, he [illegible]ed me and slapped both my cheeks." [illegible] said. "My sister was present at the time."

The case was continued indefinitely until the return of Miss Friganza's sister from New York. She gave her address as 750 Bittersweet place, where she said she was living with Mr. and Mrs. P. D. Shelton. Her counsel, Attorney Emile Van Bever, said a notice of the suit had been sent to Goettler's last known address in New York.

Fight Over Pay Envelope.

Alfred C. Darst of 325 Seeley avenue was granted a divorce from Mrs. Nellie Darst when he testified she left him because he took charge of the pay envelope when she objected to his supporting his mother.

"I should worry," said Samuel G. Smith, a stenographer for the Santa Fé railroad, when his wife, Mrs. Anna L. Smith of 6547 Emerald avenue, surprised him at a Wabash avenue hotel with another woman. She was awarded a divorce and $300 alimony.

Mrs. Elizabeth M. Green of 122 West Schiller street testified her husband, Joseph D. Green, went to South America in August, 1911, and she had not heard from him since. She was given a decree.

Miss Addams stated that if her memory is correct, the statements made by Mrs. Trout in her statement of Friday were not correct.

Doesn't Recall Trout Letter.

"I have a bad memory of things of this kind," she said. "As I recall it, I didn't see the letter which Mrs. Trout sent to Dr. Shaw, the national president. I think I did say that the letter which Dr. Shaw sent in return was a little peppery and impulsive, but there was no intention of not standing by Dr. Shaw.

"We felt that we coudn't march in the parade after the state board had refused to consider the matter of a resolution which the national board had asked them to adopt. As the acting president of the national association, I felt that as a matter of official etiquette I could not march in the parade."

First Talk of Bolt.

The first intimation of a bolt was made at the morning session, when Mrs. McCormick, after an attempt to shout her down, read a statement, which concluded:

"In the course of a week I shall send to every woman who wishes to leave her name with me a full presentation of the facts, so that if Miss Addams, Miss Breckinridge, Mrs. Bowen, Miss McDowell, Miss Vittum, Miss Abbott, and others of us must take what would seem to be a radical course, in the interests of the suffrage movement in Illinois, you may understand why we are impelled to do so."

Life Savers Pick Up Charred Motorboat Mattress to Which Pair Were Clinging.

Kenosha, Wis., Oct. 31.—[Special.]—A charred mattress, apparently from a small motor boat, was picked up by the Kenosha life saving crew a half mile off Kenosha today after people residing along the lake shore had notified the crew that two boys had been seen on the floating object. When the life savers reached the mattress they found no trace of the two persons.

PRIZES AWARDED TO RIVAL POETS

Local Man Captures Highest, $200, with Group of Poems About Chicago.

GIRL'S WAR VERSE WINS

A group of poems about Chicago by Carl Sandburg of 4646 North Hermitage avenue has been awarded the $200 prize in the contest recently conducted under the auspices of Poetry, a magazine of verse, according to an announcement made yesterday. The prize was awarded by Salmon O. Levinson of Chicago. Miss Louise Driscoll of Catskill, N. Y., received a prize of $100 for the best poem based on the European war.

Here Is Chicago in Poetry.

The first of Mr. Sandburg's poems is called "Chicago." It follows:

Hog Butcher for the World,
  Tool Maker, Stacker of Wheat,
Player with Railroads and the Nation's Freight Handler;
Stormy, Husky, Brawling,
  City of the Big Shoulders:

They tell me you are wicked and I believe them, for I have seen your painted women under the gas lamps luring the farm boys.
And they tell me you are crooked and I answer: Yes, it is true. I have seen the gunman kill and go free to kill again.
And they tell me you are brutal and my reply is: On the faces of women and children I have seen the marks of wanton hunger.
And having answered so I turn once more to those who sneer at this my city, and I give them back the sneer and say to them:
Come and show me another city with lifted head singing so proud to be alive and coarse and strong and cunning.
Flinging magnetic curses among the toil of piling job on job, here is a tall, bold slugger set vivid against the little soft cities;
Fierce as a dog with tongue lapping for action, cunning as a savage pitted against the wilderness,
Bareheaded, Shoveling, Wrecking, Planning,
Building, Breaking, Rebuilding.
Under the smoke, dust all over his mouth, laughing with white teeth,
Under the terrible burden of destiny laughing as a young man laughs,
Laughing even as an ignorant fighter laughs who has never lost a battle,
Bragging and laughing that under his wrist is the pulse, and under his ribs the heart of the people.
Laughing;
Laughing the stormy, husky, brawling laughter of Youth, half-naked, sweating, proud to be a Hog Butcher, Tool Maker, Stacker of Wheat, Player with the Railroads, and Freight Handler to the Nation.

First Prize War Poem.

"The Metal Checks," the war poem awarded the first prize, is written in the form of a dialogue between the Counter, who is Death, and the Bearer, who is the world and bears the burden of war. The Bearer carried on his back a gunnysack filled with little metal disks that have been used for the the identification of the common soldiers.

The Bearer speaks first:

Here is a sack, a gunny sack,
  A heavy sack I bring.
Here is toll of many a soul—
  But not the soul of a king.
This the toll of common men,
  Who lived in the common way;
Lived upon bread and wind and love.
  In the light of the common day.
This is the toll of working men,
  Blood and brawn and brain.
Who shall render us again
  The worth of all the slain.

After a quantity of the checks have been counted out by the Bearer and the Counter, the Bearer finds the bag of war troublesome. He holds it up, inspecting it, and says:

What can one do with a thing like this?
Neither of life nor death it is!
For the dead serve not, though it served the dead.
The wounds it carried were wide and red,
Yet they stained it not. Can a man put food,
Potatoes or wheat, or even wood
That is kind, and burns with a flame to warm
Living men who are comforted—
Is a thing that has served so many dead?
It's been shroud for too many men.
I'll burn it and let the dead bless.

Clear Dr. Billings in Auto Death.

A coroner's jury returned a verdict yesterday that Joseph King of 1622 Meyer court, who was struck by an automobile driven by Dr. Frank Billings, died at the county hospital of delirium tremens, and not from injuries received in the accident.

SHERIFF MORROW CLANKS INTO CITY FOR PRISONER.

Arrives with Medieval Handcuffs and Twelve Feet of Chain to Foil Chicago's Desperadoes.

Chicago's reputation as a city filled with gunmen and robbers has reached Carrolton, Ill. When Sheriff J. B. Morrow arrived here yesterday to take back a prisoner he was equipped like a dungeon keeper of the middle ages.

When Sheriff Morrow entered the Central station and called for Raymond Jawett, 23 years old, wanted on a serious charge, he drew out a heavy, old fashioned pair of handcuffs with which he fastened the hands of the young man. Next he untied a package containing twelve feet of heavy chain.

Slowly he unwound the chain, and after passing it between the handcuffed arms of his prisoner, he wound the ends around his right hand and told Jawett to "move along."

BOLTERS PLAN TO FORM NEW SUFFRAGE BODY

McCormick Faction Meets After Convention Ends and Discusses Dispute.

MRS. TROUT IS TRIUMPHANT

New Suffrage Officers.

Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout, president.

Mrs. G. A. Soden, first vice president.

Mrs. H. M. Brown of Peoria, second vice president.

Mrs. Judith Loewenthal, recording secretary.

Mrs. E. L. Stewart, corresponding secretary.

Miss Jennie Johnson, treasurer.

Mrs. W. F. Carr of Ottawa, auditor.

The directors elected were:

Miss Margaret Dobyne, Mrs. H. C. Newton, Miss Alice Henry, Mrs. J. W. McGraw, Mrs. Mary Bussey, Mrs. Laura G. Fixen, Mrs. Mary Codding Bourland, Mrs. Carrie A. Bahrenburg, Mrs. William Severin.

Officially the convention of the Illinois Equal Suffrage association closed at noon yesterday. A second bolters' meeting kept a roomful of women all afternoon in the green room of the Congress hotel, however.

As a result of dissatisfaction over what was termed a packed convention and gag rule the faction led by Mrs. Medill McCormick is ready to organize a second state organization in Illinois. If the plans of the women are carried out, as appeared probable at the bolters' meeting in the green room, there will be two delegations of women from Illinois at the national convention in Nashville, opening next week.

Jane Addams Supports "Bolters."

Among those who supported the bolters' meeting were Miss Jane Addams and Miss Sophonisba Breckinridge, both of whom made speeches. Miss Addams asserted that it would be the policy of the national convention to hear all the discussion on both sides that any one desired to carry on. Some of the downstate delegates interrupted Miss Addams to say that it was a lack of the open discussion in the present convention which caused them to bolt.

In the regular convention, however, Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout triumphed. She was reëlected president of the association without opposition. Her entire board was elected also, so that it is expected she will have fairly easy sailing during the coming year.

All but One of Slate Elected.

The entire ticket of the nominating committee was elected with the exception of Mrs. George Bass. Mrs. Bass was seen visiting during the morning with some of the opponents of Mrs. Trout. It was also learned that she had been in conference Friday night with Mrs. Antoinette Funk. When Miss Sophonisba Breckinridge reached the Congress hotel Mrs. Bass escorted her to the bolters' meeting.

The report of the nominating committee had been prepared before this was known, however, and it was recommended that Mrs. Bass be returned to her position as director. On the floor of the convention Mrs. Maud Cain Taylor, one of Mrs. Trout's supporters, nominated Miss Alice Henry in place of Mrs. Bass.

Mrs. James W. Morrison, whom Mrs. McCormick's supporters hoped to nominate, said she never considered being a candidate.

Mrs. Trout Loses One Point.

In only one instance did she lose a point. Mrs. Antoinette Funk secured an article in the new constitution, which was adopted, which takes from the board the opportunity of selecting at liberty fifty-two delegates to the national convention. The article to the constitution was adopted so quickly that few of Mrs. Trout's friends realized its importance. Mrs. Harriette Taylor Treadwell protested as the vote was being taken, but her protest came too late to secure the aid of the votes which she controlled.

According to the article in the constitution the presidents of the organizations affiliated with the state association may send one name of a member willing and qualified to serve as a delegate at the convention of the national association. The national delegates must be chosen from this number. If there is still to be representation after those suggested by the presidents have all been chosen, the board may complete the delegation from its own selections.

Action of Friday Voided?

On Friday the convention voted that the board of directors should select the national delegates. It is believed that the adoption of the new constitution with this clause in it voids that action.

The bolters' meeting in the green room was not entirely made up of Mrs. McCormick's supporters. Several of the members of the new board of directors were present. Some of the members of Mrs. Trout's faction protested against the meeting.

"I want to know if your methods do anybody any good," said Mrs. Laura Fixen. "You should devote your wonderful energies to other channels. You have not helped the cause. You have brought inharmony to the suffrage ranks."

Women Question Mrs. McCormick.

It was evident, however, that the majority of the women attending did not agree with Mrs. Fixen. They asked Mrs. McCormick numerous questions about her controversy with Mrs. Trout.

"The first time that I learned that Mrs. Trout was suppressing information," said Mrs. McCormick, "was last July. I had called a meeting of publicity chairmen and presidents of the suffrage organizations of the middle western states. When I began to speak of various phases of the national work, Mrs. Soden and Miss Dobyne repeatedly interrupted me for further explanations.

"Explanations had all gone out in the weekly bulletin published by the national congressional committee, which had been sent to Mrs. Trout. The women of the other states became annoyed at the constant interruptions of the Illinois women, who said they had never seen the bulletins. I took the matter up with the state board at its next meeting. Mrs. Trout declared that she had no time for such long and voluminous reports.

Only Ten Minutes to Talk.

"In the other states where conventions have been held we were always given at least an hour to state the national position. In this convention we were given ten minutes.

"Before the May 2 demonstration I talked with Mrs. Trout about the adoption of the national resolution. I wanted to arrange things before I went west. Mrs. Trout told me to go ahead; that I did not need to worry. I learned that the day after I had gone the board met and voted not to adopt the national resolution."

Denies Plans to Secede.

Following the meeting of the so-called bolters, Mrs. McCormick was inclined to belittle its significance. In an interview she said: "It is erroneous to think this meeting was held to lay plans for a new organization in Illinois. Neither will there be a second delegation at the Nashville convention. This meeting was held solely to allow an expression of views on several matters which came before the convention on which opportunity was not permitted for full discussion. There were several questions members desired to ask me which they were not allowed to do on the floor, and to answer them fully the meeting was called. 'We had no thought of bolting, and such a course was not discussed.'"

According to information that leaked out last night the new board met at dinner with Mrs. Trout in the Congress and appointed the fifty-two delegates and fifty-two alternates to the Nashville conventions despite the new rule. Mrs. George Bass was one of the delegates named.

ROB FAST TRAIN IN CHICAGO YARD

Holdup Men Board Santa Fe's California Limited at Thirty-fifth Street.

5 PASSENGERS VICTIMS.

Five persons, passengers on the California limited of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé railroad, were robbed by three armed men last night when the train stopped at West Thirty-eighth street and South Central Park avenue to wait for a signal giving it the right of way.

The conductor, after notifying a railroad watchman of the robbery, gave the engineer the signal to proceed, and the Brighton Park police, who were notified, were unable to learn the names of the victims or obtain a description of the robbers.

Point Revolvers at Passengers.

When the train was slowing down for the Illinois and Northern railroad crossing three men climbed over the railing of the observation car, and, pointing revolvers at passengers, forced them to hold up their hands.

When the patrol wagon and detectives arrived they believed the report was merely a hallowe'en prank. But they questioned railroad employés and verified the story of the robbery. They were given three different locations for the robbery—South Western avenue, South Kenton avenue, and South Central Park avenue.

Superintendent Starts Inquiry.

They believe the last place is correct because of the fact it is the only place the train comes to a stop for a signal of clear tracks.

C. E. Taylor, superintendent of terminals of the railroad, was notified of the robbery and immediately started an investigation. When the train reached Streator the local authorities were informed the total loot obtained by the robbers included only $40 and one watch.

JILTED CHICAGOAN KILLS HIMSELF IN ST. LOUIS.

Walter Piehl Also Found to Be Short in Accounts at Mound City Branch of Local Concern.

Walter Piehl, son of Mrs. Helma Jensen of 1903 Cuyler avenue, committed suicide in the office of the Gans-Stevens Mercantile company in St. Louis yesterday by firing a bullet into his temple. A shortage in his accounts and a broken engagement are believed to have been responsible for the young man's act.

Piehl was 27 years old. He left Chicago two months ago to take charge of the St. Louis branch of the company, the main office of which is at 307 West Monroe street.

Two weeks ago Mrs. Jensen received a letter from her son in which he said he had lost $75 of the firm's money while on the way to the bank. He said he didn't know what he would do but that the firm probably would have to wait until he could make it up.

Mrs. Jensen said he was engaged to be married to a young woman but that the engagement was broken recently.

BUSINESS MORE THAN USUAL

Dairy Show Closes After Attendance Record of 150,000, a Gain of 50,000.

"Business more than usual" as an American improvement on the British war slogan, "Business as usual," was coined yesterday to express the success of the National Dairy show, which is a barometer of the prosperity of a great industry.

The last performance of the dairy show of 1914 was held at night in the International amphitheater before a large crowd. One hundred and fifty thousand Chicagoans and out of town folks visited the show during ten days. This figure, the box office men reported, was a clear gain of 50,000 over the 1913 exhibition, which in turn showed a marked advance over the previous year's attendance.

"This is real American prosperity," said W. E. Skinner, manager. "Greater crowds, greater exhibits, greater business prospects for the industry—everything here is in high relief to any condition of pessimism elsewhere. This is surely 'business more than usual.'"

FIGHT OVER $5; TWO SHOT DEAD

Saloonkeeper Finds Brother in Struggle; Fires at Supposed Bandits.

THIRD MAN INJURED.

Fritz and Rudolph Kohlmann operate a saloon under the name Kohlman Bros. at 3828 South Halsted street. Trade was pretty brisk last night.

At 10 o'clock two young fellows stepped up to the bar just as Fritz took off his apron to go for a cup of coffee.

They ordered whisky. Rudolph served them. One of the two laid down a bill. Rudolph rang up the quarter on the cash register and handed out change for a $5 bill.

"Here, you!" said one of the young men. "Kick in with the right change."

Demands Change for $10.

"What's the matter?"

"Gimme change for that $10 bill. There's only $4.75 here."

"It was a $5 bill you gi'me."

"You're a liar."

"Come back here and look in the cash register," expostulated Rudolph. "I ain't got a ten in the house. Here, see for yourself."

The two customers walked around the bar. They could find no $10 bill. But they insisted they were being robbed.

Brother Enters Fray.

Fritz Kohlmann came back from having his cup of coffee to see his brother struggling in the grasp of the two young men. Fritz has served his time in the German army. He leaped the bar as though it were a vaulting horse, picked up a revolver, and shot both young men dead.

Gleason's undertaking wagon hauled them away. The police placed Fritz under arrest, mumbling over and over, "I thought they was stickups."

The names given the victims were Michael Quigley and Neal Lucey. Quigley was said to be a product of the West side. Quigley's residence was given as in the neighborhood of Thirty-seventh place and Auburn avenue.

Patrick Sullivan suffered scalp wounds and cuts and bruises when he interfered at the beginning of the struggle.

"PRINCE" WHO WAS AN ACTOR KILLS HIMSELF IN NEW YORK

Woman Claiming to Be His Wife Throws Away Tin Which Had Held Poison.

New York, Oct. 31.—"Prince" Paul de Clairmont, an actor, was found dead in bed in a west side rooming house today. A coroner's physician said that he had committed suicide.

The physician learned a well dressed woman, who said she was De Clairmont's wife, appeared at the rooming house a short while before the body was found. She went to the actor's room, and when she came down threw away a small tin and rode away. The coroner's physician found the tin can. Inside it, he said, he found a deadly poison.

De Clairmont arrived in New York from Europe a few years ago and announced that he was a prince. Since that time he had appeared on the stage. He was arrested about a year ago charged with larceny, but was acquitted.

'IN ALL CANDOR, IN ALL HONESTY,' SAYS CANDIDATE

Being an Intimate View of Campaign Meetings and Their Promoters.

RED FIRE STILL WITH US

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

"When, surrounded by them that are near and dear to you, you go to bed in your humble domicile—no matter how lowly—and a thief or enemy breaks in, do you not awake and yell, 'Where is the government?'

"An' so, my dear friends, I say to you in all honesty, in all candor, in all sincerity, that we as fellow Democrats should see to it that we should select as a candidate for public office only a man for whom we hope much for—a man whose noble life is a public benediction, a man into the deepest depths of whose inmost heart the golden rays of God's own sunshine penetrates—I say to you in all sincerity, in all honesty, in all candor, that when this noble candidate rises—and he will arise—in the senate chamber of these United States his magnetic physique will awe the house, his financial acumen will go down into the archives of the nation, his touching voice will echo and reëcho and resound to the lofty dome of the capital. It is needless to say that this noble candidate to whom I refer to is Roger C. Sullivan."

Merely a Curtain Raiser.

It should be quickly explained that nobody takes the effervescent spellbinder seriously. He is merely kept in reserve to be used to fill in the time, when the automobile which is rushing the candidates from hall to hall is for some reason delayed.

He ranks no higher, politically speaking, than the Murphy twins—two little boys in green tights, who box three hot rounds between speeches by the candidates—or Miss Genevra Genevieve Jones, who, at the more high brow meetings, sings "Why Do I Love You So?" with a violin accompaniment.

People who did not attend the little ward meetings held all over the city every night last week—twenty or thirty of them nightly—missed a wonderful opportunity to study democracy in action—with plenty of amusement thrown in.

Here Comes the Motor Car.

The real proceedings do not begin until the motor car bearing a group of candidates pants up to the curb in front of the meeting place. A noisy group of small boys, three of whom are honored by being allowed to hold as many burning sticks of red fire, mark the place.

Out of the auto step three or four heavy and solemn looking men, their faces worried and their shoulders bowed. In the entrance and along the hallways are distributed fifty young fellows with political aspirations and campaign cigars. The candidates tramp up the stairs and enter the hall at the rear. As they march down the center aisle to the platform all the patriots who are looking forward to pay roll appointments at their hands burst into hearty and unrestrained cheers.

The solitary drunken man who frequently occupies a front seat also lets loose a little nonpartisan enthusiasm and is sternly repressed. The chairman reaches forward and plucks the spellbinder who happens to be exuding eloquence by the coat tails.

"In all candor, in all sincerity, in all honesty—I thank you, fellow citizens—and ladies."

What the Candidates Say

What the candidates say depends on their personality and on the audience they are addressing. Here are a few samples, also as near verbatim as memory permits:

He is a huge and heavy man, plainly frightened half to death. He clasps his hamlike hands before his stomach and clears his throat.

"You gimme a good vote at the primary and I ain't had a chanct to thank you before. Much obliged. I hopes you gimme as good a vote on Tuesday, Nov. 3. In conclusion I hopes you vote the straight ticket from top to bottom, so we kin give you a business administration and furnish plenty of jobs for the boys who votes right on Tuesday, Nov. 3."

More impressive—and less to the point—is the statesman who is getting ready to check his trunks to Washington.

"Fellow citizens, I am not ambitious to shine as an orator. But all my life I have been accustomed to hard labor. I began to work as a boy of 9 years. I have been working ever since.

"If you send me to Washington I shall continue the habits of industry which have become my second nature. In my own poor way and to the full extent of my limited ability, I shall attempt to hold up the hands of that great patriot, that far sighted president, that greatest of all Democrats—Woodrow Wilson—to the end that peace, prosperity, and contentment shall continue to prevail among all the people of these United States."

Wheels Hum No More.

The Republican and Progressive variants on the above run somewhat as follows:

"Fellow sufferers: Four years ago these United States enjoyed all the blessings of prosperity. Wheels were humming in every factory. Every honest workingman had profitable employment. The shops were busy. Today factories are shut down, mills are closed, thousands of men are out of work. Who is to blame? Who but the Democratic party and the policies which it represents? If I ask you to send me to Washington, it is only that I may assist in passing such laws as will bring back prosperity, peace, and contentment to the people of these United States."

As the reverberation of the forty-two centimeter gun dies away the chairman rises:

"The glee club will now bring the program to a close by singing 'Illinois, Illinois.'"

MOTHER AND GIRL CAN'T WED; DIE

"Would That I Were Dead," Essay Written by the Daughter to Her "Cecil."

TRAGEDY OF CRIPPLE.

Two Went to Rabbi and Sought Husbands, but It All Ends in Disappointment.

The date Feb. 2, 1914, meant a lot to Sophie Jasney while she lived. "Cecil," her sweetheart, meant a lot to her, too, and that is why she is dead.

A coroner's jury found out these things yesterday when it sat at an inquest over the body of the girl who, clasped in her mother's arms in their little home at 1834 Taylor street, was found lifeless. The gas was turned on. Mrs. Bertha Jasney, the mother, also was dead. Hers has been a love tragedy, too.

"Sophie, Alias Feb. 2, 1914."

Sophie was a cripple—that explains matters as to her case. She left a letter headed "Sophie, alias Feb. 2, 1914," which reads:

"My Dearest Cecil: The time for our parting has come, bringing joy to you and sorrow to me. Although I may shed no tears, my heart overflows with grief as I wonder over the many times we have laughed and wept behind the dear old walls. I loved you the moment I saw you and shall always love you as long as the grass grows green.

"To part from you is terrible. The tears now dim the lines and so I cannot write plainly, and sobs stop me. 'Tis only a letter, Cecil, only a letter, but O, do not forget me, Cecil. Please don't. Mamma sends her best regards to you and your mother, and I the same. Please don't forget me, Cecil. Please don't. This letter is soiled, but, Cecil, it is the tears of my affection. Believe me, hoping that we may meet again on earth, I will close.

"Call me up, write, and remember me. If we never see each other again on earth we'll meet in heaven. Farewell. Your own till death. SOPHIE."

"Would That I Were Dead."

An essay which the crippled girl had written read:

"Would that I were dead. Sophie Gasney's essay upon herself:

"Waiting and waiting day after day;
Grieving the lifelong day;
Moaning the whole night through;
Suffering torture upon rising;
Misery throughout the lifelong day;
Life is nothing but torture to me."

Another letter which the girl had written to Rabbi L. Goldstein, 6140 South Morgan street, was read at the inquest.

Rabbi Goldstein was interrogated at his home last evening by Deputy Coroner Davis.

Each Wanted Husband.

"Rabbi Goldstein told me," said Deputy Davis at the inquest, "that Mrs. Jasney and her daughter called to see him one day about two months ago and asked to get husbands for them, saying they wanted to get married. Rabbi Goldstein said he took them to South Chicago and introduced Mrs. Jasney to a man there whom he believed to be matrimonially inclined. Mrs. Jasney, he says, told the man that she owned a cigar store on the west side and had considerable means.

"Rabbi Goldstein said Mrs. Jasney and the man talked the matter over and seemed pleased with each other. Later on the man found out that Mrs. Jasney did not own any cigar store and had but little money, and he rejected her proposal of marriage."

Mrs. Jasney owned a cigar store on the west side, but sold the place more than a year ago.

STOCKYARDS UNDER 10 DAY QUARANTINE

Federal Measure Taken to Fight Foot and Mouth Disease.

NO INFECTION HERE

The Union stockyards in Chicago were quarantined yesterday by the department of agriculture in order to facilitate the work of the government in stamping out foot and mouth disease, which has recently made its appearance in Indiana and Michigan.

The quarantine will stop the shipments of cattle out of Chicago for ten days. It will not prevent the receipt of cattle by the Chicago packing plants, or the killing, dressing, or shipment of dressed meats. It will simply hold up for a time the function of the stockyards as a clearing house for stocking dairies, ranches, and feeding farms of the middle west. No cases of foot and mouth disease have been discovered in the Chicago yards, and the action of the department of agriculture was taken as a precautionary measure.

Quarantine Other Yards.

A report gained currency in Washington last night that the government contemplated placing a quarantine over other large stockyards in the country, but Dr. Melvin, chief of the bureau of animal industry, who ordered the quarantine in Chicago, refused to say that such action was contemplated.

The reports from Chicago to the effect that Indiana cattle owners had attempted to ship their stock to Michigan by way of Chicago in order to evade the quarantine installed in Indiana brought about the federal action. Under the provisions of the rule no cattle, sheep, or swine may be moved from the yards in interstate or foreign commerce unless for the purpose of immediate slaughter and under permits issued by federal inspectors.

Chicago a Clearing House.

Chicago is the cattle clearing house of the country. Farmers from the states immediately surrounding Illinois send their cattle to Chicago and they are sent out to other sections of the country to be fattened during the winter. The cattle that are purchased during the fall are sent to the local packing houses next spring.

Last week 51,000 sheep and 19,000 cattle were shipped out of Chicago to points all over the country. Of this number it is estimated that more than 46,000 sheep and more than 6,000 cattle were designated for other purposes than immediate slaughter.

Prices Will Drop.

The continued shipment of cattle and sheep to Chicago without the possibility of shipping them out again, will result in a very considerable drop in the price of live stock for a time, it is said. The price to the consumer will be raised next spring if the quarantine is continued for a longer time than ten days.

The stock in cattle cars can only be unloaded and herded into reserve pens, which have been specially designated by the federal inspector, under the rules of the quarantine. Cars for the transportation of live stock must be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected before they can be moved again in interstate or foreign commerce. Shipments of stock into the yards from the affected areas must be unloaded under the supervision of federal officials.

Federal Explanation.

This explanation of the government's action was issued at the department of agriculture:

"Because of the danger that cattle infected with the foot and mouth disease may have passed through them, the Union stockyards in Chicago have been quarantined by the secretary of agriculture. This quarantine goes into effect immediately.

"Under the provisions of this quarantine no cattle, sheep, or swine can be moved from the stockyards in interstate or foreign commerce except for the purpose of immediate slaughter and under permits issued by federal inspectors. In such case they must be transported in sealed cars placarded 'For immediate slaughter.'

Cars Must Be Cleaned.

"The stock in these cars can only be unloaded into reserve pens which have been designated for this purpose by the chief of the bureau of animal industry. Cars used for the transportation of stock from the yards must be thoroughly cleansed and disinfected before they can be moved again in interstate or foreign commerce. Shipments of stock into the yards from uninfected areas must be unloaded through cleaned and disinfected docks and alleyways under the supervision of the federal officials. When reloaded the stock must be placed in cleaned and disinfected cars and the cars officially sealed.

"These measures are considered essential to the prevention of the spread of the disease. Foot and mouth is one of the most contagious infections known, and if it were possible to move stock from the Chicago yards to the country for feeding or dairy purposes there is grave danger that the disease might be disseminated over large areas.

"Up to the present time no case of foot and mouth disease has been found in the Union yards, but there is some reason to believe that infected stock may have passed through. It is at least certain that shipments of stock to Chicago have been made from regions where the foot and mouth disease has broken out."

The quarantine order came to Dr. S. E. Bennett, chief of the local bureau of animal industry, by long distance telephone from Dr. John R. Mohler, assistant chief of the bureau in Washington.

"The order is purely a precautionary measure as far as the Chicago yards are concerned," Dr. Bennett said. "There is no epidemic at the yards."

Dairy Cattle Affected.

The order also affects the dairy show now in progress at the yards. All dairy cattle on exhibition there will be held in quarantine one week. If no foot and mouth disease breaks out in that time, according to Dr. Bennett, the owners will be permitted to ship the cattle away.

This is the third outbreak of a foot and mouth epidemic among cattle in the United States in twelve years, according to the records of the department of agriculture. The first came in 1902-3 and the second in 1908-9.

The first outbreak cost the department $276,000 in the killing and burial of infected cattle, destruction of infected stables and other buildings, and salaries of inspectors. In the second epidemic the cost to the department of fighting the disease was $296,000.

Approximately 4,500 cattle were killed and buried in each epidemic.

No Serious Loss.

The quarantine against the shipment of stocking and feeding cattle and sheep out of the Union stockyards will not cause a serious loss of business for this market, according to M. F. Horine, statistician for the stockyards company.

"During the last year," explained Mr. Horine, "about 3,000,000 head of cattle and 6,000,000 head of sheep have been received at the Chicago stockyards. Of this number about 10 per cent of the cattle have been reshipped to farms in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Wisconsin, and other nearby states for feeding and fattening purposes. About 12 per cent of the sheep received here have also been reshipped for the same purpose."

The cattle at present in Chicago and which will have to be held here for ten days, are expected to be sold tomorrow. The stock brokers claim it is too expensive to feed them for that length of time, and it will be better to dispose of them to the packing plants.

Stockyards Explanation.

The authorized statement issued by the Union Stockyards follows:

"Feeder cattle and sheep shipments from Chicago were today placed under quarantine by the federal government inspectors of the bureau of animal industry.

"Cattle or sheep for immediate slaughter may be shipped into or out of the market.

"The quarantine will be in force at Chicago, according to Dr. S. F. Bennett, government inspector, for a period of ten days that all feeding cattle and sheep now in the yards may undergo observation.

"This move on the part of the federal government was taken purely as a precautionary measure, and federal officials assert that not a single case of the disease has yet been found among animals arriving here nor among those which have left these yards for feeding purposes.

"In view of the quarantine effective today, all live stock interests here admonish shippers of cattle and sheep to refrain from shipping those cattle and sheep which are classified at market as 'stocker' or 'feeder' types."

J. O. Armour's Statement.

J. Ogden Armour was told of the federal order by THE TRIBUNE.

"The order preventing outgoing shipments will not have a serious effect on the business of the packing houses in Chicago. Only a small percentage of the cattle that are shipped in are shipped out again, so I cannot see a very serious result.

"The order, of course, will have some effect on the business at the yards. The main thing we are interested in here in Chicago, however, is getting the cattle into the yards. We are not so much interested in getting them out.

"If the order had prevented the shipment of cattle into the Union stockyards, then the effect would have been most serious."

Quarantine Welcomed.

A. G. Leonard, president of the Union Stockyards and Transfer company, said the action of the government would be welcomed by everyone in the Chicago stockyards as a precautionary measure.

"Every one in the stockyards," said he, "may be counted upon to coöperate with the government officials to the utmost in their attempt to stamp out this dread disease among live stock. The rigid enforcement of this quarantine will be taken up by the officials of the stockyards."

President Leonard explained that a thorough investigation of the stockyards had failed to find a single case of hoof and mouth infection. He said that no animals from Michigan or Indiana had been received at the stockyards for more than two weeks.

No Effect on Business.

"The quarantine doesn't amount to much of anything," said Edward Morris, vice president of Morris & Co., "and will have no appreciable effect on business. I do not believe that there will be any reduction in the price of cattle on the hoof, although, if the quarantine is maintained for a long period, it may show its effect."

Very little of the milk supply of Chicago will be affected by the foot and mouth disease quarantine. The large dairy companies here obtain their milk from the Elgin district and the northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin districts. A small quantity of milk is obtained by some of the small dealers from Indiana, it was reported.

Death Only Sure Check for Foot and Mouth Disease.

BY DR. W. A. EVANS.

THE foot and mouth disease is primarily a disease of cloven footed animals. Secondarily, it is a disease of men. It's normal habitat is Europe, from which it extends at times to all parts of the world. This is the sixth epidemic in the United States. The fifth was in 1908. At that time it was found fairly extensively distributed in the dairy districts around Detroit and Philadelphia. I have never heard that any human beings were affected in that epidemic.

As soon as its presence was discovered it was reported to the bureau of animal industry. They took charge of this local situation in both places, having the coöperation and support of the state governments. Within a few months the epidemic was under control and within a year it was entirely eradicated.

The farmers were compelled to kill a great many infected animals, and the government spent several hundred thousand dollars. The cost of the epidemic ran into the millions. The present epidemic appears to be limited to southwestern Michigan and northwestern Indiana. The situation is in the hands of the bureau of animal industry of the United States department of agriculture, coöperating with the state veterinarians of Michigan, Indiana, and Illinois.

Dr. Houck has given it as his opinion that the disease is not yet under control, but that he expects to have it under control in a short time. He should be able to eradicate it entirely within a year. The success which the bureau had in 1908 gives us confidence that the government will succeed in controlling this situation.

The foot and mouth disease is caused by a filterable virus. At the present time the group of diseases due to germs, too small to be seen with a microscpoe and capable of passing through a fine filter, is a large one. The first disease in which it was proven that the cause was a filterable virus was foot and mouth disease. The virus circulates in the blood of the infected animal and causes small blisters in the mouth and similar sores on the hoof, especially between the bifurcations of the hoof of the cloven footed animals.

It is violently contagious and infected animals should be destroyed and their carcasses buried as soon as the disease is discovered. It is moderately severe, killing a fair proportion of the animals infected and causing all infected animals to waste to a skeleton. The disease can be conveyed by hides, hair, mouth secretions, and by milk.

It spreads to human beings through the agency of milk and probably in that way only. It affects children very much more frequently than it does adults. A child infected with foot and mouth disease begins with fever and vomiting. Upon examination of the mouth, small ulcers like fever blisters are found inside the cheeks and on the tongue. It is not a very severe disease in the human subject. Milk pasteurized at 140 degrees for twenty minutes is entirely safe even though from infected cows. The virus contained in the milk does not resist heat well. There is no reason to be agitated about this disease from the standpoint of danger to human beings. That danger is small.

The cost will be in cows that must be sacrificed and in money that the government must spend. This cost will run into millions. There is no cure for it. While a certain percentage of animals recover, the contagiousness of the disease is such that all animals known to be affected should be destroyed. One cow may infect ten others. The cheapest plan is to kill the infected ones.

HOT STOVE JIMMY'S AID FACES SERIOUS CHARGE.

"Red" Frez, Democratic Twenty-first Ward Henchman, Arrested on Complaint of 15 Year Old Girl

Joe ("Red") Frez, lieutenant of "Hot Stove" Jimmy Quinn, boon companion of "Prince Arter" Quinn, and himself a Twenty-first ward Democratic power at election time, was arrested yesterday on a serious charge.

The real complainant in the case is said to be a 15 year old girl, but the warrant on which Frez was taken into custody was sworn out by Miss Sue Emmeline Welch, a probation officer.

Frez, who is said to have been employed of late by the Empire Loan bank, a pawnshop at Clark and Erie streets once noted as the meeting place of "Prince Arter" and police henchmen, was in his room in the St. Lawrence hotel at North Clark and Indiana streets when the police called.

He had a bondsman handy—one Herman Cohn of 4434 Vincennes avenue. Cohn, speeding on his errand in a motor car, got a $2,500 surety approved by Municipal Judge Uhlir and had Frez out almost before he was in.

CALLS CHICAGO CROOKS' HAVEN

Kavanagh Blames 'Maudlin' Juries and Jurists Who Coddle Criminals.

DECRIES FINE SYSTEM.

That crime flourishes in Chicago because Chicago is least protected against lawlessness of any city in the world was the statement of Judge Marcus Kavanagh in an address to members of the Irish Fellowship club at the Hotel La Salle yesterday.

"While Chicago is not the most lawless town in the world," Judge Kavanagh said, "it yet becomes the part of sheer patriotism to make public the fact that the thief, the holdup man, the burglar, and the murderer may pursue his calling here with less fear of molestation and better chance of escape than in any other great metropolis in the world.

Six Murders in a Week.

"We have an average of six murders a week—almost one a day. Yet there has not been a murderer executed for nearly three years, and out of 900 murderers brought to trial in that time those sentenced to life imprisonment one might almost count on the fingers of his hands.

"This is because the maudlin citizenship on the juries lacks respect for our laws. Three-fourths of our more desperate crimes are committed by paroled convicts, set free by misdirected pity."

Judge Kavanagh arraigned judges who by imposing fines or turning a prisoner over to the medical profession for treatment encourage the offense, he said, rather than punish the offender.

Judges Themselves Break Law.

"By what right," he asked, "does the Municipal court fine a pickpocket? The law says he shall go to the penitentiary. Shall the judge himself break the law? What justification has the Criminal court judge for letting the burglar or holdup man off with a workhouse sentence? I believe in clemency to first offenders, but not in coddling criminals by finding excuses for setting them free or turning them over to the medical profession.

"We cannot cure meanness with mustard plasters, or pilferers with pills. Punishment is the greatest reformatory agent in the world."

Judge Kavanagh advocated the revocation of the licenses of saloonkeepers who harbor and befriend pickpockets.

"Destroy the nest and eggs of these vermin," he said, "and you will destroy them. We have no need for new laws. But we have need for our public officials and our juries to enforce the laws on our statute books, and enforce them as written."

Held in Mann Act Case.

Louis R. Gillman, a furniture salesman, yesterday was held to the federal grand jury by United States Commissioner Lewis F. Mason on charges of violating the Mann act. He is alleged to have transported Miss Beatrice Mary Friskney, alias Mrs. Edward Shaw, from Houston, Tex., to Chicago for immoral purposes. Gillman's wife, who is employed as a stenographer in a Houston hotel, made the complaint

WITCHES FROLIC AT BALL OF WOMAN'S TRADE LEAGUE.

Girl Workers in Numbers Attend Annual Halloween Party—Proceeds Go Toward Rest Room.

Witches frolicked in the subdued light of the ballroom of the Hotel La Salle last night. The occasion was the sixth Halloween ball of the Women's Trade Union league.

Miss Agnes Nestor, president of the league, and Victor Olander of the Lake Seaman's union, followed by Mrs. Raymond Robins and John J. Fitzpatrick, president of the Federation of Labor, led the grand march which started the witches on their frolic. Members of the Garment Workers' union, the Necktie Workers, the Office Employés, the Suspender Makers, the Cigar Box Makers, the Teachers' federation, and the Household Workers were present in numbers.

Mrs. Helen McCurdy Edwards, chairman of the ball committee, said the proceeds would go toward a restroom for the girls in the loop.

Among those who attended were Mrs. Charles M. Walker, Miss Ellen Gates Starr, Miss Jane Addams, Mrs. William F. Dummer, Miss Mary McDowell, Miss Harriet Vittum, Mrs. Harold Ickes, Miss Elizabeth Fabian, Prof. Charles Zueblin, and Roland Webster.

WHERE'S WILLIAM G. GROAT?

Boy Anxious to See Him at Oak Forest Before He Dies.

Unless William G. Groat, who formerly lived at 2023 Iowa street, hurries to the Oak Forest tuberculosis hospital today it is not likely that he will be in time to say good-by to his boy, his companion for twenty-two years. Last Friday nurses at the institution moved Harold Groat to the "death chamber." It is not thought that he can live till tomorrow. He has asked that his father, who disappeared on Aug. 18, be brought to his bedside.

"The doctors give me until Sunday night," whispered Harold to his sister, Mrs. Mildred Durham of 524 Drake avenue, who visited him yesterday. "I'll try and hold out until Monday, for I want to see dad. He'll have to hurry."

According to Mrs. Durham, her father walked out of the home last August and nothing has been heard of him since. It is believed that he is still in Chicago. He was well known around Halsted and Root streets.

SHE WAS HIS STORY HEROINE

First He Dreams of Her, Then He Discovers Her and Proposes.

NOW GIRL ASKS $10,000.

She was the heroine of his first short story. When he wrote it he had yet to see her for the first time. He just lit his pipe and dreamed her, in fact. But when she came along in the flesh he knew her at a glance. They met. They talked. When she had gone he sat down at his trusty typewriter and wrote a letter to her—the first of many. And then—and then—

Yesterday she sued him for breach of promise, writing the last chapter in the romance. For that last chapter she demands a $10,000 prize.

An Impetuous Chap.

She is Miss Beatrice King, and she lives on the north side. He is Edward A. Barrymore, western representative of the New York Telegraph.

Edward, as Miss King tells the story, is a most impetuous chap. He began his shower of love letters, she says, the day after he met her, and in the first of them told her about his imaginary ideal.

"I have asked my sister to reread the first short story I ever wrote"—so runs what Miss King asserts is her literary lover's first note—"and she will find therein the verygirl I met today. I might say that the heroine of my first short story was my ideal and I was very much in love with my phantom sweetheart. Sister declared no such girl ever lived. In fact, I was not quite so sure of it myself at that time."

But Ned Wasn't Ready.

The girl—perhaps, considering the circumstances, it should be written GIRL—says she was to have been married to the impetuous "Yours forever and a day Ned," on Sept. 29, 1913. But Ned wasn't ready. He expected money from home and, pending its arrival, Miss King says he put over the wedding until Nov. 1.

But to date the "phantom girl" is only a phantom bride, while she says Miss Margaret Dooley of 62 East Thirty-sixth place has replaced her in Barrymore's affections. Miss Dooley could not be reached last night.

1,000 EXTRA POLICE ON JOB.

Called Off Special Duty by Chief to Watch Gates on Halloween.

One thousand policmen were called off special duty and detailed to patrol beats last night on orders from Chief Gleason to prevent or lessen Halloween annoyances and pranks.

"I figured this additional force of 1,000 men could aid in the task of saving the fence gates and protecting property in general from the usual Halloween celebrators," said the chief.

"This sort of amusement has been dying out gradually, but it still exists."

MAN VISITOR IN RAYMOND CASE? WIFE IS AMUSED

Assistant State's Attorney Gives Out Statement on Mysterious Poisoning.

The City News bureau last night sent out an interview with Assistant State's Attorney Charles Center Case Jr. in connection with the poisoning of Jules N. Raymond.

"I have evidence enough to present to the grand jury which will be sworn in tomorrow," said Prosecutor Case, "but I believe that the matter will be held up until Mr. Raymond is sufficiently recovered for him to leave the Columbus Memorial hospital.

"We are now searching for a man visitor at the Raymond house while Mr. Raymond was in the hospital. He is believed to know something of the case and might be able to throw light on the charge which has been made that Mrs. Raymond might have had a motive in wishing to be rid of her husband.

Man May Have Information.

"I will not say that she was infatuated with this man, that her husband was an obstacle in the way of her happiness, and that she attempted to poison him. But he may be able to furnish valuable information. We understand that he was a man of about 35 years of age and that he stayed at the Raymond home for several days. Six detectives are out searching for him.

"He stayed at the Raymond home for such a time that the neighbors began to gossip. I myself visited the home and questioned the maid about this man. He may be just a friend or he might have been her brother."

Says He Is "Clifford Young."

A reporter asked Mrs. Raymond about the mysterious stranger, and she laughed.

"Why, that's simple," she said. "He was Clifford Young, a young man from Bath, N. Y., who came to Chicago to get a position at my husband's suggestion. He is 20 years old, and we met him at Clanklake, Michigan, last summer. I believe he was once a clerk in a hotel in Detroit.

"He is now attending the Thomas Aero school in Bath. He was forced to return there when he found that my husband was in the hospital and could not find a position for him. If Mr. Case wants him he can send to New York, but it won't do any good."

"Doesn't Young mean something to you further than that he is an acquaintance of your husband's?" she was asked.

"Perfectly Absurd," She Declares.

"How ridiculous," she said. "That's perfectly absurd. A mere boy, why think of it, how foolish. I'm in love with my husband and why should I want to kill him or keep company with any one else?"

"Isn't it a fact that you associated to some extent with other young men of the neighborhood?" she was asked.

"I deny that absolutely," she cried. "O, it's too foolish to talk about."

Further developments in the case during the day were the attempts of the police to obtain a statement from Mr. Raymond and the disclosures that he had suspected his wife of attempting to poison him, but refused for a time to file any charges against her, beyond asking that she be committed to the detention hospital.

Police Begin Investigation.

Whether or not Raymond will make a statement is problematical. Previous to his wife's confinement at the detention hospital he had stoutly refused to make a charge or complaint of any kind against her. The police took a hand in the case yesterday, but were able to learn nothing. Capt. W. P. O'Brien of the detective bureau, acting on his own initiative, communicated with Capt. Max Danner at the Sheffield avenue station and asked that detectives be sent to the Columbus hospital to obtain a statement from Raymond.

Two detectives went to the institution, but were met by Attorney Cecil Page, counsel for Mr. Raymond, and several doctors and nurses. They were told that Mr. Raymond could be seen later, but that his condition at the present time is such that they deemed it unwise to bother him with the case.

Daughter Is Located.

Attorney Page said that because of Mr. Raymond's condition he himself had not talked to him except for a few moments at a time. Attorney Charles E. Erbstein intimated during the day that he will start habeas corpus proceedings to obtain possession of Mrs. Raymond's 6 year old daughter, June, unless the mother is permitted to see her. It was learned that the girl had been turned over to Attorney Page by Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Jennings, friends of the Raymond family.

"We have no objection in the world to Mrs. Raymond seeing her daughter," said Mr. Page. "Mr. Erbstein communicated with me today and informed me that Mrs. Raymond desired to see the child. I told him that I thought the matter could be arranged. Mrs. Raymond has not communicated with me yet, and today was the first time that Mr. Erbstein had talked to me, although he knew I was Mr. Raymond's attorney.

Husband Can't Be Bothered.

"I know where the girl is. She is with friends. She had been left at the Raymond house alone in charge of a maid and we thought she should be taken care of. Besides, the little girl should be going to school. I don't know whether we would permit Mrs. Raymond to have custody of her. I have not even bothered Mr. Raymond with that question now, although he knows that his wife has been liberated from the detention hospital. He is in no condition to worry over matters of that kind now.

"I would want to see Mrs. Raymond first before we gave the child back to her. Of course there is the possibility that she might leave the city and take the girl with her. There is nothing to prevent that. But we do not want any court proceedings if we can avoid it and I have no doubt that Mrs. Raymond and I can reach an agreement whereby she can see her daughter. I would not consent to a meeting, however, unless I or some friend of the family were along."

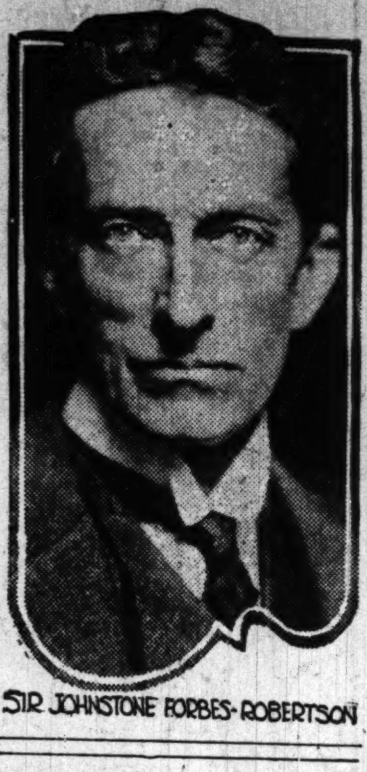
Knows About Fly Paper.

As far as could be learned no other witnesses were questioned at the state's attorney's office during the day. Attorney Erbstein asserted that he knew who placed the poison fly paper in the coat pocket of the little girl, but refused to say who it was.

To Mr. Raymond is ascribed the statement that his wife had been in the habit of purchasing from four to five 50 cent bottles of bromo seltzer a week. Each bottle is supposed to contain twenty-four doses. The drug contains acetanalid, which acts as a depressant.

Raymond is said to have confided his fear of being poisoned to his physician, Dr. Anna Allen Anderson.

Actor Who Bids Chicago Good-by.



SIR JOHNSTONE FORBES-ROBERTSON

ROBERTSON BIDS US ALL "GOOD-BY"

Says Acting Will Not Suffer Because of Motion Pictures.

GOOD WORD FOR WIFE.

With the last words of Hamlet—"the rest is silence"—Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson made his farewell appearance in Chicago as an actor last evening at the Blackstone theater. Between the acts he was presented with a wreath of autumn leaves, and after the performance he made a farewell address.

He spoke optimistically of the state of acting and the drama, and said that he feared no competition from motion photographs or variety theaters.

Praise in Silence.

"I do not hold with speechmaking after a performance," he began, "but perhaps on this occasion it would be ungrateful of me if I did not say a few words of thanks for the cordial way in which we have been received this month in our different interpretations. In the name of my company and Miss Cowie I beg to thank you most sincerely. The applause has been generous—above all, your silence and attention has been most encouraging to us and the interpreters because it is that silence which gives us the greatest possible encouragement, and we know we are interesting the audience before whom we are playing.

"I think that since I first went on the stage it is very gratifying to me that my calling has advanced by leaps and bounds both here and in the old country. It is a very different thing to what the stage was forty years ago when I first began to act upon it. The horizon has considerably cleared. We all realize now that the drama is a great educator, equally with painting, sculpture, and music—that the drama walks, practically, so to speak, hand in hand with the other great arts.

Good Word for Wife.

"I hope," said he in conclusion, "that at some future time my wife, Miss Gertrude Elliott, will appear before you, if she is so fortunate as to secure some play which has the elements of success and to bring it to Chicago. When she does and you see my wife upon the stage I hope that some little ghost of a memory of me may pass through you as you watch her acting.

"I thank you all most sincerely for the cordial support you have given me since I have played here, and I leave your city, which has now become such a beautiful place, with its wonderful statues and buildings. May Chicago prosper ever and become what you all wish it to be—one of the great and beautiful cities of your vast and wonderful country.

"Will Not Say 'Goodby.'"

"Ladies and gentlemen, I will not say 'good-by,' I will only say 'good night.'"

Portions of the four plays of the repertory were given before a large audience, which paid advanced prices to be present at the valedictory.

GORDON STRONG CO-ED HOST.

Has 200 University Students Dance in Unused Space of Republic Building.

Two hundred students and co-eds from Chicago and Northwestern universities were guests of Gordon Strong last night at a Halloween party and dance on the second floor of the Republic building. Mr. Strong intimated to the students he was anxious to see them take advantage of the opportunity of holding their dances and parties in his building, and thus make use of the unused space. The entire student body of the two universities was invited. Next Saturday a dance will be held on the second and third floors.

Phones Big Factory Departments; Refuses to Be Pulled from Smoke.

PLANT'S LOSS, $100,000.

Miss Nellie Deutsch of 6529 South Carpenter street, telephone operator at the plant of the Decorators' Supply company, at 2547 Archer avenue, was struggling with a wisp of hair which persisted in creeping out from under a back comb yesterday when there came a muffled roar, a crackling sound, and a puff of smoke rolled through the offices on the first floor.

A number of girls, stenographers and clerks, jumped for their hats and coats. Miss Deutsch plugged in on the switchboard and called "Main 0." Past the switchboard hurried the clerks and stenographers, choking and spluttering from the smoke. Some stopped beside the railing around Miss Deutsch's sanctum and called to her to come on. She did not hear. She was plugging in on one department of the plant after another and notifying the employés to flee.

Refuses to Go.

Finally one of the girls reached over and tugged at her arm.

"Aw, get out!" exclaimed Miss Deutsch. "You'd better get out while you've got time, or there'll be nobody home but the remains. I'm goin' to stay here until I've called 'em all up, and I'll get along much faster if you quit pulling at my sleeve."

And so she stayed while the flames crept from the rear and began crackling toward the offices. The firemen arrived and streams of water were shooting through some of the windows, but none of them came near Miss Deutsch, and she remained at the switchboard until every line had been called. Then, when her eyes were red with smoke, she put on her hat and coat and walked out past a group of firemen who gazed open mouthed.

That's one reason why every one in the plant got safely out by piling down fire escapes on all sides of the structure which almost covers an entire block. Another reason was pure luck, for in the part of the plant in which the fire broke out the flames swept through as fast as a man can run.

Barely Time to Jump.

"It must have been spontaneous combustion," said William Grage, a department manager, "for there was a puff and then the fire raced through the room so fast the men barely had time to jump to the windows and through the doors."

Soon after the first firemen reached the scene a 4-11 alarm was turned in, and Fire Marshal Thomas O'Connor came to direct the work. Several explosions occurred and it was seen that one whole section of the plant was doomed. The efforts of the firemen were then directed to preventing the spread of the flames to a row of ten or twelve frame cottages to the east of the plant. The families of all the cottages fled to the streets with some of their belongings.

Firebrands set fire to the roofs of the shoe store of Benjamin Woolberg at 2307 South Halsted street and the cottage of Mrs. John Dominick at 2538 Lime street.

Estimates $100,000 Loss.

William Wolforth, president of the company, estimated the loss to the building and contents at $100,000.

"An investigation will be necessary to show what caused the fire," he said. "I have no idea as to that now. Our losses probably will reach $100,000. We were fully insured."

Palos Park to Be Village.

Palos Park is to be incorporated as a village, it was decided yesterday, when 159 citizens, five more women than men, voted on the proposition. By a majority of 9 the community voiced its desire to incorporate, and a majority of 19 favored the commission form of government.

AXEL CHYTRAUS ANGERS JUDGE

Former Magistrate Will Be Cited on a Charge of Contempt.

'RUN-IN' WITH LAWYER

An order directing former Judge Axel Chytraus to show cause Monday why he should not be punished for contempt of court was issued yesterday by Judge Windes in the Circuit court.

Mr. Chytraus, so it is alleged in the petition on which the order was entered, has made himself liable to a heavy fine—or even to imprisonment—by accusing Henry W. Leman, one of the lawyers opposed to him in an action before Master in Chancery Ellis, of having told an "unqualified, deliberate untruth."

This, says the petition, is the one time judge's third outbreak since the hearings before the master begun. On two other occasions, it is asserted, he won a rebuke from Judge McGoorty by threatening to give Mr. Leman "a punch in the jaw" and by calling Frank H. Culver, associated with Leman, a "contemptible cur."

The case on trial before the master is that of Sidney C. Eastman, referee in bankruptcy, against James S. Dole and others. It is being heard together with a cross bill filed by Frances E. Dole Leman et al.

HAVE YOU THE HAIR OF A MUSICIAN?

Bald or thin-haired musicians are unknown. This same may be said of actors. The reason is that constant appearance before the public makes constant care of appearance a habit. And constant care of hair insures a heavy, attractive growth. In cleansing the hair it is not advisable to use a makeshift but always use a preparation made for shampooing only. You can enjoy the best that is known for about three cents a shampoo by getting a package of canthrox from your druggist; dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and your shampoo is ready. After its use the hair dries rapidly with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its lustre and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.—Advertisement.

FOR THE BELGIANS.

Tonight at the Sunday Evening club Mme. Vandervelde, the wife of Belgium's premier, makes appeal to this community on behalf of the stricken people of Belgium.

No appeal from unhappy Europe can touch us as does this, and Americans will respond generously to it, although the war of which the Belgians are the chief and most undeserving victims has not left us uninjured, but will add to our home responsibilities heavily before winter is gone.

Yet Belgium is prostrate, the Belgians homeless, stripped, and starving. If ever there was need for generous giving here it is.

WAR AND AMERICAN POLICY.

The effect of the present European conflagration upon the future of war is one of the interesting speculations of today. Opinion runs the whole gamut from that of the idealist optimist who declares this is the last war to that of the cynic who thinks the conflict now going on will breed so many enmities and so deepen traditional hostilities that as soon as the combatants have recovered they will fall upon each other again.

Probably the truth lies between these extremes. It is reasonable to believe that wars will be less frequent in the future than in the past, though this may not appear during the next generation. If the exhaustion of Europe is complete and no serious disturbances take place in Asia, or between oriental forces and occidental, a period of peace undoubtedly will follow. But this period of exhaustion may be followed by a period of unstable equilibrium, which may be marked by violent and repeated struggles until another adjustment is reached.

There is earnest hope, indeed, that as a result of the staggering lesson of waste conveyed by the present war something in the nature of a federation of peace may be evolved, allowing universal disarmament and the submission of all international disputes to a world tribunal, the decrees of which will have their sanction in world opinion and their support in an international executive backed by an international police force.

In the United States especially this seems a simple matter, and we have a suspicion that Mr. Bryan already has his grip packed against his departure to take his destined place as first chief justice of the supreme court of the world. Many members of the peace society we are sure are working nights on constitutions of the world. There is a keen sense in this republic of the future, and an abiding conviction that we are going to preside over it. We in America have more than a suspicion that when victory has perched upon the banner of one party or the other in the European war, or peace is sought by the exhausted combatants, we shall be invited to the counsel table and possess perhaps a controlling and decisive influence upon the proceedings.

These roseate expectations are pleasant, but they will do harm if allowed to affect national policy, as they may do through the influence of Mr. Bryan, an incorrigible doctrinaire, whose faith in treaties cannot be shaken by the mere facts of history, past or present.

With doctrinaire pacifism stronger in Washington than ever before, perhaps, except during the regime of Jefferson, and with a more pervasive pacifist propaganda going on in the country than is realized, there is need for an active counter-propaganda, which shall insist that our policy shall not be based on any expectation of the imminent arrival of the millennium, that it shall not be controlled by an unavowed peace at any price sentiment, that it shall be pacific without being pusillanimous, that it shall not ignore facts either of human nature or international relations which do not square with the hopes of the utopian pacifist, that it shall insist upon a reasonable acknowledgment of the fact that egotism and selfishness and aggression are not purged from human affairs, and still must be taken into account.

The perversion of the peace propaganda by impracticables and sentimentalists, which shows in opposition to all measures for naval and military defense, ought to be challenged wherever it appears. It does not represent the main current of peace sentiment in America, which is sane, if rather ingenuous in some respects. We are all pacifists in the United States, holding war in detestation and mere military glory in indifference or humorous contempt. This is so true that what we need is to be waked up to the fact that we cannot afford to neglect national defense on the comfortable theory that we are immune from aggression or free from the entanglements of world relations.

AFFAIRS AT HOME.

Local political conditions this year have not encouraged observing men to believe that good results might be obtained easily. It will be regarded as an event of fortunate chance if local government be not given a setback, so far as efficiency and probity be involved.

If there has been apathy on the part of the citizens, it is easily explained. The war in Europe not only has been engrossing, but it has in a way belittled our own governmental problems. The peace and security enjoyed by the American citizen may seem to him to give warrant to the methods of his government, no matter what form that government may take.

Thus, realizing his security from such disaster as Europe presents, and engrossed giving attention to the catastrophe abroad, he may permit, under the cover of his inattention, a relatively inconsiderable but consequential disaster to overtake him here.

His local government is seriously involved. The care which may or may not be given dependents of the community is at stake. The elections which hereafter for four years will be held are at stake. The administration of municipalities such as the sanitary district is at stake. The administration of tax assessing laws is at stake.

The citizen's representation in congress and in the state legislature is in the issue. All these things may affect him so imperceptibly that if he be in fortunate circumstances he may not observe them knowingly, but they affect him, and continued deterioration and continued indifference to it mean something that might be called, without any sensationalism, ruin.

We manage to survive our political mistakes. That gives us confidence that we shall always be able to survive them. The mistake could be made more disastrous. A city, state, or nation cannot indefinitely survive its political mistakes. They begin to count against the morals and the stability, against the permanency of that city, state, or nation.

They are as insidious as they are, taken separately, imperceptible. Here in Chicago citizens cannot afford to look with indifference upon what may happen as the result of the coming election. It's now time to attend to affairs at home.

POLITICS AND HYPHENATED AMERICANS.

An influential and high minded citizen who is of the Jewish faith sends us an article appearing in the local periodical, the Sentinel, in the interest of Democratic candidates. He writes: "The inclosed 'Appeal to Thinking Voters,' culled from the Sentinel for Oct. 23, presents a fair specimen of pandering to the religious prejudices in the present campaign. I do not know that 'Jewish-Americans,' any more than 'Methodist-Americans' or 'Presbyterian-Americans,' are called upon to prove their patriotism." (The article declares that "while all Americans are interested in upholding the president in maintaining peace, how much more so must we citizens of Jewish-American birth be interested in doing so," and that "the opportunity to prove our patriotism is here.") "It does not appear plain to me," writes our correspondent with justified irony, "that this proof must be in the form of voting for one or the other political party. Another editorial from your pen on 'Hyphenated Americanism' could not be a voice in the wilderness before the November elections. The managers of the Democratic campaign seem to be most in need of it, though it cannot hurt the others, either."

The Sentinel article is typical of the use made in every campaign of race and religious prejudices. At this time the evil is exaggerated because of the war, which among a large class of citizens inflames race or nationalist distinctions. This is to the advantage of selfish politicians and to the hurt of all Americans, hyphenated or not. It is disloyalty to the United States, to the state, to the city, and no politician should be allowed to resort to the race appeal without prompt and vigorous rebuke.

Hyphenated Americanism is going to be more vexatious and injurious for a while. Let us hope it will be followed by a reaction in favor of plain Americanism, and let us not merely hope but work for that reaction. Men like our correspondent are working for true Americanism, and there is plenty of work for us all to do. What we need most of all, perhaps, is rebellion among the best class of men of European ancestry against those who exploit "hyphenated Americanism" for their own profit.

SOCIALIST ON WAR.

[From Pearson's.]

Now, you know who made this war. Also, you know why the real cause has not been told by the press, generally. If you do not, here's why. To admit that Business as now conducted has caused this war would be to admit that Business as now conducted and proposed by our great business men may drive us into a war. With the press admitting that, public opinion would be against some things the business men want; the business men would be displeased; the press would lose much profit. BECAUSE the press lives on and for Business; and will not tell you the truth when the truth, if known, would hit Business hard. Right now the press is making us believe that the thing for us to do is to grab all the foreign trade.

O, yes, let's forget our troubles at home—let's forget Colorado—let's forget West Virginia—let's forget Lawrence and Paterson—let's forget everything that the men who control business in this country do for bigger profits; let's get the foreign trade for them so that they can make still bigger profits. Now, see here, is this sense? If we have war right here at home for the sake of profits—if we shoot each other for somebody's profit—if the men who control our mines and factories will hire gunmen to shoot down workers for the sake of profit, will those men hesitate to drive us into a great war when their profits are threatened? Will they? Is there any chance that they will hesitate? Is there?

We are running right down the same road that Germany took and at the end is bound to be war. Let's stop. The thing for our government to do is to promote fair dealing at home. Give the workingman here fair treatment, let him get what he earns—that's the first duty of our government. When it has made the men who control business do that there is plenty of time to worry about foreign trade for them. You see what caused European war. Do you want war? We are going right into it ultimately. It can't be dodged if we keep on this way. You'd better think it over.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.

[Copyright: 1914: By the Brentwood company.]

THERE is a George Washington fighting in the ranks of the Austrian army as an officer of cavalry against the Russians in Galicia. No longer in the first blush of youth, for he is considerably over 50, and a widower; he is the last of the line of the German-Austrian branch of that old English family of the counties of York and Northampton, which furnished the United States of America its first president.

The American Washingtons, as every one knows, are descended from that John Washington who, being concerned in an attempt to overthrow Oliver Cromwell and to restore the old Stuart dynasty, was obliged to flee across the Atlantic to join the other Royalist exiles in Virginia. He was the great-grandfather of George Washington, the first president of the United States.

The German-Austrian Washingtons are descended from Henry Washington, a younger brother of John, and whose son, after distinguishing himself in the battle of Worcester and at the storming of Bristol, under Charles I.'s nephew, Prince Rupert of Bohemia and of the Rhine, followed Charles II. into his exile in Holland, where he married Clara van der Lauen, daughter of the rich burgomaster of Rotterdam.

The Washingtons flourished in Holland for considerably over a hundred years, furnishing several officers to the Dutch navy and army, until at the beginning of the nineteenth century James Washington, after visiting Paris, made his way to Munich, joined the Bavarian army, took part in the wars that brought about the downfall of Napoleon, and died as chief of the king of Bavaria's military household, as commander in chief and reorganizer of the Bavarian army, and as a Bavarian baron.

Baron Maximilian Washington, his only son, transferred his allegiance from the crown of Bavaria to that of Austria, became owner of the castle and estate of Poels, near Graz, a chamberlain and privy councilor to the emperor, as well as a member of the Austrian house of lords, and married the Royal Duchess Frederica of Oldenburg, of the sovereign dynasty of that name, no objection being raised by the reigning grandduke of Oldenburg to the match, owing to the distinguished character of his ancestry.

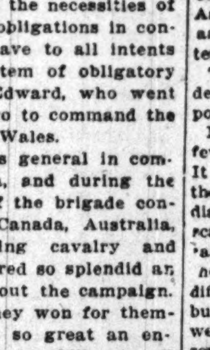
Baron Maximilian and his wife were so proud of their American kinsman, the first president of the United States, that when their only son was born they named him George. He bears the same arms as his illustrious namesake in America, namely, the shield with three stars and two stripes, which was the origin of the present flag of the United States; lost his wife, Gisela, Countess von Weisersheimb, a couple of years ago, and if he falls in the present war his line will become extinct.

His father, Baron Maximilian, had a younger brother of the name of Charles. The latter was a distinguished officer of the Bavarian army and a chamberlain of the late King Louis II., and in 1862 he presented himself to the United States consul general at Frankfort-on-the-Main, William Murphy, to inquire under what circumstances he could volunteer for service in the United States army during the civil war.

On that occasion he produced papers establishing his identity, as well as his genealogy, of which the consul general retained copies, and which are now in the possession of the Historical society of New York

He failed to put his project into execution because he happened to fall in love with an Austrian countess, Marie Butler, of the Austrian branch of the Irish house of Butler of Clonebouth, whom he married.

The Dutch line of the Washingtons became extinct in 1843 with the death of Capt. Jacob Washington of the Royal Dutch navy in the Dutch East Indies.



Lieut. Gen. Sir Edward Hutton, who in his 66th year has been called from his retirement to command one of the divisions of the new Third army, was known in his younger days as "Curly" Hutton, and may be said to have done more than any other officer in the British army to organize the military defenses of King George's big oversea dependencies.

The Australians today are to such an extent alive to the necessities of national defense and to their obligations in connection therewith that they have to all intents and purposes adopted the system of obligatory service. This is due to Sir Edward, who went out there twenty-two years ago to command the military forces of New South Wales.

From 1898 until 1900 he was general in command of the Canadian militia, and during the Boer war was given charge of the brigade constituted by the troops from Canada, Australia, and New Zealand, comprising cavalry and mounted infantry, which rendered so splendid an account of themselves throughout the campaign.

In fact, the laurels which they won for themselves in that conflict aroused so great an enthusiasm among Australians as to obliterate all their former disinclination to take military training and service seriously, and Sir Edward was invited to return to the antipodes to reorganize and command the military forces of the commonwealth, remaining in Australia for four years.

His term of office was brought to a close by a rather odd quarrel with the federal minister for defense at Melbourne. Sir Edward was in the habit of forwarding to the war department in England secret service messages in cipher.

But the federal minister for defense in Australia refused to pay for the cost of transmission unless a translation of the cables was furnished to him. Sir Edward, acting under instructions from the war department in England, declined to disclose the contents of his messages; not at all on the score of their confidential nature, but because it would have the effect of revealing the secret code of the war department in London to people who did not belong to the headquarters staff of the British army; to people, indeed, whose term of office at the department of defense in Australia was by no means of a permanent character.

The Australian administration, which was a labor cabinet, indorsed the attitude assumed by the minister of defense, and under the circumstances Sir Edward had no alternative but to resign and to return to England.

Married to a daughter of the Rev. Lord Charles Paulet, a granddaughter, therefore, of the thirteenth Marquis of Winchester and of Nottingham, Gen. Sir Edward Hutton has a number of other campaigns to his credit besides the Boer war, and is still fit and active in spite of his having been retired on the score of age several years ago, and is recognized as the greatest expert in Europe in everything regarding the organization and tactics of mounted infantry.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS.

SPEAKING before the recent conference of New York state health officers, Dr. Flexner described a method of making ultramicroscopic bacteria and their invisible microörganisms visible. He tells us that, using this method, he has discovered the bacterium of infantile paralysis.

There are certain microörganisms that are so small that no microscope will reveal them. They are so small that they pass through the meshes of a porcelain filter. Therefore they are spoken of as filterable viruses, and yet there is good evidence that they are present in the filtered liquids.

By planting some of this virus on suitable culture media and stimulating growth, the infantile paralysis germ will grow until a growth becomes perceptible. Furthermore, when this growth is examined under the microscope the individual microörganism is large enough to be seen with an ordinary microscope.

The foundation for a cure as well as for administrative control of infantile paralysis is being laid. Now that the germ has been discovered and a satisfactory way to grow it has been worked out, the discovery of the cure should go forward more rapidly.

Before this one several other discoveries had been made. It was known that it was a filterable virus, that this virus was found in the nose secretions as well as in various internal organs of those sick with the disease; that it was found in the nose secretions of well nurses in contact with cases of infantile paralysis, that monkeys could be infected with the disease, either by using the nose secretions from infected people or by allowing stable flies which had previously bitten patients with this disease to bite the susceptible monkey.

With the information we had it has been rather easy to kill off infantile paralysis, whenever it has threatened a community. This has been true for more than three years. When it enters a community it spreads until the people become afraid and take the necessary steps. When the necessary steps have been taken the disease yields and presently disappears.

Communities no longer need fear infantile paralysis. Now read this closely: What they need to fear is that the community may not take the necessary steps to protect itself against infantile paralysis.

Now that the cause has been discovered and a means of growing it worked out, the diagnosis of the disease in an early stage may be possible.

Of more importance still, it should be possible before long to examine the nose and throat secretions of the nurses and other attendants and decide who among those can go to school with safety and who must be kept at home in the interest of the general public.

Now, we must exclude from school everybody who has been in contact with a case of infantile paralysis, and we must keep them excluded for many weeks. When we do not know, it is necessary to play safe, and that means we must overdo.

The common history of this disease is that there is a slight increase in the number of cases, or else the first case appears in midsummer. From these some people are infected and a few get sick.

As the autumn comes on the number of cases increases until the mothers become agitated. Each new case serves as a focus, and around each focus there develop a number of cases and a still larger number of carriers.

By Nov. 1 the number of sick is considerable, the agitation is general, and the people are upholding the health department. By December the epidemic is abating.

From the standpoint of the people the most important point is what group of symptoms should cause a parent to suspect infantile paralysis and undertake to find out if the disease is present.

The first question which a parent should ask is as to whether there has been exposure either to a person sick with infantile paralysis or to a person recently in contact with a case of infantile paralysis. As a part of the same question is the query as to whether the sick child has been bitten by flies recently.

The answer to this question has a great deal to do with the decision on other points.

Most cases start with a sharp onset of fever. The fever may go as high as 104. It lasts about a week. As the fever starts there is often vomiting and sometimes diarrhea. Most mothers know that, when scarlet fever or any of the infectious diseases are coming on, the child acts as though something were impending. It is difficult for the mother to say what it is, but somehow the child acts as though it were getting something. The mother senses some form of infection.

Infantile paralysis starts that way. Sometimes it sneaks up slowly, gradually, and pussyfooted; but that is the exception. There is a moderate amount of headache, but not much if any more than for any other form of infection. There is prostration, weakness, and this is greater than in other forms of infection.

As you note, this is the first symptom to which we have referred in which this disease differs from the other infections. The prostration may be accompanied by sweating. There is a little sore throat, but that is not peculiar to this disease. There is pain. It is worse in the neck and back, but it is considerable in the legs and arms.

Note the second point of difference: The pain and tenderness are much greater than in the other forms of infection. Many parents will take a chance with a sick child for a few days. They know how to ease headaches, give purges, and reduce fevers, and they think it safe to treat along these lines for a few days.

If by the end of the second day the scarlet rash has appeared or by the fourth the measles bumps appear, they send for a physician or not, as they decide. By the fourth day, if the fever stays up, the aches continue and no rash has appeared, the parent generally sends for a physician. Some hold off for a while longer.

By the seventh day in infantile paralysis the fever is disappearing. About this time the parents notice that the child is paralyzed. Probably before that they have thought the pains in the knees and neck meant rheumatism. When the beginning paralysis is noted the mother in wild alarm sends for a physician.

Every now and then a child will be so slightly sick that the mother thinks the little feverishness is from the child's stomach and that the pains are growing pains. After this almost unnoted illness has continued for a week, she notes a little paralysis, and for the first time she suspects that her child has had an infantile paralysis.

It would be outside the bounds for this article to go further with the symptoms. This article is for the guidance of the parent who is ordinarily in control of the ship. As soon as there is reason to suspect infantile paralysis he or she summons an experienced pilot and turns the ship over to him.

The one point important to remember about the paralysis of infantile paralysis is that in the first week of the disease there is no paralysis, and that the shriveled legs which any one can recognize is an appearance developed weeks and sometimes months after the disease has started. The mother who thinks that the disease in her child cannot be infantile paralysis, because there is no paralysis and no shriveled legs, is liable to get her child into serious difficulties.

Another point: Infantile paralysis, more correctly, anterior poliomyelitis, affects grown people.

Infantile paralysis should be diagnosed just as early as possible. The earlier the diagnosis is made, the better the chance of recovery, the fewer the number of people exposed, and the better the chance to escape extensive wasting of the muscles.

It is now generally agreed that the treatment to prevent wasting of the muscles should be begun within the first week, just as the fever disappears. It should begin with massage and electricity. As the fever leaves and the pains get less, the electricity, massage, and bath treatments are to be increased.

The disease destroys the nerve cells, but does not harm the muscles. Massage and electricity are given to keep the muscles healthy until such time as another set of nerves may learn how to make use of the muscles. This takes time. Unless the muscles are exercised by massage and electricity, they will waste from disuse before the nerves can learn to use them.

To try to restore shriveled muscles is to waste energy. What is to be done must be at least begun within the first few weeks. To get the best results it must be begun before the fever has left.

It is important to have a diagnosis as early as possible, in order to take proper precautions to prevent the spread of the disease. In 1911 the American Medical association, through a committee of its section on preventive medicine, proposed the following method of preventing the spread of infantile paralysis:

"1. Isolation and screening of all patients known to have or suspected of having the disease. Isolation must be instituted on suspicion. Three weeks from onset is suggested as the period of isolation, although only a surmise can be made on this point.

"2. Disinfection of all discharges from patients and of all articles used by them and their attendants.

"3. Fumigation of the premises with formaldehyde on release from isolation.

"4. A quarantine of persons in contact with patients does not seem justifiable. It is recommended, however, that members of patients' families be excluded from schools during the period of the patients' isolation and during the possible isolation period of a new case—that is, for three weeks following the end of the last exposure to the contagious person.

"5. The daily use of urotropin by those exposed may help. Dietetic errors should be avoided. Bowel troubles should be attended to and overexertion should be avoided."

The committee consisted of Dr. Frost of the public health service, Dr. Hill of the Minnesota board of health, and Dr. Dixon of the Pennsylvania board of health.

The committee said that the disease was difficult to control, since so many of the cases were abortive, and abortive infantile paralysis was liable to be diagnosed as rheumatism, typhoid, or something else; because there were so many carriers who had never been sick at all, and because convalescents were liable to carry the disease after they had recovered.

The latest report was that issued by a commission appointed by Health Commissioner Fronczak of Buffalo to study an epidemic in that city. This report was dated Aug. 25, 1913.

This commission saw no evidence that the schools spread the disease. The disease did not increase when the schools were opened. There was no special outbreak among the pupils of any one school.

The inference was that closing the schools was of no service in controlling an epidemic of infantile paralysis.

The members of the commission concluded that the disease was not highly contagious in the ordinary sense. They studied 260 cases in families where there were 761 children under 16 years of age. Five hundred and two of those children were exposed to the disease. Of these three contracted the disease and had typical cases, three had the disease somewhat atypically, and twenty-two had illnesses that were suspected of being poliomyelitis. The great majority went scot free

On the other hand, in nearly every case investigated it was impossible to say how the patient got the disease. "The family had absolutely no knowledge of any possible contact between the patient and any previous case." "Out of 273 cases investigated only forty-nine [18 per cent] gave any history whatsoever of contact with any previous case."

It seemed that the infection got into some Italian groups in Buffalo. There were not many cases, and, so far as superficial appearances go, the disease died out without attracting more than passing notice.

However, the brands had been widely scattered. When the disease began to attract attention the infecting virus was spread widely over the city. It was carried in the persons of people who were entirely well and without knowing it they infected others. Others quite unsuspecting were infected by the innocent carriers.

When the city became aroused, in spite of the difficulties, the department of health stopped the disease. Before it was stopped, however, there had been 294 cases. That many were recognized. Many more were not recognized. There were thirty-nine deaths. Of those that recovered many will be maimed for life.

RECORDING OF BIRTHS.

Chicago, Oct. 27.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Please tell me where I can secure a copy of the registration record of births, and also whether doctors are required to register births. It is my wish to see that the birth of my child has been properly recorded. E. PETERSON, 1408 East Seventy-sixth street.

Births have been recorded by the county clerk since 1886 (office, second floor county building, Clark and Washington streets). The department of health (room 708, city hall) kept a record of the births reported for the years 1898 to 1908, both inclusive. The Illinois statutes require physicians and midwives to report all births within thirty days after their occurrence. Information concerning birth records kept by them may be obtained from either the county clerk or department of health. Mr. Peterson is to be commended for the interest he is taking in protecting the future welfare of his child by seeing to it personally that its birth has been properly recorded. This is a duty every parent owes his child.

PAVING IRVING PARK BOULEVARD.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Can you give me any information as to when street improvements will be made on Irving Park boulevard, from the river west?
L. B. HUGHSON,

An estimate has been ordered for paving Irving Park boulevard from Cicero avenue to the Chicago river and the work will be done in the summer of 1915 if the assessment is confirmed before that time.

PETITION FOR NEW PAVEMENT.

Chicago, Oct. 27.—[To the Friend of the People.]—When the new curbing was laid on Carpenter street south of Fifty-ninth street, I was advised that the street would be repaired, but nothing has been done up to this time. H. E. C.

Carpenter street, from Fifty-ninth to Sixty-third streets, is an old, worn out macadam pavement, and the particular block referred to in this letter, from Fifty-ninth to Sixtieth street, is the only block in which there is curbing. There were some dangerous holes here, which were filled with concrete and old macadam. The street from Fifty-ninth to Sixty-third is badly in need of new pavement and proceedings should be commenced with the board of local improvements with that end in view.
WALTER G. LEININGER,
Superintendent of Streets.

NO LICENSE NECESSARY.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Kindly inform me if it is necessary or required by law to have a master plumber's license to do steam and gas fitting. No plumbing is to be done at all.
W. H. P.

No plumbing license is required to do steam and gas fitting. Only where plumbing is done is it necessary to have a plumber's certificate.

HAVE TITLE EXAMINED.

Neoga, Ill., Oct. 27.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—We bought a piece of property from the executors of an estate. The executors of the estate in turn divided the money received equally among the heirs. In case we sell the property will it be necessary for us to get a release from each of the heirs?
C. R. AND L. M.

In this, as in all transactions involving the transfer of real estate, the purchasers should have an attorney examine the title to the property and advise them whether or not they are obtaining such a title as is marketable and may be disposed of without trouble. We advise you to have an attorney examine the title to this property and to advise you as to what steps are necessary to make a valid transfer.

SHOULD ARRANGE FOR ADOPTION.

Chicago, Oct. 28.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A widower leaves a child, infant, in care of relatives and has not supported it for two years. Can the relatives claim the child if the father does not even write asking the condition of the baby? What is the best course to pursue?
F. A. W.

The father has the first right to the custody and control of his child. However, where he fails to support the child or to care for it, it is probable that the relatives who have taken care of the child would be allowed to keep it. In order to be assured of the right to keep the child the relatives should institute proceedings of adoption. This is done by filing a petition in the county court.

It appears that your wife is liable for the purchase price of these books, as provided by the signed contract, and you cannot avoid this liability for the reason alone that the books do not suit you or by returning the books.

WORKING OF PAROLE LAW.

Chicago, Oct. 28.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I am impelled by the state's attorney's unreasonable criticism of the parole law to offer a few thoughts in its defense. Having held the position of clerk of the Illinois state penitentiary for a term of ten years continuously, I feel that I have some knowledge of the efficiency of the law. The argument is urged that men are paroled and return to Chicago and immediately engage in their old criminal occupations. Grant this to be true. I would like to ask if the same man had been given a definite sentence under the old law and served his time out, would he not have been just as eager to engage in his old criminal avocation as if paroled?

The records of the penitentiary clearly establish the fact that the prisoners, on an average, have been held much longer under the parole system than when they were given a definite term by the court or jury for like offenses. Then, in view of these facts, those convicted and held under the parole law do not get back to follow their old business quite so soon. I have frequently heard inmates at Joliet condemn the parole system because they were kept in prison longer than if sentenced under the old law.

IS T. R.'S POWER WANING?

Oak Park, Ill., Oct. 26.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Has Theodore Roosevelt lost his power to charm, or are the people beginning to think for themselves? The colonel addressed a magnificent audience at the Coliseum Monday night. It was curious, interested, courteous, responsive to appeals based on reason and fair play, but critical to a degree and impatient of sophistry and buncombe. It was a sane crowd that refused to be swept off its feet, even by Roosevelt. From the spirit of it I should say that it was one-third Moose and two-thirds "anti." The majority had gone to see the man who shot lions in Africa and tagged the man eating fish of Brazil.

Here was the "Peerless Leader," who swept over Illinois and other western states two years ago like a prairie fire, addressing 15,000 persons who sat almost in silence when he said boastfully that he had refused to dine with William Lorimer. And he stopped and grinned and waited for the applause that came at first faintly, but refused to come again. It was not a Lorimer crowd, of course. The same critical silence marked many of the big chief's other climaxes against Sherman and Sullivan. It looked as if the audience had detected the hollow note in the sound of the speaker's voice. This most skillful of fiddlers had fiddled heroically, but the crowd wouldn't dance.

If this Coliseum "Moose meeting" reflects the sentiment of Chicago and Illinois, Sherman will have a walkover Nov. 3. But the Republican leaders should not be too cocksure. In war a good general always guards against a surprise of the enemy. G. O. P. PRIVATE.

FAILURE OF THE INCOME TAX.

Chicago, Oct. 27.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I see the incompetents of the many departments at Washington are complaining because Hull's income tax law has not produced as much income tax as they expected it would. They alone are at fault. They made an estimate which was merely a naked guess, and they guessed wrong. They might just as well have made their guess twice what they did, or only half what they did, as they had no basis whatever on which to base their guess.

No human being had any way of making anything like a reasonable estimate, as there were no facts obtainable. After Hull and company had fooled the president and many congressmen with his estimate he had to make some sort of excuse for the shortage, and hence asserted it was owing to tax dodgers! This gave McAdoo a chance, and at once he demanded authority to put at work a lot of "tax ferrets," and thus make needless places for a lot of hungry Democrats.

The needed authority was given Mr. McAdoo, and he had a regiment of his followers spying around and finding nothing to speak of. Doubtless in time some "startling" results will be sent forth, but I am sure, from what I hear from friends in the department, no discovery of fraud or intentional underestimate of tax due has been found. BERLIN BRIGHT BUT DIGNIFIED IN TIME OF WAR

Theaters and Cafes Are Open as Usual, but Night Life Now Is Decorous.

BY GUENTHER THOMAS.

BERLIN, Oct. 15.—An observant visitor who had not been in Berlin for several months and who has read in foreign papers descriptions of the terrible conditions in the kaiser's capital would be greatly surprised should he visit Berlin now. He would see that restaurants are filled as usual to their utmost capacity; he would observe masses of people going to and from their places of business or shopping; he would see many officers and soldiers in all sorts of uniforms, and he would notice announcements of theaters and concerts and other amusements.

But after a few more days he would admit that Berlin had changed a good deal, and to its advantage. The general aspect of the city is just as lively as usual, but many things which heretofore had been considered as necessarily connected with a cosmopolitan city's life have entirely disappeared.

The Gay Sinners Are Banished.

War quickly changes nations as well as individuals. Gay and giddy profligates who formerly populated certain streets in the heart of the city, have been swept away. Amusement places of no doubtful character have closed their doors. Large restaurants which formerly were crowded by loudly dressed men and women listening to the deafening sounds of so-called music by alleged Italian, Hungarian, or Bohemian bands, playing the latest songs of the worst kind until small hours of the morning, now employ decent orchestras playing good patriotic or serious music, and they close at 11.

The picture formerly presented to the visitor was deceiving. Americans observing Berlin's gay night life were mostly shocked, and they wondered how people used to such debaucheries were able to work and prosper. The truth is that real Berliners went to such places only when visitors from the provinces or abroad wanted to do Berlin at night.

Slumming has been the craze of every stranger visiting Berlin. When decorous people tried to stop such extravagance they were ridiculed for their "provincialism" and told to obey the old adage: "Live and let live." It is remarkable how quickly and how thoroughly all this has disappeared. There is plenty of opportunity for families to spend a Saturday or Sunday evening in a good restaurant. But nobody complains that he or she is sent to bed earlier than formerly. It smacks a little like paternalism, but a small dose of it hurts nobody.

A lively controversy has been going on in the public press, whether theaters and places of amusement should keep open at all. Some people are of the opinion that in times when a nation is engaged in a struggle for life and death it should have no time and no inclination to visit any places of amusement whatever. They antagonize both theaters and concerts. Others say that the war has crowded out of regular daily life so many other interests that the danger of becoming one-sided and narrow minded is great.

Max Rheinhardt's Activities.

All stages which have reopened have tried to overcome the difficulties in their way by giving patriotic or classic pieces with a patriotic prologue. Max Rheinhardt opened the "Deutsche theater" with a performance of Schiller's "Wallenstein's Lager," splendidly staged. Others have reproduced Ewald Von Kleist's "Hermannschlacht," celebrating the crushing defeat of the Romans under Varius by old Teutons under Arminius, and "Der Prins Von Hessen-Homburg" treating an episode of the wars of the great elector. The royal opera began with "Lohengrin," whose opening sentences allude to German unity and German power. It was followed by other Wagner operas, among them the "Meistersinger."

Shakspeare Still in Favor.

Another interesting question has been placed before the German public by Max Rheinhardt. He requested men of science, literature, and politics to express their opinion whether or not Shakspeare should be played on German stages at present. To the credit of the German people it must be stated that public men of all stations of life unanimously answered this question in the affirmative. The imperial chancellor, von Bethmann Hollweg, telegraphed from army headquarters in France short, but to the point: "Shakspeare belongs to the whole world and should be played as usual."

His predecessor, Prince Bülow, wrote: "Of course, Kleist, Hebbel, Goethe, and Schiller speak louder to our hearts at the present time, but Shakspeare should not be banished from our stage. He belongs to the oldest and most beautiful conquests made by German intellectualism, which we will defend against the whole world as we defend our material property. We have annexed Shakspeare long ago and will not give him up. We leave it to our adversaries to make themselves poor and ridiculous at the same time by banishing Wagner and Göthe, Beethoven and Schiller from their countries." Others point out that no other author has exposed British hypocrisy and British perfidy and British cruelty so mercilessly as Shakspeare. So Rheinhardt will continue to produce Shakspeare, although he was an Englishman.

Berlin Still Illuminated.

One little item of interest might be added. During the first days of the war the police president prohibited the use of electric light advertisements, as it was feared that coal and electric power might become scarce. Street lighting, however, was continued as usual, Berlin maintaining its reputation as being the best lighted city in the world. Coal production in Germany not only has not been decreased, but the rival Belgian coal mines in the neighborhood of Liege and Namur are being operated by German miners, increasing the output so that a full supply for the navy, as well as for industrial establishments, is assured. The police president has therefore rescinded his order, and cafés, restaurants, theaters, and stores may advertise evenings as before the war. If you remember that Paris and London are pitch dark after sundown, the change is the more noticeable.

War's Insane Waste by Robert Herrick

It has long been the habit to speak of us as the most wasteful of peoples. We have taken a sneaking satisfaction in our prodigality—we are rich enough, we feel, perhaps wrongly, to afford to waste. Large expenditure has seemed to go with our youth, our strength, our inexhausted country.

Americans have a mild contempt for the petty saving, what seems to us the miserliness, of European living. We curl our lips when we observe a scavenger in front of the café picking up industriously the cigar and cigaret ends in the gutter. Before we got so low as that! we say, shrugging our shoulders. But the huge savings of these continental peoples, who absorb vast amounts of investment securities, are the envy of our bankers. From that end the cigar stubs and the copper sous in the European stockings do not look so sordid.

But now all this has suddenly changed. Europe is now the spendthrift, and we sit aghast at the reckless waste of her painful hoardings. We may scatter a few millions carelessly, perhaps riotously, but Europe is hurling billions into her holocaust, drawn from her savings; what is more dreadful, pledging the earnings of her people for generations to come with a prodigality our worst spenders never dreamed of.

For colossal waste, utter destruction of property values, the world has never seen the spectacle that Europe presents today. As with maddened gamblers the end will not come until the last copper that can be pressed from the empty stockings has been thrown on the red tables of war, not until the military gamblers have been thrust out of doors by the international croupiers—the bankers.

At least we are quits with Europe forever on this charge of waste.

I am not one of those who believe all they are told about the daily cost of the war. I do not believe that all the statisticians in the world can give even an approximate guess at the total costs. I don't believe that they get very close to the actual expenditures for military material, and that is but the introducion to the real bill. Possibly the war is costing less in hard cash than has been estimated. I fancy that Europe will be thrifty in its war bills and get every cent in the dollar it pays, which is more than we could or would. And it is also quite likely that the period of recovery from the drain of the war on the world's capital will be shorter than our pessimists think. For the truth seems to be that civilization has reached such a point of wealth production, when the nations are sober, that there is an enormous annual surplus over actual needs.

In other words, when the world settles down quietly to business after the war we shall take so much new wealth from the soil that with the more careful living inculcated by our fears we shall rapidly fill in the enormous money hole made by this world debauch.

That naturally is by no means the whole story. There are more forms of waste that cannot be reckoned in gold than there are those which money pays for. There are incalculable wastes that can never be repaired. It is not necessary to mention them. Even if the actual wealth in capital is restored to use, the world will be relatively poorer for this needless drain upon its material resources. Life will be poorer. The unborn generations pay for the wrongs of their fathers inevitably.

There are wastes and wastes, it would seem. Compared with the insane form of waste due to war, the American habit of extravagant expenditure, public and private, even in pork barrel legislation, pension bills, and city debts, would seem quite trivial. Indeed, some of our national wastes are probably indirect forms of investment.

The generous basis on which the average American likes to live as compared with his more frugal European neighbor is not all waste. Granted that a considerable part of the sums spent upon luxurious housing, automobiles, rich foods, on nonessentials, or upon ostentation and mere sensual indulgence, and no one can deny that they are large sums, including as they must a huge annual bill for liquor and tobacco, yet it is not all loss, all waste.

Ignoring the silly fallacy that every dollar "put into circulation," no matter how, is useful, nevertheless it is true that a certain amount of luxury, even of poisons, may under some conditions be stimulants to action and accomplishment, may become indirect benefits. The cost of gorgeous opera and excellent music, the bill for pleasure, for travel, and comfortable housing and ample nourishment, even for good tobacco and a moderate consumption of wines, should not be classed as waste. All these things and others like them may contribute to the enlargement of personal powers, to the greater happiness and hence efficiency of their consumers.

It is a delicate matter to distinguish indirect values from pure waste. If it is difficult for the individual to know when he is indulgently wasting his substance and when he is wisely expending it to create more wealth, the matter becomes wholly dark when lumped and massed in a row of statistics.

The American instinct for a liberal upkeep, recognizing the rights of enjoyment and mental satisfaction as well as the necessities of bare existence and working efficiency, is a sound instinct, like so many of our national instincts. No one denies the high power of our civilization for accomplishment. Is not part of that superior power due to our careless habit of expenditure upon nonessentials? The human being needs more than subsistence to get out of him all that he is capable of, and the higher he is in civilization the more he demands of life. Beauty and pleasure, freedom and the liberal hand, these are not all economic waste. They may be spiritual stimuli.

And yet it is a wholesome truth to face that the modern world could, if it would, run itself efficiently on far less than it actually spends of its earnings; that if all the great leaks of waste could be stopped production would soon reach that millennium of the Socialists, where the deadening grind of factory labor might be reduced to a harmless minimum and the grosser forms of poverty be eliminated altogether. Thus immense opportunities would be opened to the great majority that now gets little more than existence out of the game. It would come about, not by redistributing the world's wealth, which most thinking people realize would be useless, but by a saving at the bunghole and the spiggot at the same time.

That is worth thinking about.

Human beings have it within their own wills, without revolutions and upturnings of social systems, to ameliorate many of the wrongs and miseries that we labor under. If they could be induced for a brief term of years to cut off all their wastes, all wars and needless fires and accidents, the alcohol and tobacco bill, the excess dress bill, the graft bill, and all the other numberless items where the world's wealth is dribbled away, they would, as the story book says, literally roll in money.

Alas, nobody expects such a millennium to come to pass. Man at his heart is a wasteful animal, even after suffering centuries of the hardest discipline. We might say that man functions in waste. Few of us even try to adjust effort and expenditure, few ever question the worth of what they get with their toil. We do as our neighbors do, dress about as they dress, eat and house ourselves as the rest do, without the originality, the initiative to ask, "What am I getting out of this trade of blood and brain and time—myself? Can I not get the same result, the same satisfactions for which I now pay with my whole effort in some less expensive way?"

If every human being were to study himself thus as an economic machine, trying to substitute for wasteful methods of satisfaction less wasteful ones, an enormous saving would result.

This great war may prove a blessing to America in that it will give a mighty incentive to just this sort of economic revaluation. There are already signs of a new thrift all along the line, and thrift is a lesson which once thoroughly learned is not easily forgotten.

We in America have had our great spree—our fifty years since the civil war of prodigal waste, of youthful riot. Let us now show Europe that we also have the capacity for thrift, but not quite the narrow thrift of Europe. I hope we shall not give up our bathrooms, shall still find coal for our furnaces, and not try to cheat ourselves into believing we are warm when we are shivering, that we shall insist upon clean cars to travel in, and a number of other hygienic and sensible comforts. But we can dispense with a lot of Pullman plush and rococo hotels and too much to drink and to eat and too much dress.

In a word, every one should take this opportunity to turn himself into an efficiency engineer and operate on himself, testing the worth of his expenditures, trying to eliminate wastes, especially the sort of waste that brings nothing in physically or spiritually, even indirectly, but rests a dull lump of gross indulgence at the bottom of the cup.

You know and I know where to begin to eliminate waste, if we want to.

GREAT BRITAIN WAR WORKSHOP

English Industries Weather the Crisis Successfully, with Few Exceptions.

BY JULIUS STEELE.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—England today is the war workshop of Europe. Certain trades are working night and day, turning out the supplies needed not only by England and her allies, but for the neutral states which are feverishly putting themselves into a state of preparedness for the day when they may be dragged into the giant conflict.

The boot trade is a case in point. Within the last three weeks orders for over 4,000,000 pairs of army boots have been received in Nottingham, the great center of the British boot trade. About 1,500,000 of these are wanted by Lord Kitchener for his men at the front and for his new troops. He has also served notice on the manufacturers that he will want a constant and steady supply of boots while the war lasts. Six weeks under campaign conditions, during which they seldom leave the wearer's feet and are often immersed in water for days in the trenches, doesn't leave much of a pair of boots.

All Want Boots.

France has placed an order for over half a million pairs of boots in Nottingham and 750,000 in Kettering. Russia has ordered 500,000 pairs of boots from Bristol and Italy is inquiring for 250,000. Greece, Bulgaria, and Roumania have all ordered boots, their aggregate demand coming to about 200,000 pairs. All these boots are high class goods of the British army pattern, which cost $4 a pair wholesale.

Then there is the item of clothing the army. Over a million uniforms are wanted at once for the new troops. Another 600,000 are wanted for the old troops and the territorials to replace those which are being worn out under war and war training conditions. There is no need for any tailor in England today to be idle. Clothing manufacturers are welcoming with open arms any one who can sew and every factory in the United Kingdom is working overtime. The cloth mills, too, are getting their share and are in many cases working double shifts. About seven yards of cloth are required to make a uniform, so that the 2,000,000 uniforms required at once represent 14,000,000 yards of goods. In addition to this there are a couple of million overcoats to be made, each taking nearly as much cloth as a suit. All the khaki in the country has been exhausted and the government is now clothing the new recruits in uniforms of blue serge, which will be replaced by khaki when they are ready to go to the front.

Blankets in Demand.

There is no unemployment in the woolen or tailoring trades. England's blanket stocks have been exhausted. The government bought every blanket it could hear of and then had to appeal to the people to send in their spare blankets to keep the new recruits warm at night. Orders have been placed at Witney for 1,000,000 pairs, and more still will be wanted when these are delivered. The blanket mills are working night and day.

The war demand for goods manifests itself in all sorts of unexpected places. Sheffield, for instance, is rushed with orders for razors because most soldiers must be supplied with razors at the front. In addition to this demand there is a fairly large amount of trade coming from abroad which formerly went to Solingen, the German Sheffield. In Birmingham a number of sword and bayonet factories which had been closed for years have been reopened.

Leicester, the home of the underwear trade, is humming with activity again with orders from France and Russia, as well as for the British troops, and all the harness, saddlery, glove, and other leather centers are similarly busy.

Grain Imports Increase.

A satisfactory feature of the trade returns from the British point of view is that the imports of grain and flour show an increase of nearly $4,000,000, while meat, including live stock, has only decreased $150,000, compared with August, 1913. In the imports the class of manufactured articles has suffered most severely, falling to $33,000,000 from a total of $76,000,000.

Food, drink, and tobacco have only fallen off about 10 per cent and raw materials about 16 per cent. In exports the biggest decline also has been in manufactured articles, amounting to $78,000,000 in a total of $174,000,000. The exports of food, drink, and tobacco dropped about 50 per cent and of raw materials about 50 per cent.

HIRAM MAXIM, IRATE, WRITES OF BRO. HUDSON

Inventor Tells of the Genesis of Smokeless Powder and the Automatic.

BY SIR HIRAM MAXIM.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—[To the Editor of The Chicago Tribune.]—Sir: As so important a part in the present war is being played by the Maxim automatic gun and smokeless powder, both American inventions, I think that some account of how they came to be invented may not be uninteresting to American readers.

In the autumn of 1881 I was made a chevalier de la Légion d'Honneur in Paris on account of a chemical discovery and an electrical regulator that I had invented and exhibited, and the following winter, finding myself in Vienna, I met a clever American Jew, who said: "Maxim, hang your electrical machines; if you wish to make your everlasting fortune and pile up gold by the ton invent a killing machine—something that will enable these Europeans to cut each other's throats with greater facility—that is what they want."

Invents the Automatic.

Although these remarks were not seriously made, still to me they certainly appeared sound and reasonable, and I could not help thinking on the subject. I had fired a military rifle in the United States and had remarked the powerful kick that it gave, and it occurred to me that I might turn this to useful effect; there was certainly enough energy in this kick to load and fire the gun. And so on my return to Paris I commenced at once to make drawings of an automatic gun. Later on I came to London, established a little workshop, and made a gun that actually loaded and fired itself by energy derived from the recoil.

It was a veritable nine days' wonder; every one of note from H. R. H. the Prince of Wales down came to see me and fire my gun. When I was asked to fire it before the government officials at Enfield, I fired 333 rounds in half a minute and a belt of 2,000 cartridges in slightly over three minutes. Then the British government gave me a large order, which enabled me to organize a company and fit up large workshops.

In making these preliminary trials I had noticed the vast cloud of smoke produced. In fact, Lord Wolseley had said to me that my gun would be of little use unless I could invent a smokeless powder.

How It Was Done.

In studying the subject it occurred to me that notwithstanding the fact that gun cotton and nitroglycerin went off with a snap, still I believed that if the two were combined and made into blocks or grains that they would burn from the outside after the manner of black powder; it would be like tying two strings of a piano together which would destroy the natural vibration of both. But at that time there was a Fenian scare on, and it was not safe for an American to have anything to do with nitroglycerin or gun cotton.

I therefore made arrangements to have smokeless powder made for me in Scotland by Mr. McRoberts, an expert in high explosives. I made for Mr. McRoberts a screw press for spinning a compound of nitroglycerin and gun cotton into threads, and later on I patented this apparatus. It is a curious and interesting fact that later on the government experts made a powder in the form of threads, which had exactly the size and same appearance as those made by McRoberts, the only difference being that the government powder contained 5 per cent of vaseline.

At that time I was advised by military experts that no government on earth would even look at a smokeless powder that contained a particle of nitroglycerin, but as it was necessary that I have a smokeless powder I started a little laboratory of my own.

Also Smokeless Powder.

I first commenced by dissolving pure gun cotton of the highest degree of nitration in acetone, evaporating out the acetone and then cutting up the hornlike substance into small squares. By this means I made a smokeless powder that did a little better when freshly made than black powder, but after being exposed to the air for a short time it became violent and dangerous. When freshly made it contained about 3 per cent of acetone. I therefore added 3 per cent of castor oil to the solution, and as the castor oil could not evaporate, the powder remained stable and constant.

I then commenced to add small quantities of nitroglycerin, commencing with about 5 per cent and gradually increasing until I had more nitroglycerin than gun cotton, and all of the powders worked well, but as there was a strong prejudice against using nitroglycerin I finally settled down to make a powder with 72 per cent of gun cotton, 25 per cent of nitroglycerin, and 3 per cent of castor oil. All of this, of course, took time. I, however, took out a considerable number of patents on the powder and the apparatus for making it and recovering the solvents.

Enter Brother Isaac.

In the meantime my bother Isaac, who had conveniently and for obvious reasons changed his name to Hudson, learning of my success, came to England. He was immensely interested in my work. He expressed his astonishment when he saw a single barrel gun load and fire itself continuously at the rate of eleven shots a second. But he was still more interested in my chemical laboratory. I employed him at a large salary and sent him to Springfield, Mass., where he entered my powder in the name of H. Maxim, and at the trials my powder beat all others at all points completely out of the field, and my American friends congratulated me very much.

They said if it had been a matter of mechanics they would have known that I should come out ahead, but the smokeless powder was a question of pure chemistry, and that as I had beaten the field it was certainly a feather in my cap. But later on certain events took place in which the "H. Maxim," which was supposed to be Hiram Maxim, became Hudson Maxim, and that is the way that Hudson Maxim became "the inventor of smokeless powder" in the states. As a matter of fact, this gentleman had no more to do with the invention of smokeless powder than the man in the moon, although he has masqueraded for years as the inventor.

France to Oust Civilian Foes.

PARIS, Oct. 30, 6:50 p. m.—The French government is arranging through the American embassy here to send to Germany and Austria all subjects of those countries now detained in France who are not subject to army duty. The first convoy probably will leave for Switzerland next week.

BRITISH SAVED BY DOGGEDNESS

Quality Prevents General French's Army from Being Annihilated.

LETTERS NEWS SOURCE.

BY T. P. O'CONNOR.

[FOREIGN LETTER TO THE TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Owing to the extreme severity of the censorship and the expulsion of the war correspondents from the front the British public remains curiously ignorant with regard to the events of the war. Practically it has no news except such as is given in the scrupulously reserved communications from the French war office. The English press bureau is singularly silent as a rule.

This has led to the curious result that there are no human documents which today excite greater interest, and in some places can even find a readier market, than the soldiers' letters. There is no paper in the country which does not come out with a column or two of these letters every day, and they are read with great eagerness.

It may be prejudice, but the first impression one gets from these letters, an impression produced on the French observers as well, is the extraordinary doggedness and coolness of the British soldier. Everybody now knows that Gen. French's whole force was for two days within an inch of annihilation, and that if his troops had not been dogged, with splendid nerves and of great fearlessness, there would have been one of those terrible panics which invites the pursuing enemy to slaughter.

Plenty of the soldiers' letters make frank confession of the perturbation of nerves which a soldier feels when he is for the first time under fire. I have heard that all military writers have come to the conclusion in studying the psychology of the soldier that, whether it be necessary or not from pure strategy, it is always psychologically essential that soldiers should fire their rifles as soon as possible; it is the only thing that restores their nerves.

Nervous at First.

This view is confirmed by many passages in these soldiers' letters. One says: "The first time we were in action most of us were a bit trembly, but as soon as a few men had retired hurt the nerves got in hand and our officers hadn't much use for their 'Steady, boys.'"

As you read the letters, you perceive more and more how this blood fury grows; until in the end such a kindly creature as the typical British Tommy Atkins is becomes quite ferocious. Here, for instance, is an illuminating passage from one of the missives:

"I and four other wounded men got together and hid under some wheat sheaves. Presently one man put out his head to see if the coast was clear and was spotted by a German soldier. The fellow came towards us, and, grasping his rifle by the barrel, was about to batter out my mate's brains when I whipped out my jackknife and, springing up, jabbed it into his throat.

"He went down, and I with him, and by the time I had finished he was done for. I kept at his windpipe so as not to give him a chance to bawl for assistance."

Never Loses Sense of Humor.

However, amid these ghastly scenes, an unexpected point which I have already indicated stands forth. The first is that Tommy never seems to lose his spirits or his sense of humor, and that both before and after a battle he is the same comic self, with quaint views about everything, and especially about fighting, as he is when he is flirting with his sweetheart in London or Dublin.

"These fellows," a Frenchman writes about British soldiers, "go into battle as if they were going to a picnic, with laughing eyes and with cigarets between their lips. One must have seen their immovable calm, their heroic sangfroid under a rain of bullets, to do it justice."

Another Frenchman is much amused when he hears the British soldiers shout out: "Are we downhearted?" and the resounding "No" which follows it.

Time to Buy Good Bonds.

Have you been hoarding money or putting it in a bank where it draws 2 or 3 per cent interest while you await the opportunity to buy gilt edged bonds at a low price?

If you have such a hoard, it is time to think about investing. Municipal and gilt edged first mortgage bonds do not fluctuate widely. Various issues of both have been marked down during the last few weeks, and careful investors have picked up many bargains. If you wait for further concessions in prices you may or may not get them, but in the meantime you certainly will lose the interest your money might be earning.

It is not suggested that you buy the first bond you see, but that you begin a search for the most attractive offerings. A long time gilt edged bond selling at a price to yield a high interest rate is sure to show a large advance in market value when interest rates return to a normal level.

Eastern bankers in touch with the business in bonds going through the New York stock exchange committee and the New York investment bankers' committee of seven, believe that a nearly normal market has been established there. Price reductions have been sufficient to stimulate a good buying demand, and a member of one of the committees says there is now a two sided market, in which more than one issue has advanced recently because of the buying demand.

Monarch Rubber Company.

W. K. H.—The Monarch Rubber company of Carrolltown, O., is a coöperative concern chartered in Ohio which proposes to manufacture tires and sell them to its stockholders at 10 per cent above manufacturing cost. The company says this makes the cost to stockholders 20 to 30 per cent lower than the usual price. The company has sold $130,000 of stock, par value $25, of an authorized capital of $1,000,000. It is now supplying its stockholders with tires manufactured under contract. It expects to start its own factory next year. The company does a cash business and now has $110,000 of assets and no liabilities but its capital stock.

Reliance Life.

A. E. G.—The Reliance Life Insurance company has been in business nearly twelve years and has had rapid growth, reporting in its last annual statement $44,334,141 of insurance in force. Its admitted assets were $4,255,900, its paid in capital $1,000,000, and surplus $270,024. No dividends have been paid to stockholders as yet. The company writes annual and deferred dividend and non-participating. An insurance authority criticises it for not setting aside funds for the deferred dividends, but says the company's actuarial methods are sound and its investments good and remunerative.

International Educational.

H. N., Waupaca, Wis.—The International Educational Publishing company is one of the so-called Foster group of corporations. It has outstanding $7,525,000 of common stock and $9,014,800 preferred. The company controls correspondence schools in London, the eastern colonies of Great Britain, in various Spanish and Portuguese speaking countries, and in China and Japan. Dividends have been paid on the preferred stock at the rate of 7 per cent since Feb. 1, 1909; and recently 3 per cent on common. The stocks are speculative. Latest available Scranton quotations are $32 to $33.50 a share for preferred and $19 to $20 for common. Par value is $50.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Are a Harmless Substitute.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. His efforts to banish it brought out these little olive-colored tablets.

These pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids.

It is best not to take calomel but to let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Most headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "loggy" and "heavy." Note how they "clear" clouded brain and how they "perk up the spirits." At 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

A Kewanee Garbage Burner is an asset wherever a flat building exists—wherever people live. It prevents the creation or accumulation of garbage. It burns all refuse matter, without odor, the instant it becomes refuse. And everything it burns is fuel which takes that much burden off your fuel expense. And while this refuse, which costs you nothing, is burning, it heats the water in the hot water tank. That's some institution to have around the house.

Furthermore, wherever there is a Kewanee Garbage Burner, there's no occasion for flies or rats or other terrors of modern civilization which breed disease, carry disease and maintain disease. A modern flat equipped with this garbage burner should rent quicker than any other flat, no matter how handsomely appointed the latter may be. And the reason for this is that it is a great deal healthier the year around. Some of you folks have the idea that winter kills disease germs, but there isn't a germnologist in the world who won't tell you you're wrong. Winter only chills 'em but it never wipes 'em out.

The Kewanee Garbage Burner doesn't take up much room in the basement. It doesn't cost much money. It is a small, compact steel chamber that is made of the same faultless steel plate that we make Kewanee Boilers out of. And by converting your garbage and refuse into fuel it pays for itself before you have had it a year. After that every penny it saves in fuel is velvet to you. So it means economy as well as health. Is there any further argument necessary?

PROFIT TAKING IN ALL GRAINS

Liquidation of Week End Sort Gave Prices Lower Levels.

PROVISIONS ARE LOWER

Wheat lost ground in the final trading of the week because of profit taking, which was followed by more or less liquidation on the part of holders who were rather timid about holding their grain over Sunday. This turned a higher opening into a somewhat weak close with final prices ⅛c lower. While the entire range was not wide, and final prices not far from the close of the preceding day, they indicated a slight feeling of apprehension at the close of the week. Opening advances were due to large sales of flour and wheat in the southwest for export, further important export bids, and continued bullish news from abroad.

Australian Crop Smaller.

The wheat crop of New South Wales was officially estimated at 14,000,000 bu to 16,000,000 bu, as compared with 38,000,000 bu the official report of a year ago. The French government made a bid on 4,000,000 bu wheat for November shipment from the gulf to be guaranteed. The order, however, could not be accepted, as November shipment bookings from the gulf ports are already close to the physical capacity of each.

Broomhall reported an unusually early harvest in Australia and stated that the late beneficial rains were not in time to materially help the wheat in that country. Harvest there will commence next week and be general in a fortnight. The Argentine harvest of wheat is also about to commence in the north and cables from there stated that clear and dry weather is needed. Germany was reported to be using coarser feeds to conserve her wheat stocks.

Primary Receipts Heavier.

Primary receipts for the week showed an increase of nearly 3,000,000 bu over those of the previous week and a total of 12,882,000 bu against 6,558,000 bu for the corresponding week a year ago. Export clearances were fair at 784,000 bu. Cash sales were 425,000 bu. Estimated cars for Monday, 211.

Corn Lower with Wheat.

Corn started out strong and higher, but lost the advance ground and a fraction more, closing unchanged to ⅛c lower. There were further export sales and considerably more export inquiry, with a number of bids unfilled because of scarcity of this grain. The weather over the belt was fine, being clear and cool and further ideal weather was predicted. Some of the corn sold recently was taken out of store for export. The eastern demand was reported as rather tame, which reflects the usual characteristics of the market on Saturday. Profit taking and week end liquidation were responsible for most of the backset, the same as in wheat. Primary receipts for the day were 433,000 bu, against 377,000 bu a year ago. Receipts at these points for the week aggregated 3,045,000 bu, as compared with 1,898,000 bu last week and 2,599,000 bu a year ago. For the season to date, from Nov. 1, 1913, the entire crop year, the receipts were 229,219,000 bu, as compared with 252,683,000 bu for the preceding year, and 228,609,000 bu two years ago. Cash sales were 115,000 bu. Estimated cars for Monday, 116.

December Oats Lower.

Oats showed a dragging tendency, particularly so in the December delivery. This future did not make as good a showing on the early bulge as did the May, but weakened fully as much on profit taking, liquidation, and hedging sales. Some further export sales were reported, but at close prices. Resting spots were ¼@½c lower. Primary arrivals for the week showed quite a gain over those of the preceding week and totaled 7,430,000 bu, as against 5,718,000 bu a year ago. Primary receipts for the crop year from Aug. 1 to date were 108,089,000 bu, as compared with 81,135,000 bu last year, and 90,135,000 bu two years ago. Cash sales were 275,000 bu. Estimated cars for Monday, 171.

Provisions Are Easier.

Provisions displayed an easier tone and last prices were unchanged to 10c lower. The trade was moderate and support rather unsatisfactory. More or less lard was offered for sale for nearby deliveries, and this affected other products adversely. Western receipts for the week were 454,200 head, as against 450,000 head last week and 432,000 head a year ago. Nearby lard received support from one of the larger packers. The cash trade in meats was dull and the demand for lard less active.

Rye Market Higher.

Rye sold at an advance of 1c, with No. 2 at 96c, No. 3 at 94c, and sample grade at 91@93c. Receipts, 4 cars.

Barley was firm, with sales of malting at 62@73c and feed at 62c. Receipts, 39 cars.

Timothy seed was steady at $4.00@5.00, and clover seed easy at $10.00@14.00 for cash lots.

Duluth flax closed 2¾@3c lower, with cash on track $1.34¼, October and November $1.32⅝, December $1.33¾, and May $1.39½. Receipts 91 cars. Minneapolis was 3c lower at $1.31¾@1.34⅝ for cash on track. Receipts, 37 cars. Winnipeg closed 1½@2¾c lower, with October and November $1.11 and December $1.12¼. Receipts, 20 cars.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE

Broomhall cabled on foreign conditions as follows:

Australia—Beneficial rains have fallen, but this came too late to be material value to wheat. Harvesting in early districts will commence next week and will be general in a fortnight.

Austria—Further complaints emanate from official circles relative to the continued advance in wheat and flour, and, in fact, all foodstuffs, and these are now reported to be in excess of any prices in the world.

Germany—Great scarcity of corn is noted. Animal food is in great demand, and this is being sought in outside markets. Wheat and flour are being conserved by the use of coarser food.

Sweden—All kinds of cereals were a failure this year, and this is particularly true of oats, and a larger importation than usual will be necessary.

Argentina—aRined generally Friday and the weather continued unsettled. Harvesting is about to commence [of wheat] in north, and clear and dry weather is wanted; fear of a wet harvest is entertained; excessive rain in the south is noted.

Harold Zeiss & Co. say: "The inauguration of our new financial system, improved methods of financing our exports, and the fact that Great Britain has declared that cotton is not contraband of war, are bound to remedy the situation in the south and improve the demand for side meats, which have been unduly depressed in price.

Charles Sincere & Co. say: "Returned commercial travelers see great export activity southwest. One observer says he does not believe the Chicago trade appreciates the activity of foreign agents in the southwest, because nearly everything bought is ordered to gulf points for export shipment.

Ohio grain dealers at Columbus reported good crop of corn, but not in shipping condition. Very little forward business going on. No eastern demand, and export trade outlook not of the best, as Holland and Germany have been the best buyers in the past.

A telegram from Kansas City read: "Am told by one who should know that 700,000 bu wheat was sold for export from here Friday. Exporters sold every bushel they offered, and one big house said they were afraid to offer any last night."

The stocks of provisions are now down to quantities that are anything but burdensome, but with colder weather and more general slaughtering at country points stocks should begin to show some accumulation.

Some contraction in hog number moving to the markets instead of the seasonable expansion which had been expected was responsible for an improved tone in the hog market and in that for the future provisions.

A St. Louis message read: "A large farmer of St. Charles county, Mo., says all early sown wheat full of hessian fly. Steel Bros. & Co. have quite a number of hessian fly complaints from Missouri and Illinois."

Every mill and elevator says foreigners accept everything offered at Kansas City at almost any price. Am told a big part of the wheat stocks here is owned by mills here and Minneapolis.

A wire from St. Louis read: "Kelley, the Nashville, Tenn., miller, is here. Says things in the south are improving. Sold lot of flour Friday. More than for some time past."

Estimated receipts for Monday: Wheat, 211 cars; corn, 116 cars; oats, 171 cars; rye, 4 cars; barley, 39 cars; hogs, 38,000 head. Hogs for all next week, 150,000 head.

Minneapolis wired: "Ballet, Duluth, wires: 'Ames worked both spring and durum; has taken 200 December and still after it. Few cables received.'"

New South Wales official report places yield of wheat in Australia from 14,000,000 to 16,000,000 bu, as compared with official last year of 38,000,000 bu.

Argentina—Wheat prospects are generally regarded as excellent, but some crises are yet to be undergone. Much depends upon the weather from now onward.

Minneapolis wheat stocks increased 125,000 bu for one day. Total, 14,655,000 bu; last year, 14,456,000 bu. Flour shipments, 56,555 brls.

Kansas City wired: "A large mill in western Missouri reports largest flour sales Friday ever made."

COTTON.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—An official announcement was made by the conference committee of the New York cotton exchange today that, subject only to approval by the court of the present proposed disposition of the unliquidated contracts with Pell & Co., the syndicate plans had been perfected. Members will be asked to appear in the near future and submit to the committee final figures as to the number of bales they will turn into the corporation at 9 cents. A good deal of detail remains to be disposed of, but it is believed that an early reopening is now assured. It was also announced that the ballot price in New York remains at 8 cents, notwithstanding the reduction of Liverpool prices to 4.50d. Spot markets were generally firm and higher, with an increased demand reported, and December on the curb here was quoted at 7.50@7.55c, or the highest price in some time. New Orleans spot firm, 6.75c. Sales, 740 bales.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Oct. 31.—COTTON—Spot firm; sales, 440 bales. Middling, 6¾c.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 31.—COTTON—Good business done; business broadening. Sales, 7,600 bales, including 6,100 American, on the basis of 4.80d for middling. Imports, 7,773 bales, all American.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Cotton goods were strong today. Yarns were steady. Linens were firm and quiet. Burlaps were steady. Underwear and hosiery for spot shipment were in better demand.

METALS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—COPPER—Electrolytic weak at $11.12½ for cash and $11.20 thirty days.

BANKS' SURPLUS IS RISING FAST

New York Institutions Have Larger Excess Reserve than Last Year.

LOCAL CLEARINGS OFF.

New York associated banks reported in their weekly figures yesterday a surplus reserve of $14,914,950, being a gain of $6,454,300 over the previous week. The statement should be regarded as highly reassuring and indicative of a decided turn in the trend of money events so far as New York City is concerned. Early in August the banks there showed a deficit, which on Aug. 15 reached $47,992,250. All this has been wiped out and a surplus shown instead, being an increase in the reserve item of $62,907,200 in eleven weeks.

In the matter of surplus the banks are better off now than for the corresponding period in two years. One year ago the surplus was $6,550,300 and two years ago $5,332,150. Deposits have of course decreased, thus lowering the reserve requirements, but the margin of safety is more than twice what it was in either 1913 or 1914.

Decrease in Clearings.

Chicago banks in the month of October made the poorest relative exhibit of the year, comparison being had with last year. The exchanges for the month were $1,261,007,141, a decrease of $193,179,116, or 13.2 per cent, compared with October, 1913. The largest previous decrease was in the month of September, when the loss was 12.8 per cent.

Compared with previous months of the current year, October was the smallest, with the exception of February, July, and August. Comparison could hardly be made with February, since it was a month of twenty-eight days, while October had thirty-one. The figures for the year follow:

FEELING IN TRADE BETTER

Cotton Exports Big Factor in Decline of Exchange.

WAR BUYING IN U. S. HEAVY

Money Rates Ease as Reserve System Nears Operation.

New York, Oct. 31.—Sentiment over the business prospect was decisively brighter this week. Even in the steel trade a hopeful note was sounded.

Progress was made in working out the cotton problem, although some financial institutions in the west and other interior points show a lack of enthusiasm for the plan. Great Britain's exemption of cotton from all contraband restrictions when shipped in neutral vessels, even to belligerent countries, released large export orders.

This was a prime factor in the drop in foreign exchange rates to nearly normal. Confidence was unabated that the cotton pool would be operated and an early reopening of cotton exchanges was expected. Reëstablishment of an open market for cotton would insure renewal of buying by mills.

War Brings Big Trade.

Clearing up of contraband questions also helped export buying of copper. Urgent demand for foodstuffs from abroad continued, and many domestic centers reported buying of war supplies on a large scale.

The nearly normal conditions in foreign exchange which have followed the flood of exports naturally reduce the menace of foreign liquidation of securities, but the time for resuming regular trading on the stock exchanges remains a matter of conjecture. The order of the controller of the currency to pass collateral in national bank loans at July 30 prices is calculated to stabilize values of securities, but may check the tendency of borrowers to reduce loans.

Notable easing of money rates is resulting from the imminence of federal reserve bank openings on Nov. 16, with release of cash reserves estimated at over $500,000,000. Marked improvement was shown in investment demand for short term securities.

New York Banks Progress.

Local banks made further progress in their work of rehabilitation during this week, with a material increase in excess cash reserves and further gain of cash. The surplus now shown by these institutions is vastly more than that reported for the corresponding period of the two preceding years.

LONDON SECURITIES.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—Securities in the street were steady today and the attendance fairly good. Brokers were still waiting for an announcement on the loan scheme by the stock exchange. The Economist says only a notable success on the part of the allies in France is necessary to reopen the stock exchange, but that it is understood that the committee is divided on the question of outstanding speculative accounts. The paper says a majority of the committee favors carrying these accounts through the settlement date already fixed for November, but that the minority is violently opposed to this. The Bank of England was a light discounter of premoratorium bills. Discount rates in the market were steady.

Weakness pervaded the hog market and prices averaged slightly lower than on Friday, although tops, at $7.65, showed no change. The general quality of the offerings was mediocre and the bulk sold at $7.25@7.50, against $7.25@7.55 Friday. Receipts were posted at 14,000 head, of which shippers took 2,500, paying largely steady prices. Packers bought less desirable offerings and got them at a reduction of largely 5c from the preceding day's figures. Pigs opened steady, but were in excessive supply and closed 25c lower, with the bulk at $6.25@6.75.

Final hog quotations were 5@10c higher than last week's closing figures and this week's average price was placed at $7.40, against $7.35 last week. Pigs were mostly 25c higher than a week ago. Total receipts of hogs this week were 137,500, against 139,500 a week ago, and 144,700 a year ago. Shippers took 21,200 head, against 24,500 last week and 27,000 a year ago.

CATTLE.

The cattle market at Chicago this week closed on a strong basis, with values showing net gains of 35@50c for native steers and 25c for rangers since a week ago. Cows and heifers were 35@75c higher than at the close last week, bulls showed substantial gains, and stock and feeding steers were up 25@35c. Calves alone sought a cheaper basis, closing at a loss of 25@50c. A sharp decrease in receipts and prospects of continued curtailment in marketings were influential factors in causing the upturn in prices. It is believed liquidation of cattle off pastures has come to an end and more satisfactory conditions are said to exist in the dressed beef trade. Reports of diseased cattle having been shipped out of Chicago were denied by local officials who have caused all cattle pens here to be thoroughly disinfected and have notified railroads that all cars carrying live stock from this point must be thoroughly cleansed and disinfected before being loaded.

Cattle at six western markets for the week, 157,700, against 219,600 the preceding week, 195,400 a year ago, and 214,600 two years ago. Total for 1914 to date, 5,483,000, against 6,211,000 the same period in 1913.

SHEEP.

Sheep and lamb values finished at the highest level of the month, showing net gains of 25@50c for the week. Receipts for the week showed a substantial increase, but the requirements of buyers were more than proportionately enlarged and values worked steadily higher, while the market was buoyant and active throughout the period. Prime native lambs sold up to $8.20, while rangers closed at $8.15 for the best. Fat sheep reached $6.25 and yearlings sold up to $6.75, with prime yearling wethers quotable up to $7.00. The available supply of range sheep and lambs is believed to be about exhausted, but the trade is looking forward to increased shipments of fed westerns and natives. Conditions in the dressed mutton trade are said to be satisfactory and the demand for sheep and lambs is expected to contine broad and active.

ARE YOU THE MAN?

Somewhere there is a man who is above the ordinary in sales ability and executive management, who is now successful in making money for somebody else. Where he receives a very small share of the profits for his efforts. A man who is ever straining to reach a goal of success; to get a business of his own, where he can direct, and use the same judgment that has made money for others, but get the lion's share for himself. A man who has been watching and waiting for a real opportunity; a paying proposition from the jump; one in which there are no jokers. Where he can deal with all the cards on the table face up; one in which a little ability will yield him 100%. A man who would like to publish a monthly trade paper in a town of about 100,000, buy the controlling interest and step into a profit producing proposition that is just coming into the best season. A man who has say $10,000 and is well connected. A business that is earning better than $4,000 per year at the present time, and which has splendid chances to earn $10,000 a year for a man who will give it a little efficient management. If you are such a man and would like to have the opportunity, write, S E 419, Tribune.

WHILE complaint is heard in certain quarters of the alleged dullness of the real estate market, there is a growing conviction in the minds of those who are keeping a close tab on the actual movement of property that this dullness is to a considerable extent more imaginary than real, the result of the paralyzing feeling of apprehension due to the profound shock in financial and general business circles born of the European war. But for the fact it is difficult to negotiate loans of a large size and the abnormally high interest rates which have to be paid by borrowers it would be exceedingly difficult to detect in the daily market reports and published tables of transfers any substantial evidences of this alleged dullness.

Transfers Nearly Up to Record.

The number of recorded transfers is nearly up to what it was for the corresponding period a year ago, when the outside market was unusually active and peace among nations prevailed the world over. Thus for the week just closed the total of the recorded deeds was only about ninety less than for the corresponding week a year ago, when the total exceeded 1,100. This certainly does not look much like a dead market.

Again the character of the transfers, the large number of really important transactions, those that count for something in market happenings both because of their size and significance, indicate anything but a dull market. Take the published transactions of the last week, for instance, and compare them with those for the corresponding week a year ago and it will be found they materially exceed in number and general importance those for the former period.

Dealing in Outside Property.

It is true they do not include any downtown transactions, but that has no significance for the reason the downtown market has been an exceedingly dull proposition for the last year and a half, so that the present dullness cannot be ascribed to the troubles incident to the present war.

This dullness was due to overbuilding and a period of speculative activity in long term ground leases at excessive valuations and which many downtown owners erroneously accepted as criterions of value.

As would-be investors generally were unwilling to accept these asking prices, there naturally has been little doing and there will not be until owners, in the opinion of leading brokers, make material concessions. In any event, however, this has nothing to do with the present market situation born of the war.

Corner Realty Dull.

It may also be said there is not as much doing as was the case a year and more ago in the matter of transfer corner property. But this also is due to a reaction from a period of speculative activity on the part of a certain set of operators which carried prices in many instances far beyond their real market value. As is the case downtown, material concessions will have to be made in much of this property before there is likely to be much demand for it, although in certain sections where there has been much development values actually have strengthened. As a general rule, however, it may be said that this class of property is being marketed on the basis of its present earning capacity and not on its speculative possibilities. It also may be said that this condition existed long before the present war troubles materialized.

Tight Money Fails to Curb Deals.

But along lines of legitimate and healthy development made in response to the actual growing living and business needs of the city there has been no apparent halting despite the general wave of apprehension which has swept over the country. The tight money market has postponed some building operations, but it has not prevented many people who have sensed the opportunities presented in the lines of Chicago's evident future growth from going ahead with their land purchases while preparing with the advent of easier money conditions to go ahead with their various plans of development.

The week's market developments presented many instances of this, one of the most striking being the big purchase of Murray Wolbach, who has been an exceedingly successful operator in outside business and flat properties. Despite the talk about a dull market and hard times to come, he closed the purchase of 2,400 feet of frontage south of Jackson park, which he plans to improve with high grade apartment buildings to cost over $1,100,000.

View of an Optimist.

He is an optimist, as all successful operators are, and here is what he says regarding the outlook:

"I have the most supreme faith in Chicago and Chicago real estate, which has held its own in a most impressive manner in the face of the troubles resulting from the European war. While for a few weeks the negotiation of loans ceased, the purchase of land went on practically just the same, showing the strong faith of people in its superiority as an absolutely safe form of investment despite the slump in practically all other forms of investment.

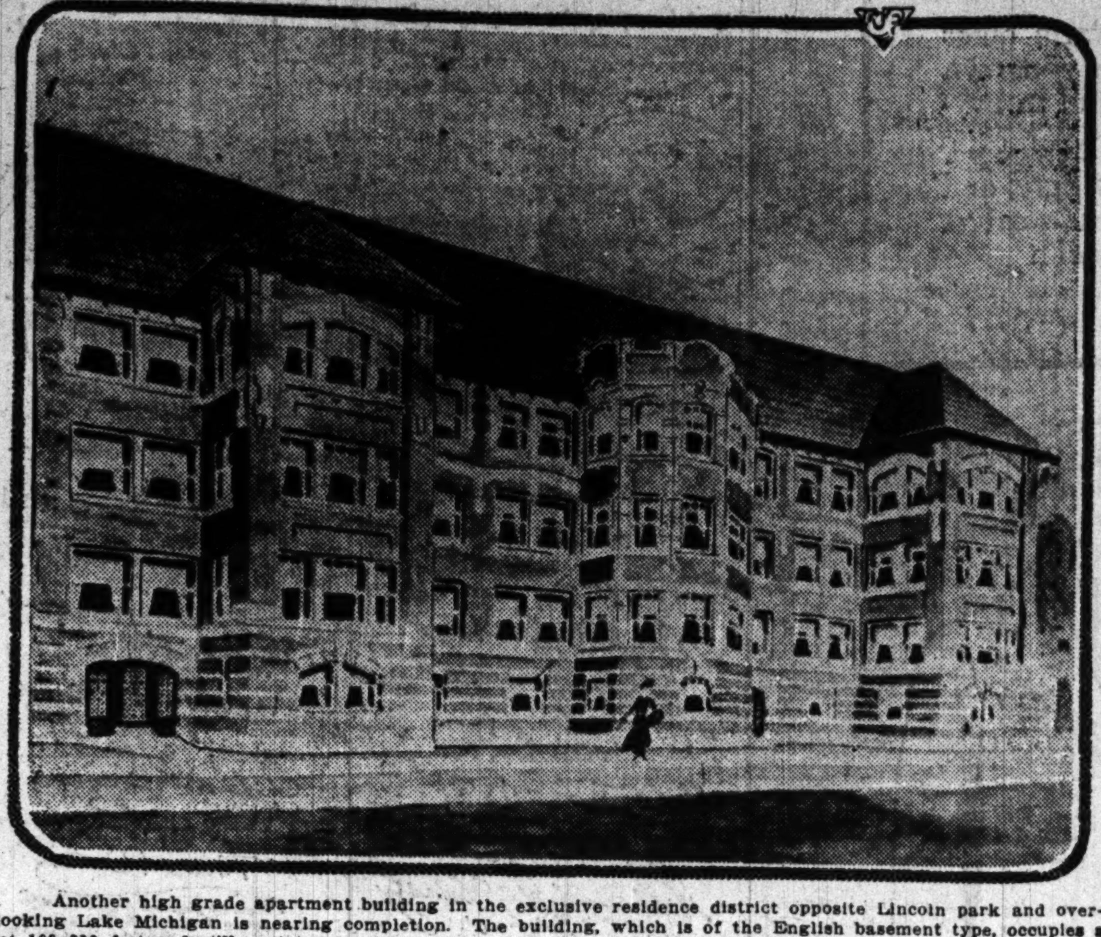
"Chicago financiers in direct contradiction of formerly accepted ideas are now brought to face the fact that of all commodities, merchandise, raw materials of every description, stocks and bonds, debentures, and what not, Chicago real estate has shown itself to be the most stable, remunerative, and salable.

"Why should I sell my property? If I did where could I as profitably reinvest my money? To doubt the future of Chicago real estate is to doubt the future of the city, and I do not care to be classed in that category."

Accident Causes Fatal Pneumonia.

Mrs. Mary Rummell, 2009 Maple avenue, Evanston, died at her home yesterday of pneumonia which is declared by relatives to have developed from injuries she suffered when she fell off a street car five years ago. She had been incapacitated ever since the accident.

New Modern Apartment in Exclusive District.



Another high grade apartment building in the exclusive residence district opposite Lincoln park and overlooking Lake Michigan is nearing completion. The building, which is of the English basement type, occupies a lot 109x200 feet and will contain nine apartments of ten rooms and three baths each. It will have such conveniences as sun parlors, sleeping porches, individual laundries, and shower bath. There also will be a ball and party room for the use of the tenants. The building will cost $140,000 and the apartments will rent at $175 to $200 a month. It is being built by Walter J. and George P. R. Rinn and the architect is William H. Pruyn Jr. Strassheim & Co. will have charge of the renting.

HOMESEEKERS FLOCK TO LOAN ASSOCIATION.

Eastern Savings Institutions Grow Steadily in Favor for Small Loans at Reasonable Rates.

Home seekers who want comparatively small sums are flocking to the local savings and loan associations, says the New York Sun.

"These bodies are steadily growing in influence in this state, though still far behind New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Ohio in point of membership and assets," said Archibald W. McEwan, secretary of the State and Metropolitan leagues of the associations. "The largest in the state is in Utica, with assets of more than $3,500,000, and it lends its money at 5 per cent interest. The largest association in the greater city will reach the $2,000,000 mark soon. There are three other associations here that have passed $1,000,000 in assets, and four have gone to $800,000. In nearby New Jersey counties the growth of the associations and the splendid work they are doing for home owning and thrift are amazing. One person in every six in that state is a member of a savings and loan association.

"Walter L. Durack of Brooklyn, chairman of the legislative committee of the State League of Savings and Loan Associations, is speaking throughout the state in the interests of the land bank and practical coöperation under arrangements made by the state department of agriculture and the banking department."

JOINT TERMINAL PLANNED.

Two Railroads Unite to Build New Freight Station in Southwestern Part of the City.

An interesting development of the week was the revelation of the fact the Chicago Great Western and the Baltimore and Ohio railroads are planning on the joint location of a new freight terminal in the southwestern part of the city, and for this purpose an ordinance closing certain streets was indorsed in the city council Monday evening and referred to a committee headed by Ald. Lawley.

The ordinance gives the right to the Chicago Great Western railroad company to construct, maintain, and operate a switch track south of West Thirteenth street and across South Oakley avenue Willis court, and Raleigh court, and across the north and south alleys lying between South Western and South Irving avenues.

OUTLYING DEALS FEATURE WEEK'S REALTY TRADING

Standard Oil Acquires Large Tract Near Present Plant on North Branch.

Of much significance and also encouragement was the really fine showing made in outside business and warehouse property during the week, where large considerations prevailed.

Conspicuous among these was the purchase by the Standard Oil company on the north branch of the Chicago river, between Hawthorne avenue and the Milwaukee and St. Paul right of way, on which it will erect a new large distributing plant. The property, which has a north frontage on Clybourn place, comprises 106,817 square feet, for which the company paid a total of $108,817, making the sale at the rate of a little over $1 a square foot.

From the trustees of the estate of Jonathan Abel the company acquired 75,817 square feet for $75,817, exactly at the rate of $1 a square foot, and from Eugene Rounsavell and Mrs. Maud R. Shaw of New York City it acquired 31,000 square feet for $33,000, or at the rate of about $1.06 a square foot.

Near Standard's Plant.

The property lies directly across the street from the present plant of the company and formerly was used in part by the old Phoenix Distilling company and the Rounsavell Cooperage company. The company was represented by W. A. Merigold & Co. and the sellers by Willis & Frankenstein.

One of the most interesting of the transactions in outside business property, also made a matter of record, was the acquirement at judicial sale by Benjamin Ginsberg from the estate of George Knopf of the property on Milwaukee avenue, 24 feet northwest of Mautene court, lot 24x100 feet, northeast front, with three story and basement business building, for an expressed consideration of $70,100, which is at the rate of nearly $30 a square foot. Some price!

Purchaser Gives Trust Deed.

The purchaser, who is occupying the property under a lease having eight years to run, gave a trust deed to Fred Wittenberg to secure a part purchase money mortgage for $35,000, one year, at 6 per cent, secured by this property, also 50x125 feet, northeast front, on Milwaukee avenue, 75 feet northwest of Evergreen avenue.

Another interesting transaction was the sale by Charles H. Kusel to C. A. Sharpe of the ground at the northwest corner of Forty-third street and Ellis avenue, 150 feet on the former and 198 on Ellis, for $160,000, and the lease back to Mr. Kusel for 99 years at a straight annual rental of $6,000.

The improvements which were completed during the last year comprise what is known as the Charleston block, a two story brick and stone building containing ten stores and fourteen offices, and the Shakespeare theater, with a seating capacity of about 1,000; also two apartment buildings with a total of twelve apartments, the value of the improvements being estimated at about $135,000.

Rate $800 Front Foot.

The leasing value of the ground in the lease back to Mr. Kusel, capitalized on a 5 per cent basis, is at the rate of $800 a front foot for the Forty-third street frontage. The Bowes Realty company were the brokers in the transaction, while Sonnenschein, Berkson & Fishell attended to the legal details.

Two other interesting deals in outside business property closed late in the week were the long term lease of the premises, 350-52 West Madison street, between Ada and Loomis streets, and the sale of the Aetna State bank building and the leasehold interest in the ground on which it stands at the intersection of Lincoln and Fullerton avenues and Halsted street.

Leased for Ninety-nine Years.

The Madison street property, comprising a six story store and flat building, known as the Buckley building, on a lot 50x125 feet, was leased by William Lawther of Dubuque, Ia., to Dr. A. N. Parlman for a term of ninety-nine years.

The lease provides for an annual rental of $2,500 for the first ten years, $3,000 for the second ten, $4,000 for the third ten, and $5,000 for the remainder of the term. The average is $4,444.44, which, capitalized on a 5 per cent basis, gives a leasing value of $88,888.88. The lessee also is required to make extensive improvements. T. C. Wendell & Co. represented all the parties to the transaction.

Bank Building in Deal.

In the other transaction the grantors were Fred K. and Mary R. Brommell, the grantee being Joseph B. Terbell. The property fronts 142 feet on the north line of Lincoln and 162 feet on the south line of Fullerton avenue at the intersection with Halsted, and the building is a two story, fireproof structure, the Ætna State bank occupying the corner storeroom.

Including this, the building contains ten stores and twenty offices, and is said to have a gross annual rental of about $20,000. Mr. Terbell gave in part payment the two story store and office building, just being completed, at the southwest corner of Ogden and Kedzie avenues, on a lot 82½x139 feet. Thomas G. Wade, with Benjamin I. Greenebaum, represented the Brommels and W. B. Langmore of James A. McLane & Co. represented Mr. Terbell.

COL. ROMBERG TO SPEAK.

Member of Gov. Dunne's Staff Will Talk to Realty Men on Fire Insurance.

Col. Edwin Romberg of Gov. Dunne's staff will be the speaker at Thursday's weekly luncheon of the Chicago real estate board. His subject will be: "A Comprehensive View of the Ins and Outs of Fire Insurance, and How the System Is Worked as Regards the Assured of the State."

Real Estate Transactions.

NORTH SALES.

GRACE STREET—Regelin, Jenson & Co. sold the six apartment building at 638-40 Grace street, with 48¼x140 feet of ground, south front, for A. C. Harper to John H. Wiedeman, a nominal consideration being given, subject to an incumbrance of $11,000, but the actual price is said to have been $25,000.

BROADWAY—William E. Browning has leased from Joseph Seeberger the property at 5206 Broadway, fifty feet north of Foster avenue, 50x125 feet, east front, for a term of ten years from Oct. 22, 1914, at an aggregate rent of $51,900, at the rate of $4,500 a year for the first two years, $4,800 for the next three years, and $5,700 for the succeeding five years. The lessee paid $3,000 upon the execution of the lease.

LINCOLN AVENUE—Record was made of the transfer by G. W. Liedtke and others, trustees, to Otto Rueter (W. F. Kaiser & Co., subdividers), of a tract of about thirteen acres at the northeast corner of Lincoln and Bryn Mawr avenues, being bounded by Lincoln, Hollywood, and Bryn Mawr avenues and Rockwell street, for an expressed consideration of $55,000, the purchaser giving back a trust deed to E. L. Waugh to secure $40,000 of the purchase money.

NORTH EVANSTON—In an important acre deal in North Evanston, Edward E. Betts, superintendent of transportation for the Chicago and Northwestern road, has purchased from Louis Morris and Adam Goldschmidt and Raphael S. Stern of New York a tract of twenty-one acres just west of and adjoining Lincolnwood. It is bounded on the east by Ewing avenue, on the south by Grant street, on the north by the alley south of Harrison street, and on the west by the city limits.

Mr. Betts immediately will subdivide the property and put in street improvements. The lots, it is stated, will have a frontage of at least 70 feet, there will be building restrictions by which no residence to cost less than $5,000 will be allowed, and apartment buildings will be barred. There also will be a forty foot building line.

It is not far from the Westmoreland Golf club and is said to be practically the only high grade vacant property left in that part of the city. The consideration has not been disclosed, but it is stated the property is thought to be worth $2,000 an acre. R. Clarence Brown represented both parties to the transaction.

SOUTH SALES.

ELLIS AVENUE—A noteworthy deal in south side flat property, in which a nonresident appeared as the purchaser, was the sale by E. N. Coughlin to Maude M. Shields of Indianapolis of the twelve apartment building at 3846-50 Ellis avenue, occupying a lot fronting 66 feet, with a depth of 170 feet.

A nominal consideration was given, subject to an incumbrance of $30,000, but the actual price is said to have been in the neighborhood of $60,000. The building is said to have a gross annual rent of about $6,500. W. K. Young & Bro. represented the seller and E. L. Lorscheider the buyer.

DRTXEL AVENUE—H. W. Croxton has sold to L. M. Rehnquist the six apartment building at 6317-19 Drexel avenue for a reported consideration of $25,000, taking in part payment the two apartment building and the vacant corner of Seventy-second street and Paxton avenue. F. J. Smith and P. T. Johnson of W. K. Young & Bro. represented both parties.

DREXEL AVENUE—W. T. Upton has sold to Thomas E. Robinson and Charles E. Emmitt the flat property in Drexel avenue, 198 feet north of Sixty-ninth street, lot 50x125 feet, west front, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $19,700.

FIFTY-FIFTH PLACE—The six flat building at 325-27 East Fifty-fifth place, 241 feet east of Prairie avenue, north front, 40x124 feet, has been sold by R. B. Clark and I. Springer to Theodore J. Underwood, the consideration being withheld. Mr. Underwood subsequently sold the property to James P. Casey. Whalen & Lunney were the brokers in the deal.

James C. Daly has sold to Abraham Sorkin the flat property on Fiftieth place, 65 feet east of Champlain avenue, north front, 50x110 feet, for a stated price of $22,000, subject to an incumbrance of $13,000.

PRAIRIE AVENUE—The apartment house property at the southeast corner of Prairie avenue and Fifty-seventh street, with 53x170 feet of ground, west front, has been sold by Mary A. Barrett to Alvah C. Roebuck, a consideration of $10 appearing in the transfer, subject to an incumbrance of $40,000.

WEST SALES.

SOUTH FIFTY-EIGHTH AVENUE—The Chicago Compressed Gas company, a newly organized Chicago concern, of which Harry G. Austin is president and Herbert P. Harding vice president and secretary, has leased from the Chicago Clearing Land association approximately 25,000 square feet of factory property located in the Clearing industrial district, at Fifty-eighth avenue and Sixty-sixth street.

The property will be improved at once by the owners with a modern brick and concrete factory and office building, approximately 100x200 feet, and leased to the gas company for a period of years.

The plant will be used for the manufacture of oxygen gas, welding apparatus, and storage and distribution of carbide. Private switch track connects with the Belt Railway company's Clearing yards.

BALLOU STREET—The twelve apartment building at the northwest corner of Dickens avenue and Ballou street, known as the "Ballou" apartments, on a lot 75x125 feet to an alley, has been sold by Sigard N. Gustafson to William H. Barry, the consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $24,000, but the actual figure is said to have been $48,000.

In part payment Mr. Barry conveyed the fifty feet, northeast front, on Milwaukee avenue, about 150 feet west of Crawford avenue, at a reported valuation of $17,000. A. B. Magoolski was associated with the Logan Square office of Regelin, Jenson & Co. in the transaction. Mr. Barry subsequently conveyed the apartment building to Albert Haentze of Haentze & Wheeler.

CONGRESS STREET—The apartment house property in West Congress street, 126 feet east of Springfield avenue, with 50x124 feet of ground, south front, has been sold by Fred Yuenger to Susanne Young, for an expressed consideration of $27,500, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000.

WEST ROSCOE STREET—There was filed for record the sale by the estate of Charles T. Yerkes of a tract of about ten acres in West Roscoe street, 141 feet east of California avenue, for an expressed consideration of $21,000. Title was taken by B. Garfield Gilmore for a purchaser whose name is withheld. It is said no plans have been made regarding the property and that it is likely to be subdivided. Walter Mills & Co. were the brokers.

FORTY-SIXTH AVENUE—William H. Totten has sold for Chauncey J. Blair to Charles E. Simpson 723 feet of frontage at the southwest corner of Diversey and Forty-sixth avenues, and the southeast corner of Forty-seventh avenue. The consideration is withheld, but it is said to have been in excess of $10,000.

Leases and Loans.

WHEN Albert H. Loeb vice president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., purchased the Briggs house, at the northeast corner of Randolph street and Fifth avenue, about three years ago, it was stated he probably would raze the present building at the expiration of the existing lease of he hotel and erect in its place a modern business building.

This purpose evidently has been abandoned, as he has extended the lease to the Briggs Hotel company, the present lessee, for a term of five years at an annual rent of $27,500, or a total of $137,500 for the term. The building is a six story and basement structure occupying a lot 80x142 feet, and was valued by the board of review at $83,001.

E. F. Keebler & Co. have closed two more leases in the Union hotel and restaurant building in Randolph street, between the Olympic and Garrick theaters. They leased for Ben Roth to Joseph H. Mertens a store, 9x35 feet, with an "L" 17x40 feet, for fifteen years at a term rent of $75,000, and for Joseph H. Mertens to Christ Panushis and Christ Caragianis the front part of this same store, covering 9x30 feet, for fifteen years at a term rent of $37,500. It is stated the lessees will expend about $10,000 in alterations and improvements.

An important store lease in the loop district closed during the week comprised the store at 14 South Dearborn street, 20x90 feet, which was leased by the Hamilton club to Harry A. Hammersfahr for a terms from Nov. 1 at a reported term rent of $90,000. It is the third store the lessee has opened in connection with his delicatessen luncheon business during the last twelve months. The lease was negotiated by Willis & Frankenstein.

James A. Hool of John R. Magill & Co. has leased for Philip Papas, owner of the Metropolitan restaurants, to John E. Fitzpatrick the south 17x90 feet of the store floor in the new Boston Hotel building at 33-35 South Clark street for nine years and six months at a rental of $45,000 for the term. Space was taken out of the front of this store 6x30 feet for an entrance to the hotel.

Mr. Fitzpatrick expects to spend $10,000 in remodeling the premises into a buffet. This entire first floor, 48x90 feet, excepting a space in the north part now used for a jewelry store, about 16x40 feet, was recently leased by the same brokers to Mr. Papas for ten years at a rental of $110,000. Mr. Papas spent about $15,000 in remodeling a part of the space in which he conducts a restaurant.

E. M. Griesheimer & Co. have leased for the estate of Leon Mandel to the Motor Car Sales company the store at 1458 South Michigan avenue for a period of years at an annual rental of $4,000 and to the Sterlingworth Tire company the store at 1322 South Michigan avenue for a term at a yearly rental of $2,400.

Record was made of several large loans in which S. W. Straus appeared as trustee. The largest one, amounting to $100,000, went to Michael B. Moran, and is secured by the property at the northeast corner of Parkway and Boulevard and Cottage Grove avenue, 100x144 feet, north front, with improvements. The interest rate was 6 per cent and the loan runs seven years.

Another was for $80,000, seven years, at 6 per cent, to Louis Goldman, and is secured by the property at the northeast corner of Michigan avenue and Fifty-first street, 120x160 feet.

Another for $60,000, six years, at 6 per cent, was to Sherman T. Cooper on the property east front on Ellis avenue, 157 feet south of Forty-seventh street, 61x122 feet.

Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company is trustee in a bond issue loan of $70,000, maturing in from two to five years at 6 per cent interest, to Tobias C. Gleich, secured by the property at the northeast corner of Kenmore and Ardmore avenues, west front, 100x150 feet, being improved with a new apartment structure, containing nine apartments, each with ten rooms, three baths, sun and sleeping porches, with a billiard room and club quarters in the basement for the use of tenants. It is estimated the annual rent to be derived from the building will be $22,000.

Record was made of a loan by the Scandia Life Insurance company to Charles A. Barquist of $45,000 five years at 6 per cent, secured by the property at the northwest corner of Humboldt boulevard and Armitage avenue, 105x165 feet, with improvements.

Lackner & Butz Sons have underwritten a bond issue loan of $150,000, eight years at 6 per cent, to Frank G. Lewin, secured by the property at the southwest corner of Main street and Forest avenue, Evanston, where Mr. Lewin is now erecting a five story family hotel, which, with the ground, it is said, will represent an investment of about $290,000. The loan was under the Torrens system.

Goldstine & Co., Conway building, have closed a lease for the corner store in the new building at North and Fortieth avenues, 18¾x50, to the Peter Schoenhofen Brewing company, for a period of five years at a rental of $18,000 for the term, this being about $300 per month average, and is a new record in the North avenue district.

William J. Feldmann, formerly assistant cashier of the Colonial Trust and Savings bank, which was recently absorbed, by the Central Trust company, has become connected with the firm of John A. Schmidt & Co., in the first mortgage loan business, in the Otis building.

FLATS LOOM BIG AS SAFE HOLDING FOR INVESTORS

Sales on Large Scale of High Class Apartments Mark Chicago Dealing.

Sales of valuable flat property and land purchases with the purpose of flat construction on a large scale, were especially conspicuous and encouraging features of the week's market, in view of the continued tightness of the mortgage loan market and the great difficulty experienced in negotiating loans of any magnitude. It shows in a conclusive manner the confidence of large operators in the future of the market and in the continued prosperity of the city.

The most notable of these transactions was the purchase by Murray Wolbach from John A. Chapman of 2,400 feet of frontage in Bryn Mawr Highlands, which adjoins Jackson park on the south. Of this frontage 1,200 feet is on Chappel avenue and 1,200 feet on Cahokia avenue between Sixty-seventh and Sixty-eighth streets.

Buildings to Cost $1,100,000.

The significant feature of the transaction is that Mr. Wolbach plans the construction of high grade apartment buildings to cost over $1,100,000. Plans are being prepared for the construction of two large buildings at once, and within the next three years it is stated the construction of the rest of the buildings will be carried to completion.

The transaction is of special interest both because of the large amount of building contemplated as well as for the reason it marks another important development in this district where there has been much activity in a land market as well as much building of a high grade character during the last two years.

Syndicate Gets Costly Site.

Another large building project in the Rogers Park district is announced in connection with the purchase from Mary McGrath and Anna Steiner of 150 feet on North Clark street and 140 feet deep, north of Rogers avenue, Michael L. Carmody, an attorney, taking title for a syndicate which plans the construction of a high grade thirty-six apartment building to cost about $175,000. For the land $18,000 was paid.

The proposed building will be in the court style of architecture, the court to be 40x100 feet in dimensions with a large fountain in the center with electric lights. It is expected the building will be ready for occupancy by April 1, 1915, the apartments will all be of four rooms and the building is expected to have a gross annual rent of about $25,000. Addison Blakely represented the sellers, while Regelin, Jenson & Co. represented the purchasers.

Banfords to Erect Big Building.

H. H. and W. H. Banford, extensive builders and operators in the Rogers Park and Lake View districts, will erect a high grade twelve apartment building on 50x125 feet of ground which they have just purchased from John Mangel. The apartments will contain four and five rooms.

In the way of apartment house sales the feature of the week's market was the sale of the extra high grade fifteen apartment building at 1128-46 Hyde Park boule-avenues, by August and William J. Greene avenue, by August and William J. Greene to Albert E. Cook of Kankakee. The building, which was completed only a little over a year ago, figured in the transaction at a reported valuation of $227,500 and is stated to have a gross annual rent of about $24,000.

Exchanges Furniture Factory.

Mr. Cook assumed an incumbrance of $135,000 and gave in exchange the completely equipped furniture factory known as the K. D. Manufacturing company plant at Kankakee with 150,000 feet of floor space and fifteen acres of ground. It is said to have been given a value of $120,000 in the transaction. The sale also included lumber, finished and unfinished products in process of manufacture. E. Orris Hart & Co. represented both parties to the transaction, J. F. Kyle also being connected with the transaction as broker.

Another big south side flat deal comprised the thirty apartment building at the southeast corner of Stewart avenue and Seventy-second street, which was sold by Bart Schreiber to Catherine M. Whipple of Waukegan at a reported consideration of $85,000, subject to an incumbrance of $58,000. The building is said to have a gross annual rent of about $12,000 and the purchaser gave residence properties in Waukegan in part payment. Stafford & Trankle represented Miss Whipple and Samuels & Adelson Mr. Schreiber.

North Side Apartment Sold.

H. H. and W. H. Banford also appeared as the sellers in a large north side apartment house deal. They have sold to Samuel G. Taylor Jr. their new fifteen apartment building of four and five rooms, with 60x150 feet of ground, at the northwest corner of Sunnyside and Hazel avenues, for a reported consideration of $75,000.

The building has a gross annual rent of $8,500 and Mr. Taylor assumes an incumbrance of $33,000 and gives in part payment the three story stone front six flat building at 340-42 East Fifty-sixth street, a block from Washington park, clear, valued at $25,000. Hugo Ash & Co. represented the Banfords, while Francis W. Taylor represented his brother, S. G. Taylor Jr.

There were numerous other sales with slightly less consideration, making the week's showing in this field of a decidedly encouraging character.

FORGER 12 YEARS OLD VICTIMIZES TWO GROCERS.

Youngster in Knickerbockers a... a Look of Innocence Sought as City's Youngest Check "Kiter."

"Chicago's youngest forger is being sought by the Summerdale police. He is a 12 year old boy who wears knickerbockers, a cap, and a look of innocence. In his first few hours of operation yesterday he cleaned up $18.

The boy first visited C. F. Granach, a grocer at 1355 Foster avenue.

"Please send a pound of your best coffee, a pound of creamery butter, and two cans of tomatoes up to our house," said the boy.

"Sure," said Granach. "Let's see—what's your address, now?"

"Fourteen-twenty Foster," said the youthful customer, manifesting surprise. "But you forgot the name, too. My dad is Adolph Corey."

"Sure; that's right," said the grocer again. And without question he gave $9 to the boy in change for a check for $10, made payable to Adolph Corey and signed, ostensibly, by the real estate firm of Brenner & Co., 3318 North Clark street.

The boy was far away when the delivery clerk returned with the report there was no Adolph Corey at the address given.

C. A. Johnson, a grocer at 5333 North Clark street, also gave $9 change to the same boy for the same sort of check.

Stops a Boy's Adventure.

Edward E. Vail of 1112 East Fifty-fourth place looked out the window of his home last night and saw some person in his electric automobile, which was standing in front of his home, attempting to start it. He ran out and seized George Scheffler, 14 years old, 3208 Indiana avenue. He took the boy to the Hyde Park station, where he is being held.

FOR SHERIFF

FREDERICK S. OLIVER

"Mr. Frederick S. Oliver, the Progressive nominee for Sheriff, is also a new type of public servant. He is a successful, energetic business man, who has given his time and activity to the whole progressive movement from a fundamental sense of public duty. He has nothing to gain by being elected Sheriff, but the County has a good deal to gain by putting him there."

(Editorial, Chicago Evening Post, Sept. 11, 1914.)

As far back as most men can remember, the office of Sheriff of Cook County has been the reward by political parties for services rendered by some politician. The Non-Partisan Club believes that it is about time that the great business office of Sheriff be administered by a business man. We believe that if elected to the office of Sheriff Mr. Oliver will establish such a standard of efficiency, from the viewpoint of a business administration, that the people of Cook County will insist must thereafter be followed.

Mr. Oliver is one of the best known real estate men in Chicago. As President of the Chicago Real Estate Board in 1912 he gave such an excellent business administration of the office as to call forth, at the end of his term, a unanimous resolution that the Board considered "his administration to be the best since the inception of the Board."

Dennis J. Egan Democratic Candidate FOR ASSESSOR

Dennis J. Egan was born in Chicago in 1873 and was educated in the public schools, and has had an extensive business experience. He was a member of the Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth general assemblies, and for over six years a member of the city council as alderman of the Twentieth ward. Mr. Egan is a born campaigner; he knows how to make friends and hold them. If personal popularity, good record, proven ability in public office count for anything at the polls in election time, then Mr. Egan's election to the county board of assessors is assured.

In electing Dennis J. Egan to the board of assessors the voters will not make any mistake, for he is possessed of every qualification for the office. His record in the legislature and in the city council is the best proof of this, for it is above reproach, as that of his business and private life.

After leaving school he was employed in the wholesale house of Edson Keith & Co., where he proved himself a first class business man, and was soon promoted to positions of confidence and responsibility. Later he served with credit to himself as department manager of Gage Brothers & Co. In Recorder Connery's office Mr. Egan has been and is at present in charge of the Torrens department. This in itself is sufficient evidence of his ability as a man of affairs. The recorder's office, under Mr. Connery, gives no place to any one who is not eminently qualified for the position he fills, and Mr. Egan's department is one of the most important. He has won thousands of friends by his courteous treatment of all—poor as well as rich having business there. His personal friends are legion. His election would mean honest assessments and a square deal for all.

MADISON GAME BATTLE ROYAL; SCORE, 0 TO 0

Stiff Defense Marks Encounter Between Chicago and Wisconsin.

CHANCES MISSED

"Dolly" Gray," the best ground gainer of the Maroon back field, probably will be out of the game for the remainder of the season because of a broken bone in his right ankle. Gray received the injury early in the contest, but it was not until the third period that it was apparent something was radically wrong. He was then removed from the contest. An examination at the hotel after the game revealed the seriousness of the accident. Coach Stagg thinks it will be impossible for Gray to play in the Illinois game on Nov. 14 or the Minnesota game on Nov. 21.

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 31.—[Special.]—Struggling almost to the limits of their physical ability, Chicago and Wisconsin played a 0 to 0 game today on Camp Randall field. It was a contest which long will be remembered by the large crowd which occupied every place of vantage in the inclosure. The players fought as if their lives depended upon the result, and this bitter determination resulted in a royal struggle.

Both elevens had chances to score, but so stiff was the defense of both elevens that neither could make ground when distance was needed to cross the counting line. In the opening period Chicago worked the ball to the Badger three yard line, where Wisconsin held and took the ball away on downs. It looked almost certain that the Maroons would score, but the stubborn defense of the Badgers saved the day for them.

Maroons Hold Badgers.

In the third period Wisconsin took the ball to Chicago's twelve yard line, but like their opponents the Maroons held like a stone wall and took the ball away because Wisconsin could not make the required distance in four attempts.

Outside of these two instances the battle was fought between the two twenty-five yard lines. Each made an attempt to score by field goals, but in each the efforts went wide of their marks.

Wisconsin played its best game of the year. The Badgers, who were the underdogs, fought and battled like a championship eleven, and the result is considered in the light of a Cardinal victory in Madison tonight. Wisconsin's offense also was good, and the team looked to be 50 per cent stronger today than it was two weeks ago when Purdue was met.

Wisconsin Improved Team.

The players were more aggressive and they tackled in almost faultless fashion. They got into the interference for the desired results and seldom failed in attempts to knock off tacklers. They followed the ball closely and in other ways played good football.

Chicago played all the football it knew, but its knowledge was not sufficient to beat its worthy opponents. Gray was hurt in the opening period and had to retire from the contest. His loss unquestionably weakened Chicago, as Coucnie, who took his place, did not perform to expectations. Russell was a marked player, but he got away for a few short runs.

Both teams resorted to forward passing and trick plays in the final session, but the players of both elevens were constantly on the alert and the plays were not executed successfully.

Punting was an important factor, and both Bellows and Des Jardien did nice booting. Their attempts averaged forty yards and were well placed.

It was a great contest, and, although the question of supremacy will remain unsettled for another year, today's game was so hard and bitterly fought that neither team can claim the honors. The spectators saw two evenly matched teams which played interesting football throughout the hour's battle.

Crowd Numbers 15,000.

The weather was ideal for the game, the sun shining brightly on the gathering of 15,000 persons who came from all parts of the state to see the big home game of the year. A brisk wind blew from the west, which gave the team defending that goal a decided advantage.

The Wisconsin rooters, decked with Cardinal colors, occupied the north bleachers, and the Maroon constituents were given sections on the south stand. Long before game time the rooters sang their respective songs and shouted their yells. The "U. Rah Rah Wisconsin" was given with a vengeance and the Badger band of eighty-five pieces furnished music throughout the struggle.

The large gathering presented a pretty sight. Every one wore flowers or carried banners to denote their allegiance. The field was in perfect condition and this situation favored the Maroons. The goal posts were decorated with Cardinal and Maroon bunting and all the fraternity houses were decorated with the same colors.

DETAILS OF PLAY.

Chicago won the toss and defended the west goal. Mucks kicked off for Wisconsin to Schaefer, who was thrown out of bounds on his "Dolly" Gray of Maroons Skirting Badger Wing on an End Run; Photograph Taken at Camp Randall and Rushed to Chicago.

The accompanying photograph, showing perhaps one of the last runs "Dolly" Gray ever will make for the Maroons because of his injury, is a notable example of 'Tribune Service." The photograph was taken during the first quarter of the game at Madison yesterday just before Chicago threatened for a touchdown. It was developed and printed while the game was being finished. It then was ready to be shipped on the train leaving Madison at 5:40 o'clock, reaching "The Tribune" office at 10:30 o'clock. The photograph was etched and stereotyped in time to find a place in the edition going to press at midnight.

HASKELL SCALP TO NOTRE DAME

Redskins Defeated Only After Hard Fight, 21-7; Long Runs by Bergman.

Notre Dame, Ind., Oct. 31.—[Special.]—The Haskell Indians went down to defeat at the hands of Notre Dame today, 21 to 7. It was one of the hardest fought games ever played on Cartier field, and the gold and blue had to go the limit to defeat the redskins. Bergman, at quarter, showed one of the most sensational games that was ever played by a Notre Dame back. He made wonderful long runs, one of which was eighty yards and a touchdown. He also scored the other two touchdowns for Notre Dame.

Many Fumbles at Start.

The first quarter was featureless. Many fumbles took place on both sides, and the playing was ragged. In the second quarter Bergman took the ball over the goal from the forty yard line, the result of a trick play. He played the whole game in the third quarter, pulling off the eighty yard run and scoring another touchdown after a brilliant end dash. He was replaced by Larkin in the fourth quarter for a short period, but was in again before the game ended. Eichenlaub was also in the game the last five minutes of play.

The Indians scored their touchdown in the last quarter, getting away with a long forward pass. Jamieson, Clements, and Frazier played the best game for the red men.

Stars for Notre Dame.

Pliksa, Duggan, and Cofall also played a great game for Notre Dame. Pliska and Dugagn did fine line plunging and Cofall contributed great open field running. Lineup:

Illinois Overwhelms Minnesota in Desperate Gridiron Conflict, Winning in Fourth Period, 21 to 6

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 31.—Minnesota's western championship hopes are shattered, and Illinois' chances for premier honors stand out brightly as a result of the latter's 21 to 6 victory over the Gophers yesterday in one of the most bitterly contested games ever played on Northrop field.

Old football, new football, strategy, and luck all failed to produce a count in the first three periods. In the fourth period Illinois opened up with a bewildering array of forward passes and sensational line plunges that ripped gaps in the Gopher defense, three times rushing the ball over the line. Minnesota scored its only touchdown in the last few minutes of play, when Bierman shot over the line after the ball had been placed within striking distance with a long forward pass. Pogue scored two of Illinois' touchdowns, and Clark one. Macomber kicked three goals from touchdowns.

Critics Praise Illinois.

Not since the days when Michigan and Minnesota met here has there been such a desperate contest on Northrop field, in the opinion of football critics, who agreed tonight that Coach Zuppke has perfected a machine well up to championship standards.

Perhaps the most perfect and spectacular play of today's game was a long forward pass, hurled from the thirty-five yard line, which placed the ball within a few inches of Minnesota's goal line. Clark then plunged through for Illinois' first touchdown, and a deep groan rumbled through the crowded stands as Minnesota saw its championship chances go glimmering. Then, before the Gophers recovered from the shock, Illinois received a kickoff and rushed the ball to Minnesota's thirty-five yard line in two downs. Then Pogue skirted the right flank for the second touchdown.

Minnesota Crosses Line.

Minnesota showed a wonderful flash of ability in the next three minutes, forcing the ball down the field by line drives and forward passes, which made possible its single touchdown. In the last few minutes of play Pogue intercepted a long forward pass and zigzagged his way through a thin field for the final touchdown.

Four of Illinois' ten forward passes were successful. Minnesota was crude in this department of the game, particularly in the first half, and only eight of its twenty-seven passes proved successful. Solon outpunted Macomber, while generalship honors were slightly in Clark's favor.

"We will not stop until we have the conference championship safely tucked away," was the only comment Coach Zuppke would make after the game. Coach Williams refused to talk.

In the first quarter the Gopher line outplayed the Illinois wall, but Zuppke's backs regained the lost ground and neither team had a decided advantage. Minnesota worked the ball to the Illinois three yard line at the start of the next period, but a pass over the line failed and neither team threatened seriously in the remainder of the quarter. During the half Minnesota executed thirteen successful passes, many for big gains.

Second Half.

Macomber kicked off to Solon on Minnesota's five yard line. He returned it twenty-five yards. Failing to gain, Minnesota punted and Pogue on the first play ran thirty-five yards around Minnesota's right end, putting the ball on Minnesota's forty yard line. A penalty put Illinois back to midfield and Macomber punted to Hamilton on Minnesota's two yard line. Hamilton immediately punted.

A completed forward pass gained twenty-five yards for Illinois, Macomber to Clark. Two plunges made it first down on Minnesota's ten yard line. Minnesota held for downs. An exchange of punts in which Hamilton outkicked Macomber ten yards gave the ball to Illinois on its own thirty-five yard line, where Pogue dashed off another fifteen yards.

Three spread plays, with Pogue carrying the ball, put it on the Minnesota forty yard line. Standing in midfield, Macomber attempted a place kick, but it went low. Clark made a forward pass to Squier good for thirty yards just as the quarter ended. The ball was in Illinois' possession on Minnesota's thirty-two yard line.

During the quarter Illinois opened up a widespread formation, from which they shot forward passes that went for good gains. Score: Illinois, 0; Minnesota, 0.

Fourth Quarter.

On two plays at the beginning of the fourth quarter Pogue put the ball on Minnesota's three yard line. The next play Illinois was shoved back seven yards and Macomber fell back for a place kick from the twenty yard line. It was a fake and he attempted again from the thirty yard line. Minnesota blocked the kick and recovered the ball on its own thirty-five yard line.

Two perfect forward passes took the ball from midfield to the Gophers' one yard line, where Clark went over for a touchdown. Macomber kicked goal. Score: Illinois, 7; Minnesota, 0.

Solon kicked off to Chapman, who returned the ball to Minnesota's forty-five yard line. A splendid kick. In two plays Pogue went over for another touchdown. Macomber kicked goal. Score: Illinois, 14; Minnesota, 0.

Illinois kicked off to Solon on Minnesota's five yard line. He returned it fifteen yards. Minnesota in desperation opened up pass after pass, only one of which was successful, Solon carrying the ball on a thirty yard run into Illinois territory. Zuppke sent in a flood of substitutes. Another pass to Solon took the ball to Illinois' ten yard line. In two plays Bierman went over for touchdown for Minnesota. Solon missed goal. Score: Illinois, 14; Minnesota, 6.

Pogue Scores on Long Run.

Chapman kicked off to Minnesota's goal line and Solon returned the ball twenty-five yards. Three forward passes took the ball from Minnesota's own twenty-five yard to Illinois' twenty-five yard line. Minnesota made ten yards on short line plunges, then lost the ball. Minnesota opened up forward passes again. Pogue caught one on his own twenty-five yard line and ran for a touchdown. Macomber kicked goal.

Score: Illinois, 21; Minnesota, 6.

Macomber kicked off to Townley on Minnesota's twenty-five yard line. He returned it to his own thirty yard line. The game was called on the first play, a Minnesota forward pass which netted twenty yards.

YALE THRASHES COLGATE, 49 TO 7

Eli Eleven Takes Revenge for Beating Administered Last Year.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 31.—[Special.]—For giving Yale a 16 to 6 drubbing last year, Coach Hinkley this afternoon hitched a revenge score of 49 to 7 on the Colgate eleven. The visitors were allowed to score when the Yale second eleven was bodily gridironed during the third period.

Facing the Eli subs, Colgate found the traveling much smoother and ground a highway through for forty yards to the Yale goal for its only touchdown. Aside from this annexation of Eli territory Colgate threw a scare into the Yale regulars in the closing minutes of the second period, pushing them back until the visitors were within a yard of the home eleven's citadel, where the Yale bulldog's back stiffened, and the Colgate attack was expended in four futile downs.

Colgate Men Gain.

Legore's sixty-five yard kick relieved the pressure, but Colgate came crashing back and Swarthout and Robinson had plowed to the Yale thirty yard line when the half closed. Colgate was dangerous at no other time.

Yale swept the field in opening the battle, traveling the length of the field four times during the first half and breaking across the visitors' goal for a touchdown in every instance. There were no penalty runs, but the Yale artillery attack, only occasionally varied by a lateral or forward pass, brushed the New York state team for four series of runs that began at the Yale twenty yard line and did not cease until four touchdowns had been registered.

Short Run Net Scores.

In all four cases the rushes that rang up the touchdowns were for less than five yards.

The game was practically played in this half. Lineup:

WILLIAMS HOLDS TIGERS TO A TIE

Visitors Outplay Princeton First Three Periods; Score, 7-7.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 31.—[Special.]—Williams held Princeton to a 7 to 7 tie this afternoon, after leading the Tigers until the last few minutes of play.

Williams outplayed the Tigers for the first three periods, keeping the ball in Princeton's territory most of the time, and uncovered a pair of real stars in Tompkins and Toolan.

In the first period Toolan made a sensational run of fifty-five yards, and a forward pass of fifteen yards from Toolan to Overton resulted in the touchdown.

Eels Boots Goal.

Eels kicked the goal, making the score Williams, 7; Princeton, 0. Glick was substituted for Ames at quarter, and in the first few minutes of play made a forty-five yard run to Williams' twenty yard line. Tompkins intercepted a forward pass on Williams' two yard line, preventing the Tigers scoring in this period.

In the third period Trenkman intercepted a double pass and gained six yards, placing the ball on Williams' twenty-four yard line. On the next play Glick advanced the ball twenty yards. Williams held Princeton on downs with the ball on its two yard line.

Tie Score at Finish.

Not until the fourth period did the Princeton team show much. A blocked kick gave Princeton the ball on Williams' twenty yard line. On a quarter back play Glick scored a touchdown. Law kicked the goal which tied the game with less than a minute to play. Lineup:

Galesburg, Ill., Oct. 31.—[Special.]—Knox college was defeated by Lake Forest, 14 to 7, this afternoon in a "Little Five" collegiate contest. Knox scored early in the game on a long pass from Norman to Wheeler, who made a spectacular seventy yard run. On two line plunges Rosson then was sent over for a touchdown. In the second quarter Lake Forest came back strong and Kreuger was put over for a touchdown on irresistible line plunges. Later in the quarter Norman muffed a punt by Smith, and Gray, grabbing the ball, ran thirty yards for a to 3. Lineup:

'Tribune' Gives Service on Football Results.

Thousands of Chicagoans called up "The Tribune" yesterday for the earliest information regarding the football games. It was "The Tribune" exchange's record day in calls concerning the gridiron pastime, far surpassing any in the memory of the operators and the members of the sporting staff. Football enthusiasts began early to seek information. The inquiries started at about 3 p. m., and from that time until the city edition went to press the telephone girls and sport writers were kept on the jump replying to anxious Chicagoans. The rush period covered from 4:30 p. m. to 7:30 p. m. During those three hours, it is estimated, "The Tribune" responded to nearly 7,000 calls for football information, including not only results but the progress of games. The enthusiasm shown is attributed to the fact that three games in which many Chicagoans were interested were occurring on the same day. In fact, the majority of inquiries took in the trio of contests — the Harvard-Michigan, Chicago-Wisconsin, and Illinois-Minnesota events — though the Yale-Colgate and Notre Dame-Haskell clashes came in for no little attention.

CORNELL DOWNS HOLY CROSS, 48-3

Ithacans Score Six Touchdowns, Using Second and Third String Men.

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 31.—[Special.]—The Cornell football machine downed Holy Cross out of its path this afternoon by a score of 48 to 3, scoring six touchdowns, half of which were made with second and third string men in the lineup.

Holy Cross managed to score on a field goal, which Murphy booted over from the twenty-five yard line early in the game.

The only weakness manifested by the Ithacans was at right end, where Ohearn was circled for several good gains. Shuler and Philippi played brilliantly for the Ithacans, and Williams, a substitute full back, scored a touchdown on a kickoff, running through the entire Holy Cross team. Lineup:

3,000 CHEER ILLINOIS' WIN.

Urbana, Ill., Oct. 31.—[Special.]—Illinois rooters, 3,000 strong, paraded tonight celebrating the Illini triumph at Minneapolis. All the afternoon the Illinois field rang with cheers as the game was followed. L. B. King, a Champaign enthusiast, when the first Illinois score was made, fell from a second story window and narrowly escaped injury. At noon tomorrow the Illinois warriors will be met at the train and hauled to the campus. Illinois rooters were surprised at the Chicago-Wisconsin score. It had been figured that the Maroons would eliminate the Badgers. Now the Illini see two hard games instead of one in prospect

LUCK FAVORS HARVARD IN BEATING MICHIGAN

Wolverines Lose, 7-0, Missing Two Chances to Score.

'MAULY,' GAME'S HERO

BY RING W. LARDNER.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 31.—[Special.]—After this when an easterner tells you that football teams in this neck of the woods outclass those of our middle west try not to laugh yourself to death. The second big intersectional game of the season was won today by an eastern team, but the eastern team came terribly near to being licked, 14 to 0. Following the instructions of my boss, I will state here in the first paragraph that Harvard beat Michigan, 7 to 0, and then try to write an impartial story of the game, giving Michigan a little the better of it.

Johnny Maulbetsch of Ann Arbor, a [illegible] pound sophomore, gained more ground through Harvard's line this afternoon than all the eastern backs combined have been able to gain in the last three years. Moreover, the same Johnny Maulbetsch of Ann Arbor gained more ground against Harvard by rushing than all the Harvard backs combined gained against Michigan.

Maulbetsch Hero of Game.

Johnny Maulbetsch, with a bit of assistance from his fellow backs and the linemen, made two touchdowns, covering practically the entire length of the field, and, for long stretches of time, caused Harvard's vaunted defense to look as porous as a ripe pretzel. Harvard had just one chance to score and scored. Michigan had two wonderful chances lost them both. Harvard is credited with the victory and Michigan charged with the defeat. But no one who saw the game can look you in the eye and tell you that Harvard was better than Michigan.

A mixup in signals cost Michigan one touchdown. A bit of bad judgment was responsible for the loss of the other. Larry Splawn missed the signal and Tommy Hughitt displayed the bit of bad judgment. Splawn was playing his first big game and is just a kid. Hughitt was in the game on his nerve, so it would be worse than folly to find fault with either of them. Besides, they played good football, great football in Hughitt's case, considering the condition he was in, and it was just their bad luck that their mistakes should be made when they did the most harm.

Missed Signal Costly.

The missed signal incident occurred in the first period of play, following the first of Maulbetsch's wonderful parades. The ball was Michigan's on the Harvard four yard line, and it was fourth down, with two yards to go. But, wait a minute. A second before it had been third down with two yards to go on the same four yard line. If Hughitt had carried out the wishes of his coach at this point, he would have sent Maulbetsch twice through the line on a tandem formation, striving for a first down then and a touchdown later. But he sent "Mauly" once at the line with insufficient aid, and then gave the signal for Michigan's double pass forward pass.

Hughitt took the ball and ran out to the left, passing to Splawn as he went. It was Splawn's duty, on this play, to [illegible] turned the other way to forward pass over the right side of Michigan's line to Lyons. Lyons was standing unnoticed a mile from any Harvard man.

Splawn Thrown for Loss.

A good pass or even a fairly good one would have meant a touchdown beyond peradventure. But Splawn did not understand that he was to pass at all. Instead of making any attempt to throw the ball, he tried to run with it in the same direction Hughitt had been going. Naturally the Harvard defensive men were all heading in that direction and Larry was thrown for a four or five yard loss. The ball went to Harvard and after being conveyed to the Crimson three yard mark on a penalty for offside, was punted out of immediate danger.

The second and last faux pas was pulled in the third period. Maulbetsch had marched to the Harvard fifteen yard mark on as pretty a series of plunges as you would care to see. One play of the series caught the Crimson entirely off its guard and counted for eight yards. It was worked thus: Hughitt gave a signal and then appeared to hesitate. He shouted: "Signals!" and made as if to change his position, and while Harvard was waiting for more signals, the ball was passed to Little "Mauly" for his plunge. Well, with the ball on the Harvard fifteen yard mark, Yost substituted James for Staatz. James went into the game as a messenger boy and his message was to Hughitt.

Michigan Misses Last Chance

"Seven men on the line and Maulbetsch with the tandem." Thrice "Mauly" [illegible] through and thrice he gained, a total of better than nine yards for the three attempts. Then, with a little more than half a yard to go on the fourth down, Hughitt tried something else. Harvard's secondary defense was grouped up close and Maulbetsch was sent unaided by a tandem of backs into a line where no hole was. Harvard stopped him there and stopped him short. Hardwick punted to his own forty yard mark and Michigan's final chance was gone. Another advance was started as the fourth period began, but a fifteen yard penalty for holding checked it once and for all.

In the closing moments of the game Splawn punted repeatedly on first and second downs, the Wolverines evidently figuring that their best bet, with Maulbetsch's strength spent, was to trust to luck and pray for a Crimson fumble. But the fumble was not forthcoming. Harvard was just as willing as Michigan to adopt the kicking game and there was little rushing of the ball toward the finish.

How Harvard Scored.

Harvard's march to the deciding touchdown came in the first part of the second quarter and a forward pass did most of the business. Receiving one of Splawn's punts on the Michigan forty-five yard line, the Crimson showed its best attack of the day. With Hardwick, Bradlee, and Francke carrying it, the pigskin was carried through the Wolverine line to the thirty yard mark. There the Ann Arbor first line of defense held and on the third down, with ten yards to go, Hardwick's forward heave to St. John Smith caught the western backs napping and netted twelve yards.

That took some of the fight out of the Wolverines, and it was comparatively easy for Harvard to plunge through the line the remaining eighteen yards. Hardwick made the touchdown on a cross buck through center, where the defense should have been hardest to penetrate, but unfortunately Michigan had neglected to close up and was playing as loose as if the ball had been in midfield. It is the unalterable Harvard custom to cross buck when near a touchdown and Michigan probably should have been expecting just what came off.

Luck Favors Harvard.

One must not forget to give Harvard full credit for this profitable advance or for its stout defense when Michigan was threatening to score. Nevertheless, a team must be accounted lucky when its opponent gets as near to a touchdown as Michigan was on two occasions today and fails to count once.

Through most of the battle Hughitt's judgment was wonderful. Harvard's loose defense made it dangerous to try the open game, and with the Crimson tackles playing wide, it was good, sound common sense to keep at the line, especially with so reliable plunger as Maulbetsch. Forward passing was a minus quantity with Michigan as it was an invaluable asset to Harvard. One trick play of Yost's worked like a charm. This was the fake forward pass, with Hughitt, the pretender, standing in such an unprotected position that a Harvard tackle rushed straight at him and thus put himself out of the play, for just as he was about to stop the prospective pass the ball was taken from Hughitt's hand by Splawn and carried down the field for some fifteen yards.

Careful of Hughitt.

The Wolverines' onside kick was a fizzle. Michigan's backs seemed unwilling to make a grab for the ball when it was right in front of them, and when they had a legal right to grab it and run as far as possible. Hughitt went into the game with orders to keep out of everything. Yost figured that his spirit and good judgment were worth too much to risk his being hurt. He therefore made no attempt to catch punts, but allowed them to hit the ground, and in most instances this worked well, for the ball bounded backward toward the Harvard goal. Moreover, the catching of punts is a precarious business on a field where the wind is blowing from all directions at once.

Once or twice, however, Tommy disobeyed orders to the extent of giving himself the ball in scrimmage, but Maulbetsch was so much more successful than anybody else at advancing that there was little excuse for keeping it away from him, particularly since he kept saying: "Give it to me again; I'm going good."

Hughitt a Wonderful Cripple.

Yes, Hughitt played wonderfully for a crippled man and deserves a great deal more of credit than censure. And Capt. Raynsford showed more football than anybody of the Harvard line and did all in his power to lead his team to triumph. The Maize and Blue leader, playing his first year as a center, worked the possibilities of his position to the limit and beyond it. He was to be found near the bottom of every pile that resulted from an attempted Harvard line plunge and was tackling on the ends when he wasn't busy elsewhere.

Of the other Michigan linemen, Reimann, a green youngster, showed powerfully both on attack and defense, and Cochran, at the other tackle, did his part, though more was expected of him because of his experience. It is a cinch that Harvard's tackles did not shine by comparison with Michigan's. Benton, Michigan's left end, had a chance early in the game to make himself famous for a lifetime. A Harvard fumble near midfield popped right into his hands and right out again. If he had been able to hold onto it he would almost certainly have run for a touchdown, for there was nobody in front of him and he is one of the fastest men in the Michigan squad.

Splawn's Punting Great.

Larry Splawn's punting was great and his failure to score a field goal was excusable, inasmuch as he made no attempt at one. There really was no chance, for Michigan either was so far from the goal posts as to make point kicking impossible or so near as to make a touchdown the prize to be sought. Lyons, Maulbetsch's running mate, had little success in his attempts to gain and was called on only for the purpose of giving "Mauly" time to breathe.

Walter Camp was among the 30,000 who saw the game and it is to be hoped that he was looking at it during Maulbetsch's periods of progression. Little "Mauly" was as nearly unstoppable as a half back ever gets and if he doesn't develop into a second Heston before his college career is over I'm a Belgian spy. "Mauly" runs so close to the ground as a mole and keeps his feet even when his head is about on the same level. He found the holes his mates made for him and kept on going forward for yards and yards after he was tackled by the Harvard half backs. This boy is a bear and has proved it to the satisfaction, or dissatisfaction, of everybody I've talked to since the game. To tell what he did to the Harvard line would be impossible. One must have seen it to appreciate it.

Lardner Praises "Mauly."

Nor did his offensive performance let him out. He played a swell game as defensive half back, too, though he may have been partly responsible for the success of two Harvard forward passes, one of which helped the Crimson to a touchdown and the other of which was harmless, coming as it did in the last second of play.

Maulbetsch, Hughitt, Raynsford, Reimann, Splawn, all five of them, deserve a few well chosen words of praise, but I haven't time to choose the words.

On the Harvard side Mr. Hardwick was the shining light, and if Brickley or Mahan is better than this bird I would hate to play football against either of them. Hardwick did some of Harvard's punting and did it well. He did most of Harvard's rushing and did it well. He made the important one of Harvard's two forward passes and made it well. And he played most of Harvard's defensive game. St. John Smith and Francke were the other Harvard boys who most impressed us barbarians.

Mahan Not in the Game.

Mahan didn't get into the game at all. But even if he had been in there I'll bet he couldn't have stopped Maulbetsch. Eddie, which is Mahan's first name, has a weak tendon, which is likely to go back on him any moment. They are saving him for Princeton and Yale, but chiefly for Yale. Pennock, Harvard's strongest guard, also was on the side lines, but they didn't keep him there because they couldn't use him. He, too, is in poor shape.

Harvard has a dandy football team. No team with a Hardwick, a Francke, a Smith, and a Bradlee could be called weak, and the mates of these men are anything but dubs. It would have been hard luck for Harvard to lose the game, for Harvard played splendidly and took full advantage of Michigan's mistakes. Nevertheless, it was hard luck for Michigan to lose and I believe Harvard will admit it.

Michigan Rooters Prominent.

The spirit displayed by the rooters was worth the price of admission. Michigan's supporters, evidently numbering well over a thousand, held their own with the Harvard bugs and gave their yells and songs so splendidly that Harvard applauded them to the echo. In turn Michigan applauded Harvard's cheering and singing. The best of feeling seemed to prevail, and the Michiganders who made the trip cannot complain that they were badly treated. Harvard stock has gone way up in the eyes of Michigan as the result of this day's doings.

The Michigan Locomotive and the two songs, "The Victors" and "Hurrah for the Yellow and Blue," made an instant and immense hit with the Crimson adherents. The Michigan band, forty strong, also scored with the easterners. The band marched and looked as well as it played, and that is saying that it marched and looked first rate, A No. 1.

Cheers for Brickley.

Charley Brickley, the disabled Harvard captain, was cheered loud and long when he appeared on the field before the game. I felt sorry for Charley, and I suppose he'll be glad to hear it. I also felt sorry for the Harvard fans who were prevented by law from carrying red flags. But I would rather be prevented from carrying a red flag than see my team lose a football game. Harvard should worry.

It was a beautiful day for football, with the sun shining its darndest and the air just crisp enough. The game was started three minutes ahead of time and handled so snappily by the officials that it wound up before the dread darkness set in.

Speaking of the officials, there was no kick coming against them. Michigan was penalized oftener than Harvard, but that was because Michigan more frequently disobeyed the rules as set down in the annual guide.

Celebrating the Result.

The Michigan crowd, disappointed as it was, continued to keep Boston awake until the special train left for the west. And now I must catch the special, but I will take just time enough to mention the fact that the Harvard players, as a reward for making that touchdown, were immediately treated to drinks of water, served in separate and distinct sanitary cups.

DETAILS OF PLAY.

Michigan won the toss. Francke kicked off for Harvard. Returning the kickoff to its own thirty yard line, Michigan speedily made two first downs through Harvard's line and off tackle. Then the Crimson line stiffened and Splawn tried an onside kick. Harvard recovered the ball on its own thirty yard line, but fumbled on the first play. Hughitt recovered the ball for Michigan on Harvard's thirty yard line. An exchange of punts gave Michigan the ball on its own forty-five yard line.

A five yard penalty and some great line plunging by Maulbetsch and Hughitt gave Michigan first down on Harvard's twenty-three yard line. Michigan's overanxiety cost it five yards on a penalty for offside. A fake forward pass beautifully worked on the third down, Splawn to Maulbetsch, gave Michigan first down on Harvard's ten yard line. Maulbetsch went through center twice for a total of six yards. He made another yard in his third attempt, and it was fourth down with one yard to gain. A double pass lost four yards and it was Harvard's ball on its seven yard line.

Harvard was penalized five yards for offside play. Hardwick punted from behind his goal line to the Harvard forty-three yard line. At the end of the first period the score was: Harvard, 0; Michigan, 0.

Second Period.

Michigan was penalized fifteen yards for holding on the second play. Another penalty of five yards followed. Splawn punted to Hardwick, who was thrown on Harvard's thirty-two yard line. Francke punted to Michigan's sixteen yard line. Splawn punted back on the second play to Michigan's forty-five yard line. Bigelow went to center in place of Wallace, who was hurt. Harvard carried the ball to Michigan's thirty yard line on plunging.

Harvard failed twice at the line, but worked a forward pass, Bradlee to Smith, for twelve yards, placing the ball on Michigan's eighteen yard line. Francke made first down on Michigan's eight yard line in three line plunges. Francke gained a yard off tackle. Hardwick went through center for a touchdown. Hardwick kicked a goal. Score: Harvard, 7; Michigan, 0.

Splawn kicked off over the goal line and Harvard scrimmaged on its twenty yard line. Hardwick made eight yards on a fake kick, but Harvard was penalized five yards for offside playing. Francke punted to Michigan's forty yard line. Maulbetsch went eight yards through the Harvard line. Harvard intercepted a forward pass and Francke immediately punted to Michigan's twenty-seven yard line. Maulbetsch went through center for first down. Lyons was held for no gain. Splawn punted out of bounds on the Harvard twenty-five yard line. Francke punted to midfield. Harvard recovered the ball on a fumble, just as half time was called. Score, Harvard, 7; Michigan, 0.

Third Period.

Splawn kicked off to Bradless, who returned to Harvard's forty yard line. On the second play Hardwick punted to Michigan's twenty yard line. Splawn punted to the Harvard forty yard line when Michigan failed to gain. Hardwick failed to gain on a fake kick. Hardwick punted to Michigan's thirty-five yard line. Michigan could not gain through the line and Splawn punted to Logan, who was thrown on his thirty-five yard line.

Michigan was given the ball on a penalty for tripping. Lyons and Maulbetsch made nine yards through the line. Maulbetsch went through center for five yards, and it was Michigan's ball on the Harvard twenty-eight yard line, but Michigan was penalized fifteen yards for holding. Time was taken out when Benton was injured, but he resumed play.

A fake forward pass failed to work and Michigan lost ten yards. Splawn punted over the goal line. Hardwick punted from the twenty yard line to Maulbetsch. Maurice Dunne, son of Gov. Dunne of Illinois, replaced Benton. Great line plunging by Maulbetsch gave Michigan first down. Maulbetsch went around tackle for four yards. Acting Captain Trumbull of Harvard was injured.

Maulbetsch went through again for first down. Time was taken out for Cochran. Maulbetsch went through to the Harvard eight yard line. Maulbetsch was hurt and time was taken out. James replaced Staatz at right end for Michigan. Maulbetsch plunged through Harvard to the five yard line, where Michigan had a yard to gain on the fourth down. Harvard held for downs. Francke kicked to midfield. R. Curtis replaced Parson at left tackle for Harvard as the third period ended. Score: Harvard, 7; Michigan, 0.

Fourth Period.

Michigan had the ball on Harvard's forty-five yard line. On a double pass Maulbetsch carried the ball six yards to Harvard's thirty-five yard line. Michigan was penalized fifteen yards for holding. On the next play Michigan fumbled and Harvard recovered the ball on its own forty-five yard line. Hardwick punted out of bounds at the Michigan thirty-five yard line. Time was taken out when Trumbull was hurt. Splawn punted to the Harvard thirty yard line. Bradlee went through the line for six yards. Francke failed to gain and Hardwick punted over Hughitt's head on the Michigan twenty yard line.

Splawn punted to midfield on first play. Coolidge replaced Smith for Harvard. A Harvard forward pass, Hardwick to Coolidge, gained twenty yards and the ball was on the Michigan thirty yard line. Francke went through the Michigan line for twelve yards, but Harvard was penalized five yards for offside. Watson broke through on an attempted forward pass and threw Hardwick for a loss.

A forward pass on the fourth down failed and it was Michigan's ball. Splawn immediately punted to the Harvard twenty yard line. Francke went through the Michigan line for twenty yards. Hardwick punted to Maulbetsch on Michigan's twenty yard line. Splawn punted on the second down to the Harvard twenty-five yard line. Rehor replaced Watson and Quail took McHale's place. Harvard's line plunging carried the ball to midfield. A forward pass, Hardwick to T. Coolidge, put the ball on Michigan's thirty yard line just as time was called. Play Kicking Game to Save Stars for Clash at Ann Arbor Saturday.

FINAL SCORE IS 40 TO 6.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 31.—The University of Pennsylvania football team defeated Swarthmore college on Franklin field today, 40 to 6. The game was good practice for Pennsylvania, which meets Michigan at Ann Arbor next Saturday.

The home eleven played mostly straight football, few forward passes or other open plays being attempted. When the wind was at its back, Pennsylvania constantly kicked, evidently trying to win without taking too great a risk of having its best men injured. The feature of the game was a ninety-five yard run by Tucker, who caught the ball on a kickoff and evaded the whole Swarthmore team.

Swarthmore's touchdown was made on a sixty-six yard run by Locke, who broke through Pennsylvania's line and dodged the backfield. Lineup:

NO OUTBREAK AT ANN ARBOR.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 31.—[Special.]—Fire Chief Charley Andrews went to a lot of unnecessary trouble when he ordered Ann Arbor merchants to clear the alleys of all boxes and other combustibles, fearing Michigan students might try to burn down the town in the event of a victory over Harvard. There was no jollification in Ann Arbor this evening, for, despite the stubborn battle put up by the Wolverines, nothing short of a victory woul dcause the stay-at-homes to build bonfires in the middle of the car tracks. The result is that tonight the little university city is as quiet as a country graveyard, and the student council hasn't had any trouble with hilarious followers of the Maize and Blue. However, plans are being made to give the team a big reception when it returns from Cambridge, and Yost's warriors will be as cordially received as though they had won a great victory.

Campion, 21; Marquette Freshies, 0

Prairie du Chien, Wis., Oct. 31.—[Special.]—Campion defeated the Marquette freshmen today, 21 to 0. The army game was used by both sides. Open play was used effectively. In the second half O'Rourke caught a straight forward pass and ran thirty yards. After this the visitors never crossed Campion's thirty yard line.

Notes of Maroon's Game

Madison, Wis., Oct. 31.—[Special.]—Pete Russell, the Maroon quarter back, left his money and watch in Milwaukee, where the team spent Friday night. When he arrived in Madison his overcoat was stolen from the hotel.

The usual number of souvenir hunters stripped the bunting from the goal posts.

"Red" Parker, the former Wisconsin cheer leader, led several Badger yells.

Every available seat was occupied when the teams appeared on the field.

Coach Stagg used the same motorcycle on the field as he has in Chicago.

The Chicago special arrived half an hour before the game, and the rooters had to hurry to the different restaurants to get a bite to eat.

Stagg remained on the side lines after the game and entertained a large group with his version of the battle.

Dan Trude and Frank Templeton were among some of the former Maroon stars who saw the game.

Today's game will mean the retention of Coaches Juneau and Driver at Wisconsin for another year at least.

NORMAN BOOTS A GOAL.

Northwestern university freshmen defeated the varsity eleven on Northwestern field yesterday, 7 to 6. The freshmen were the first to score. Left Halfback Tweed intercepted a forward pass in the second quarter and ran fifty yards for a touchdown. Norman kicked goal. In the third quarter Whittle, a substitute on the varsity, plunged through the line and scored after a series of plays across the field. An attempt at goal failed and the freshmen won.

Walter Kraft, coach of the freshman eleven, said after the game that the regular team played a little better than ever before this season. Lineup:

INDIANA OUTCLASSES MIAMI.

Bloomington, Ind., Oct. 31.—[Special.]—Outplayed and outclassed, Miami lost to Indiana, 48 to 3, here this afternoon after being touted as one of the strongest teams in the Buckeye state. Miami would have had a complete shutout but for the toe of Left Half Pierce, who dropped back on the forty yard line in the third period and kicked a beautiful field goal.

In the first quarter Miami was within six yards of the Hoosier goal, when Capt. Reed fumbled the ball. It was recovered by Krause. This was the only chance the visitors had of making a touchdown.

Quarter Back Whitaker of the Crimson brought the Indiana bleacherites to their feet in the third quarter by running fifty-eight yards for a touchdown. Capt. M. Erhart was injured in the same period and was replaced by Shonkwiler.

BADGERS FIGHT MAROONS TO TIE

Gray was hurt and Coutchie took his place. Chicago could not gain, and Russell punted to Bellows, who was tackled on his fifteen yard line as time was called for the end of the first period. Score—Chicago, 0; Wisconsin, 0.

Nearing Maroon Goal.

When play was resumed Bellows skirted Chicago's left end and then punted to Russell, who was stopped on his forty-two yard line. Coutchie made three yards off tackle and Flood hit center for two more. Chicago could not gain on its third attempt. Des Jardien then booted to Smith, who was stopped on his fifteen yard line. Bellows punted over Russell's head and the ball rolled to Chicago's fifteen yard line.

Time was called for Russell. Chicago could not gain and Des Jardien punted to Bellows, who returned the ball to the center of the field. A forward pass, Bellows to Stavrum, was intercepted by Des Jardien on his fifteen yard line. Russell could not gain on a punt formation, and then Des Jardien punted to Smith, who was downed on his forty-five yard line.

Touchback for Chicago.

Wisconsin lost five yards on an end run and Bellows punted out of bounds on Chicago's fifteen yard line. The Maroons could not gain and Des Jardien punted to Bellows, who was brought to earth on Chicago's thirty-six yard line. Wisconsin was penalized five yards for offside play. Bellows attempted a field goal from the thirty-seven yard line, but the attempt was wide and went as a touchback for Chicago.

Taylor replaced Cummings at left half back for Wisconsin. Chicago was unable to gain and Des Jardien punted to Smith, who was stopped in the center of the field. The Badger backs made eighteen yards off the Chicago tackles and the ball was on Chicago's forty yard line.

Kreutz gained ten yards and the ball rested on the Maroon thirty yard line. Kreutz was hurt on the play and had to retire from the contest. On the next play Wisconsin was penalized fifteen yards for use of hands in the interference and time was called for the first half. Score: Chicago, 0; Wisconsin, 0.

Gray in the Lineup.

When the teams took the field for the second half Gray took his position at left half back for Chicago. Flood kicked off for Chicago to Keeler, who was stopped on his sixty yard line. A forward pass, Bellows to Stavrum, netted ten yards, and the ball rested on the Maroon forty-two yard line. The Badger backs made first down by driving off Chicago's tackle and the ball was on Chicago's thirty-five yard line. Chicago was penalized five yards for offside play.

Smith broke through Chicago's line and carried the ball to the Maroon twelve yard mark. Galvin, who replaced Kreutz, full back for Wisconsin, was thrown for a two yard loss. Albert replaced White at right guard for Chicago. Wisconsin then tried three successive forward passes, but they all failed and the ball went to Chicago on its eight yard line.

Des Jardien Tries Punting.

Des Jardien then punted to Smith, who was stopped on the Chicago thirty-eight yard line. Wisconsin was off side and received a five yard penalty. Huntington intercepted a forward pass, and it was Chicago's ball on its forty-two yard line. A forward pass, Des Jardien to Sparks, was intercepted by Stavrum on Chicago's forty yard line. Bellows got around Chicago's left end for five yards. Wisconsin then fumbled and Chicago recovered the ball in the center of the field. Wisconsin intercepted a Chicago forward pass on its forty-two yard line. Bellows punted out of bounds on Chicago's ten yard line.

Flood Goes Through Center.

Flood hit center for ten yards and Russell broke through the middle of Wisconsin line for another ten yards. Coutchie skirted the Badger left end for twelve yards. Russell was hurt and time was called. Buck intercepted a forward pass and it was Wisconsin's ball in the center of the field. Chicago, however, was penalized fifteen yards because of Russell's rough tactics. Des Jardien then punted to Smith, who was stopped in the center of the field. Time was called. Score: Chicago, 0; Wisconsin, 0.

Wisconsin threw a forward pass out of bounds and the ball went to Chicago on Wisconsin's forty-five yard line. A Chicago forward pass was intercepted by the Badgers on their thirty-eight yard line. Wisconsin could not gain and Bellows punted to Schaefer on his twenty-five yard line. A forward pass, Russell to Schaefer, netted ten yards and then Russell carried the ball to Wisconsin's forty-five yard line. Lineup:

NEBRASKA RUSH IN LAST QUARTER BEATS AMES

Cornhuskers Land Game by Scoring Twice in Final Period of Play.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 31.—Nebraska won from Ames Agricultural school of Iowa today by a score of 20 to 7. Outplayed in the first quarter and held to even terms in the second and third, the Cornhuskers struck their gait in the final eight minutes of play and reeled off two touchdowns, Rutherford and Chamberlain in turn carrying the ball. Halligan kicked both goals. Just before time was called Halligan kicked a field goal. Ames scored a touchdown early in the game and a field goal for Nebraska came in the initial quarter.

Touchdown Not Allowed.

Halligan kicked off and Jones fumbled. Chamberlain recovered and raced over the goal, but the touchdown was not allowed. Ames took the ball on an exchange of punts and a forty yard forward pass and two line bucks sent Uhl over. Moss kicked goal. Halligan kicked a goal from placement a few minutes later. Score: Ames, 7; Nebraska, 3.

In the second an exchange of punts kept the ball in the center of the field. Hawkins replaced Caley in quarter. Nebraska opened its attack in the closing moments of the period and had the ball on Ames' twenty-five yard line when time was called. Score: Ames, 7; Nebraska, 3.

Moss Best Kicker.

An exchange of punts in the third quarter gave Nebraska the ball. Line smashes, a bit of open play, and end runs took the ball to Ames' eight yard line, where it was lost on downs. Ames punted out of danger, and a punting duel followed. Moss outkicked Doyle and Halligan, and the quarter ended with the ball in Nebraska's possession on its own thirteen yard line.

At the opening of the last quarter Nebraska again resorted to the old style game, taking the ball straight down the field to Ames' forty-five yard line. A forward pass was good for twenty-five yards, and line smashes and end runs sent Rutherford over. The same tactics brought another Nebraska touchdown. An Ames fumble gave Nebraska the ball on the Ames fifteen yard line, and Capt. Halligan kicked an easy goal from placement in the final moments of play. Lineup:

SCHMEHL PLANS LONG HIKE.

Henry Schmehl, who in years at least is Dan O'Leary's only competitor in the ranks of pedestrians, will attempt today to duplicate a feat he performed forty years ago. Schmehl, with three companions, will try to walk from Chicago to Aurora in less than eight hours. In 1874 he accomplished the hike within that time limit, and he has wagered a dinner with each of his three companions that he can duplicate the feat today. Dan O'Leary, George Campbell, and James Hearty will start with Schmehl from Fifth avenue and Harrison street at 6 o'clock this morning. Besides the dinner Schmehl has placed a bet of $1 with each of the three doubters who will start the long walk with him.

NATIONAL LEAGUE GAINING IN BASEBALL STRENGTH.

BRAVES' VICTORY MARKS TURN OF BASEBALL TIDE

orld Title Goes Back to National League After Years of Waiting.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

lthough the surprising twist of Dame rtune's smile which enabled the Braves Boston to dethrone the Athletics absoly may be regarded as a continuation the chapter of upsets which made 1914 ous in the sporting world, there are edents which might have prepared me of us for it.

n other words, the record breaking victory of the Braves appears to be only a ck jerk in the otherwise smooth and ular swing of the pendulum which has rked the course of the world's championship title in the last dozen years. And re are indications that this spasm of e aforesaid pendulum may be the beginning of its swing toward the National ague side of the baseball clock.

ctual results did not demonstrate the periority of the American league over National during the war of 1901 and 02 but no one conversant with baseball d unprejudiced doubted that the lusty ung league had the better class of players on the whole after it had stocked up th a lot of stars tempted from the ranks the National league.

Resume Battles in 1903.

wing to the bitter feelings engendered that war, there were no interleague ntests by which a line could be had on e relative strength of the two leagues il after peace was declared. Then in e fall of 1903 the first of the modern rld's championship combats established the supremacy of the Boston American league team over Pittsburgh's National league champions.

the other post-season contests of that ar the young league still further nched its claim to superiority.

There was no world's series in 1904 because New York's Giants refused to play ston's American league champions, as ere were then no rules to govern such a ries. That was the excuse set up by the w York club, and, while admittedly t, it was so poor an excuse in the eyes the public that the world's title of 1904 s generally awarded to Boston by default.

Nationals Regain Power.

Granting that public opinion may have en right, that completed a four year riod of American league supremacy.

In 1905 the National league came into wer again through the easy triumph of e New York Giants over Connie Mack's erican league champions.

The pendulum exhibited a quick backard jump in its undulating movement the fall of 1906, when the White Sox feated the Cubs for the world's championship, giving the nation almost as big rprise as the Braves gave it early last nth.

After that upset the pendulum kept t on swinging over National league ritory, giving the veteran organization claim to superiority in 1907, 1908, and 09 through the victories of the Cubs and rates over their American league peers the fall contests. The following year s a complete switch again, and quite the nature of a coincidence the Athletics were the medium of the switch.

Macks Defeat Cubs.

onnie Mack's young, ambitious team Athletics completely overwhelmed the mous Cubs, who had grown chesty and erconfident through years of success near success. That victory for the ackmen marked the termination of anher four year swing of the baseball penlum. Since 1910 the American league been in undisputed possession of the rld's pennant until this year.

long came another team of young, ambitious players under George Stallings d upset the chesty, overconfident Athletics in much the same way the young of Mack had upset the Cubs four s before The only difference was the upset was more complete and vincing. The Braves took four straight es from the Athletics this year, while required five games for the Mackmen to their first world's pennant in 1910.

ere seems to be due another period of years' supremacy for the National if there is anything in the adage history repeats itself, for it seems to been the National league's turn to according to all the previous dope. re is a perfectly sane explanation for swing of the pendulum. It is the old y of youth and old age, ambition and ation

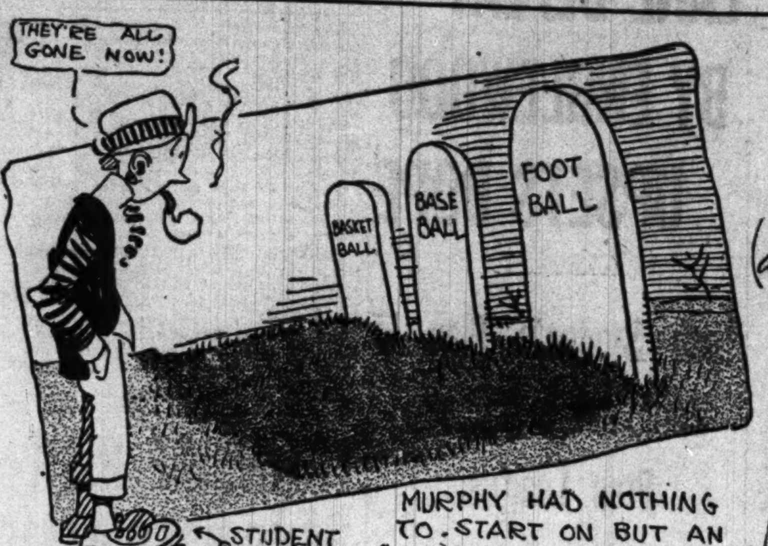
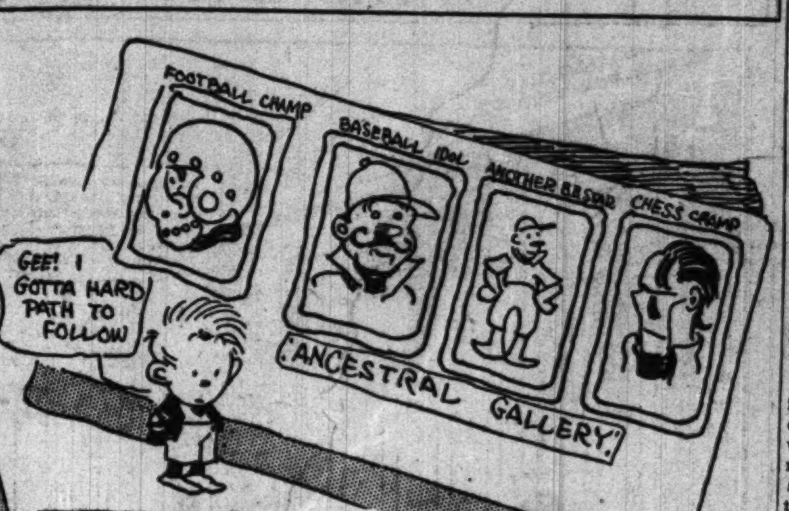
FRED J. MURPHY, WHO IS TEACHING NORTHWESTERN TEAM TO "FIGHT."

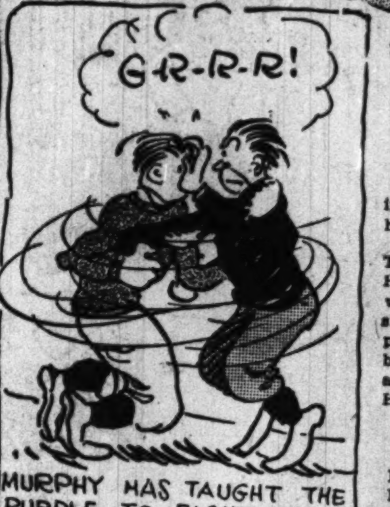
Former Yale Star Intrusted with the Task of Arousing "Spirit" in Big Nine's "Athletic Graveyard."



WOOF! WOOF! NORTH WESTERN!
QUIN HALL

COACH FRED J. MURPHY NORTHWESTERN U. FOOTBALL TEAM.





G-R-R-R!
MURPHY HAS TAUGHT THE PURPLE TO FIGHT NOW ALL HE HAS TO DC IS TEACH THEM TO WIN

FRED COMES OF A FAMILY OF WINNERS IN SPORTDOM—

By HARVEY T. WOODRUFF.

NORTHWESTERN university won a baseball game from Minnesota last spring. That was such an unusual occurrence in Evanston that an investigation was started. It brought out the fact that the Purple had played two ineligible players, dental students who had assumed the names of eligible ball players. Ineligible players and baseball coach were dismissed.

The expulsion of the culprits might be passed as an incident worthy of only passing comment, except that it brought on the scene Fred J. Murphy, the former Yale football, baseball, and basketball star. Murphy had not been expected to begin his real labors until this fall, but he was placed in charge of the coachless Purple nine. It lost three more games, two of them by close scores. Then, to the surprise of every one, it ended the season with a string of three victories, beating Purdue, 5 to 0 on Friday; Iowa, 6 to 5, on Saturday, and Wisconsin, 4 to 2, on the succeeding Monday. There was another investigation, but every one passed muster.

With such an auspicious start, Murphy started this fall as football coach. There has been no need of an investigation. The Purple has not won a game. "Northwestern is showing its true form," flashed the wits. But those who study football discovered something new about the Purple team. Not a few members of the eleven, but every man on it, was beginning to "fight." That was the result of the labor of Murphy and McDevitt, his line coach, another Yale man. Murphy has a three year contract to coach Northwestern teams. For three years members of Northwestern teams will "fight," even if they don't win a game, says Murphy.

Here is what Murphy has to contend against at Northwestern:

The tradition of being a loser.

An unusual amount of green material (The freshmen who will be eligible next season are considered a better eleven than the varsity).

Location of the professional schools in the city of Chicago.

Fewer men available for athletics than most of Northwestern's principa' rivals

The remedying of these conditions so far as possible has been put up to Murphy and Athletic Director Lewis Omer. Omer has made a beginning within other branches of sport. Football usually is the last to feel the effect of an athletic renaissance. Omer and Murphy have the active support of Purple alumni who hark back to the days of Potter and Van Doozer and have become tired of seeing the Purple as the athletic joke of the Big Nine conference.

Murphy is not accustomed to losers.

In his three years at Andover and three years on the Yale varsity eleven, he did not take part in a losing football game. A "charley horse" kept him out of the only gridiron contest Yale lost during his undergraduate days, the 4 to 0 defeat by Harvard in 1908, when Vic. Kennard dropkicked a goal from field. He was a member of Ted Coy's great team of 1909.

Murhpy was born Feb. 4, 1886 at Southville, Mass., in that region which has produced so many noted trainers and coaches. The late Mike Murphy, best known of all athletic trainers, was his uncle. So was "Tot" Murphy, baseball coach and once a member of the New York Giants. His father was American born and his mother from Nova Scotia, but his grandfather came from Erin. A younger brother is a freshman at Andover this fall. When Fred was 4 years old, the family moved to Westboro, Mass., where he attended the public schools and went to high school for two years. He played halfback on the football eleven and pitcher and shortstop for the nine.

In the fall of 1903, Murpny entered Andover and turned out for the academy eleven but didn't get into a single scrimmage. He played on the baseball nine which beat Yale, then coached by his uncle "Tot" Murphy, and made two hits against the Blue. He was assigned to the outfield although he had never played the position and only held the job by his batting.

In his second year at Andover, Murphy's eleven won the class championship but he still was not a regular on the first eleven. In the spring, the nine beat Princeton but he was out most of the season through a broken shoulder sustained in a collision.

In his final year Murphy made the eleven which beat Exeter 20 to 0, although some bets were laid at 4 to 1 before the game that Andover wouldn't score. The baseball nine that year beat both Harvard and Yale. Murphy was a member. Meantime he had played guard on the basketball team in his second and third years, acting as captain and coach in his third. With Murphy as pilot it lost two games in fourteen played, Harvard winning by four points and Wesleyan by one.

Then Murphy entered Yale in the fall of 1906. He was hurt in scrimmage early and only recovered in time to participate in the 28 to 0 defeat of the Harvard yearlings. Yale's freshman eleven was not scored on in a contest that fall and frequently beat the varsity in practice. Ted Coy, Philbin, Andrus, Goebel, Hobbs, and Logan were freshmen that fall. He played center field on the freshman nine and guard on the varsity basketball five, which won the intercollegiate championship. Because basketball was then a minor sport freshmen were eligible.

He got his first "Y" by playing the second half of the Princeton football game of 1907, won by Yale 12 to 10. He occupied left field for the nine which lost to Princeton and Harvard. He again played on the basketball five. In 1908 Murphy played at quarter back part of the season, but finished at his old place at half back. He was captain of the baseball nine which won the championship for the first time since 1905 by beating Harvard and Princeton, a feat which has not been equaled since.

He rounded out his football career on Ted Coy's great team of 1909, which beat Harvard 8 to 0 and Princeton 17 to 0. He was elected captain of the nine, but resigned because objection was made to a professional coach. Philbin took the job, but also insisted on a paid coach and got away with it. The diamond heroes beat Harvard but lost to Princeton.

At Yale Murphy was a member of the D. K. E. Junior society and Skull and Bones Senior society and was a member of the Senior council. He was graduated in 1910, accepted a job with the United Shoe Machinery company at $10 a week in preference to a coaching job at $1,800 a year. He had enough Yale spirit to undertake matrimony on his modest salary in the fall. Miss Mae Amelia Wells of Waterbury, Conn., became Mrs. Fred Murphy. There is a little Mae Amelia, 18 months old.

Murphy advanced rapidly and became a salesman for the company in New York. Last fall he and a fellow worker went into business for themselves. They had an idea. It was bigger than their bank roll, so they sold their idea and augmented instead of dissipated their bank roll. Thus Murphy was free to accept the position at Evanston when Northwestern decided it wanted winning teams.

Murphy faces the same problems which have confronted all previous entrants to the "athletic graveyard," as a rival coach once characterized Northwestern But Murphy already has taught his charges to "fight." That's a start. He has done it as a gentleman and not as a bully. His next step is to teach them to win. One cannot help wishing him success, both for his own sake and that of the Purple.

Englewood maintained its clean slate in the Chicago High School Soccer league, defeating Wendell Phillips, 3 to 0. Schurz, which was tied with Englewood last week, received a setback from Calumet, which scored its first win in the series by a 3 to 1 victory. The champion Lane team took third position by trimming Lake View, 2 to 1.

Englewood outplayed Wendell Phillips at Fifty-second street and Cottage Grove avenue, superior combination being the biggest factor. The losers fought hard, but lacked team work. Lineup:

DEFEAT BY NEW TRIER ENDS OAK PARK CHANCES.

The "jinx" that has followed the Oak Park soccer team in every game this season pursued it again yesterday at Kenilworth, where it met New Trier. The final count again showed Oak Park the losers, although it made a great stand against the county champs in a battle that sounded like 2 to 0 after the final whistle. Oak Park put up a stubborn fight and never showed signs of easing up. However, the New Trier lads had the breaks during the opening period and proved the stronger in the second half. The defeat put Oak Park out of the running for the suburban honors. Lineup:

BILLIARD RESULTS.

At the end of the third week of play in the Champion Billiard Players' league, George Sutton leads the race with twenty wins and two losses, Morningstar and Demarest being tied for second place with sixteen wins and three losses.

Regular play has put the experts in fine shape and two of them have passed the record average of forty, made by Willie Hoppe in the tournament held in April at New York. Harry Cline averaged fifty at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and George Sutton notched forty-four at Washington, D. C. Last Friday Harry Cline, playing against Koji Yamada at Ithaca, N. Y., made the high run for the tournament, getting 180.

Sutton, Morningstar, Demarest, and Cline are tied for grand average with marks of eighteen. Standing:

	W.	L.	Pct.		W.	L.	Pct.
Sutton	20	2	.909	Cline	9	10	.474

Demarest	16	3	.842	Cutler	3	16	.158
Yamada	10	9	.526	Schaefer	2	20	.091

All of the players in the Interstate Three Cushion league have been in action once, and indications point to a remarkably close race. Ellis of Cleveland has the best game to date, having gone out in fifty-eight innings against John Kling. Standing:

MISSOURI TRIMS K. A. C., 13-3

Columbia, Mo., Oct. 31.—The University of Missouri eleven, outweighed fifteen pounds to the man, won this afternoon from the heavy Kansas Agricultural college team, 13 to 3.

In the second quarter, Capt. Agnew kicked a field goal from the twenty-five yard line for the Aggies' only score. In the third period Dunckel replaced Woody at fullback and by a series of line bucks and end runs crossed the line for Missouri's first touchdown. The same plays in the final quarter again sent the heavy full back over for another touchdown, after which Lake kicked goal. Missouri's light back field did most of the gaining by long end runs. THE RUFFED GROUSE AND HIS FRIENDS.

BY NEAL BROWN.

THIS fascinating bird in our northern states is generally called a partridge, or, in the vernacular of our countrymen, a "patridge." We shall stick to partridge, although, speaking dictionarily, it is incorrect. He is a good sportsman's bird, and has many appealing qualities, whether he be taken in his native habitat or fried in butter. He furnishes a baffling mixture of simple credulity and great cunning. He has a first cousin, who is called the spruce hen, or spruce partridge, or "fool hen." Woodsmen and lumber jacks often find this silly creature so approachable that he may be knocked off his perch with a stick. Thus vulnerable, he is rapidly disappearing, like certain rare orchids of our northern woods, which cannot endure civilization.

But the partridge holds his own fairly well, although he has his seasons of diminishment, due, apparently, to a failure in the spring hatch. Some years he seems to crowd the woods and waste places; in other years he dwindles to small coveys and scattered specimens. I understand the pheasants of the British isles are, in their fecundity, equally uncertain and various.

Speaking of the partridge's two major traits of wisdom and unwisdom:

Often he will flush at a long distance, not apparently from fear, but from mere perversity; then, again, you may almost run over him in the road with your wagon or automobile. In fact, I once had to apply double brakes to keep from running one down in the middle of the road. This was in the closed season. [Let all game wardens take notice of this act of signal forbearance.]

Along in September, after the first frosts, our partridge commences to haunt the country roads contiguous to his home Here he feeds avidly on a short sweet clover that is very engrossing and satisfactory to him, so much so that he will, no matter how many times he may be driven away, return again and again to this danger zone. He also finds here weed seeds and soft dust to wallow in—luxuries that are not common in his own thickets.

He is usually but little alarmed at a passing team or automobile, no matter how noisy these may be, and will wait for them to pass, while he sits tamely on the ground or perches on a log or stump. He is not so tolerant, however, of a man afoot, and will quickly fly from this intruder. Yet he is not much afraid of women and children.

The reason for this is that farmers' wives and children are constantly passing along the roads that he frequents, and he has learned that they are harmless Even in the woods a huntress can come up to him on favorable terms, when he would flee from the advances of a mere man. With women and children, as with automobiles and wagons, familiarity breeds contempt. Hunters, by means of these two vehicles, are able to slay thousands of birds that would otherwise live long.

When thus approached, he will often sit dumbly while the fatal shot is being prepared for him, or crouch low and run from the road to cover, or gingerly pick his way into the woods, ruffling and peevish, yet only slightly discomposed.

I have fancied he comes out into the roads for other reasons than the delicacies he finds there. He seems to want to get a clear look at the sky and to feel the warm sunshine. It is the custom of the nesting mother partridge, who has her nest near a road, to use some part of her daily vacation in dusting herself in the wheel tracks. I have never been able to determine whether her mate supplies her place on the nest during her vacational intervals.

The male wild pigeon used to have this habit, and when I was a boy I have seen him thus dutiful to the domesticities, trying to keep the eggs warm, while, as I suppose, his spouse was gadding about and gossiping with the neighbors. Perhaps the males of other feathered tribes have this touching and beautiful trait.

So far as I can learn the mother partridge seems to be the sole protector of her nest and brood. Often she will stick to the nest until an intruder is near enough to touch her, and will even peck at him. Nor is she devoid of the means of defense. Being on a trout stream in July I was greatly shocked at having a mother partridge fly at me and strike me in the breast with almost force enough to knock me down. Her violent attack was explained when I saw directly in front of me her brood of downy chicks only a few days old.

Many years ago, and in the summer time, before the day of omniscient and omnipresent game wardens, a deer hunter stationed himself on a runway to watch for a passing deer. After a little he noticed at a distance of a few feet a mother partridge sitting on her nest, not at all disturbed by his presence. Soon after he saw at a distance of several rods and coming toward the nesting bird a skunk, nosing here and there for food. This degrading animal was minding his own business and evidently ignorant of the partridge nest. Suddenly the partridge as swift as lightning, hurled herself out of the nest and catapulted against the skunk, rolling him headlong over and over.

Not knowing what had happened to him or who had committed this unprovoked assault, the skunk hurriedly picked himself up and scudded to some place of safety, while the brave mother returned to her nest in triumph. She had discomfited the deadliest enemy of all feathered tribes.

When partridge chicks are first hatched they are about as big as walnuts, and utterly helpless, except in their infinite capacity for concealment, and in the strategy of the mother. Being disturbed they will disappear like shadows and past all finding, while she will scutter away in simulated broken winged confusion and helplessness. If the intruder be a dog he will invariably chase this crippled bird with great zest and hope, yet vainly, for she ever keeps just out of his reach until she has lured him far enough to safeguard her young.

In February or March partridges can be found sitting in the tops of small birches and poplars and eating the buds.

In the early spring the male bird comes forth with a new ruff and a brighter luster. While his mate is busy with her domestic duties he betakes himself to some nearby log and drums with muffled eloquence. He may do this out of mere exuberance, and love of his own music, or because he desires by this prowess to attract the admiration of his mate, or by way of defiance to any rival who contemplates trespass. Without this muffled music spring would not be spring; it adds a sweet glamour to all the other music of spring. He will often drum until September, although in late summer at rare intervals. Much rarer is his all night drumming.

During his first season a partridge is an easy prey, but if he survive until the next season he will match himself against you on fairly even terms. Even on these terms, and in his own best coverts he is hard to come at, and if, now and then, as he hurtles in and out through the trees, you are able to bring him down you will have a feeling of considerable prowess that you cannot attain by shooting birds in the open.

When you follow a veteran partridge and think you are looking for him where he alighted he will be somewhere else. Or it may be that he will watch your futile efforts from some point directly under your feet and at last will burst forth with a roar like thunder and go rocketing through the thickets, apparently keeping as many trees as possible between you and himself.

When flushed by the hunter he does not often tree, but a dog running suddenly on him will usually make him take to a tree. Here, he will sit staring at the dog, oblivious to your presence until it is too late. He apparently enjoys the futile efforts of a dog to get at him, and is much entertained by a dog that will bound around and bark.

The partridge loves watery places, and in the early season can usually be found along streams and ponds or lakes, or close to swamps. Access to water is, seemingly, not necessary to the well being of the partridge, for I have found coveys in isolated tracts of timber, remote from water, where they could only rely on the rain and the dew.

Most sportsmen consider it highly ethical to pot a sitting partridge, although they would look on this treatment as very brutal if exercised toward a quail or a prairie chicken. In this exception as to the partridge there is a rude justice, for when the bird is in thickets he has the hunter at his mercy, so that he is not entitled in any place, as of right, to be allowed to take wing before he is shot at. And when he is found sitting by the roadside no saint can withstand the temptation to take him before he dodges into the woods.

Along in September partridges migrate to a limited extent. They may be found going across the country without regard to cover. Single specimens frequently appear in town and around farm houses. The time for hunting this bird is when the year comes to the middle or flush of autumn. Then the maples on the hillsides are crimson, and among the flowers only the aster lingers a little.

Partridges are not found in the older parts of the country, where wood lots are turned into arid pastures. In the territory midway between wilderness and civilization partridge shooting attains its most satisfactory form. Here you can get at this gentle habitant without hardship. To properly encompass his uncertainties of flight a scatter gun should be used, one that will hit him no matter where it is aimed?

My estimate is that when he first comes up he attains an initial velocity of seventy-five miles an hour. But if he has a good start and goes by you down some woodland lane he will reach a speed of 150 miles an hour, and is out of range before you can wink an eye. You hunt him during the last dream of summer.

ASKS TO CHANGE LIPTON CUP RACE

Yacht Club Holds Event Is Limited to an Obsolete Class of Boats.

SIR THOMAS WILLING.

Believing that twenty-one footers are becoming an obsolete class, members of the Columbia Yacht club last night passed a resolution asking permission of Sir Thomas Lipton to change the conditions of the deed of gift for the Lipton cup and permit the club to designate the class of boat to compete for the trophy. A motion to make class P boats eligible for the cup was tabled.

De Witt Cregier reported he had interviewed Sir Thomas Lipton while in London a month ago and the donor said he was willing to make any changes in the deed of gift the club desired, so that obtaining his sanction appears to be only a matter of form.

Commodore Herbert Mills, who has been nominated to succeed himself, announced he would not be able to act on account of business pressure and a new ticket was arranged with Robert L. Doran at the head. The other nominees are: For vice commodore, I. M. Orr; for rear commodore, Edward J. Cox; for treasurer, R. E. Jones; for secretary, Howard Shaw; for director, two years, W. F. Traub; for director, one year, R. E. Davis.

Commodore Pugh, who planned to make another try for a record around the crib course with Disturber IV. yesterday afternoon, abandoned the trial when a wind from the south disturbed the lake. The crib course has been officially measured by Commander Stone of the hydrographic department and found to measure 14.66 miles from crib to crib.

A BOTTLED DELIGHT

Club Cocktails THERE is a vast difference between a mild degree of pleasure and a full degree of delight.

The difference between the bartender's guess-work — quite frequently palate-rebelling mixture — and the smooth, mellow, pleasurable cocktail, is embodied in every bottle of CLUB COCKTAILS—unvarying, always the same choice liquors, always the same identical gratifying flavor.

Measured to the drop, aged in wood, blended of fine, matured liquors. Made in ten varieties, each a bottle of delight.

BALL PEACE IS PATCHED UP? PROVES 'PIPE'

Herrmann and Weeghman Reported to Have Solved All Problems.

BUT IT'S HALLOWE'EN

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Peace in the baseball world was arranged yesterday at a two hour conference in the Congress hotel between Chairman Herrmenn of the national commission and Charles A. Weeghman, president of the Chicago Federal league club. At the conclusion of the confab Chairman Herrmann was asked what took place and announced:

"I have nothing to say; waiter, bring us two magnums of grape juice."

When asked the same question, President Weeghman replied: "If there was anything to say I would tell it to you first; but there isn't. Bring us another round of the same."

Terms of Peace.

The terms on which the war between the Federal league and organized baseball was terminated were simple. The Chicago National league and the Chicago Federal league clubs are to be merged under the ownership of a syndicate, with Mr. Weeghman as president and Joseph B. Tinker as manager, the combined forces to be known as the "Tincubs."

The "X," which is to be eliminated from "Tinx" in the new deal represents the unknown quantity in the composite ownership which will take over the interests retained in the west side club by Charles W. Murphy, late president of that organization, after he had disposed of it absolutly to Charles P. Taft of Cincinnati.

The new club will be in the National league circuit; its games are to be played on the north side plant, which will be augmented by tearing down the building back of left field, moving the fence back to the street line, transferring the center field bleachers to the corner of the lot, and then double decking the main stands.

Ebbets to Entertain.

The rest of the Federal league is to be taken care of by combining the two Brooklyn clubs with Manager Robinson at the helm, leaving Roger Bresnahan, who has been touted to manage the Tip Tops, free to close the deal for the purchase of the Cleveland American association franchise and its transfer to Toledo, adopted home of the Cub catcher. As both Brooklyn clubs already have modernly equipped plants, the solving of that problem required considerably more time than did the one which existed in Chicago. It was finally settled by agreeing to schedule the National league games on alternate days at Ebbets field opposite the brewery and Washington park, near Gowanus bay, using the plant left vacant each day for the overflow crowds, which will be entertained by President Ebbets of the Robins, who will sing his w. k. masterpiece, "The Star Spangled Banner."

What crumbs are left of the outlaw circuit after the inhaling of the Chicago and Brooklyn clubs into organized baseball, as already outlined, will be swept carefully into two pewter plates, one of which will be made a peace offering to the International league and the other a similar pledge of good intentions to the American association. One plate will contain the Baltimore, Pittsburgh, and Buffalo clubs, and the other the Kansas City, St. Louis, and Indianapolis clubs, which may be assimilated or cast into the garbage can by the two leading lights of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues as they see fit.

Will Cut Up Fund.

Any injured feelings engendered by this arrangement are to be salved by a good fellowship fund, half of which is to be provided by requisition on the national commissioners' share of the post season's series and the other half by Chairman Herrmann of the commission himself, who will resign from the Laughery club for one year and devote his dues and house account for that period to this deserving charity.

Being rated as avowed opponents of peace and earnest advocates of war to the hilt, Presidents Johnson of the American league and Comiskey of the White Sox were not let in on the peace agreement until after it had been officially ratified by the signatures of Messrs. Herrmann and Weeghman early last night.

By the time the rest of the baseball world woke up to what had transpired it was Hallowe'en, and everybody celebrated appropriately.

MACK TO RELEASE MOUND VETERANS

Asks Waivers on Plank, Coombs, and Bender; Fed Talk Cause of Move.

BY SAM WELLER.

The Federal league can have Eddie Plank, the veteran southpaw on whom waivers have been asked by the Philadelphia club, so far as President Comiskey and Manager Callahan of the White Sox are concerned. While sidestepping the actual question of waiving claim to Plank on account of the heavy penalty attached to disclosing such matters, the Sox owner and pilot pointed to the fact that they had all the left handers they needed in "Tex" Russell.

Manager Mack of the Athletics admitted in Philadelphia yesterday that he had sought waivers from the other American league clubs on Plank, and explained his action by stating he had learned the veteran southpaw was dickering with the Federal league. He desired to make known his perfect willingness to part with the veteran if the rest of the league club owners were of the same mind.

Coombs and Bender to Go.

Incidentally, Mack asked waivers on "Chief" Bender and Jack Coombs. In the case of Coombs the asking of waivers is known to be merely a necessary formality before making the former "iron man" a free agent, as his baseball career is believed to be ended. The tall right hander, who has been the hero of more than one world's series, never has recovered from the injury which he sustained in the battle with the New York Giants in 1911, and, although of no service to the Athletics, has been retained on the pay roll for the last two seasons.

The discarding of "Chief" Bender was a foregone conclusion at the time of his indifferent showing in the opening game of the late world's series, in the result of which he took so little interest that he did not appear at the Athletic ball park until twenty minutes before the starting time, although he had been notified that he had been elected to work in the first game.

Players to Be Free Agents.

In both cases the new rules adopted at the request of the Players' fraternity made it necessary to give Coombs and Bender their unconditional releases. One of the chief requests of President Fultz of the fraternity was that veterans who had served a term of ten years or more in the major leagues should be made free agents when no longer wanted by the clubs employing them. This was designed to prevent peddling a star who had gone back to some minor league team against his wishes, thereby making it impossible for him to accept some more lucrative berth as manager or part owner of a league club.

The action of seeking waivers on Plank was more of a surprise, as he was supposed to be an Athletic fixture as long as he remained in baseball, from which he has retired already as often as a prima donna, only to reconsider his determination with the return of each spring. Plank also pitched a creditable game in the late world's series, being beaten by the Boston Braves, 1 to 0, after a tough battle.

Jennings' Talk Angers Mack.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 31.—In admitting the asking of waivers on Coombs, Plank, and Bender, Manager Mack of the Athletics today scored Manager Jennings of the Tigers for having given out the news in violation of the rule forbidding such disclosures until made by the club asking waivers after they were secured. A severe penalty in the shape of a fine is fixed by the American league constitution for such an offense, and the Athletic pilot expressed the hope that it would be inflicted on the Detroit manager for his indiscretion.

BOXERS' GREED WIPES OUT CLUB

Queensberry Organization of Milwaukee to Quit After Welsh-White Go.

PY KNOCKOUT.

With all arrangements completed for one of the biggest ring battles ever put on in this section of the country, that between World's Lightweight Champion Freddie Welsl and Charley White on Nov. 9, the promoters of the Queensberry Athletic club of Milwaukee, Wis., which is to stage the mill, announce that their club will go out of business with the final gong on that night. This announcement was made last night by Tommy Andrews, the leading promoter and matchmaker of the club.

Promoter Andrews "makes no bones" about why the club is going out of business. The organization has promoted several of the biggest contests staged in the last couple of years, and at each and every one of them the fighters by "hogging" the gate money have made the business of promoting a losing game. In fact, only one battle staged by the Queensberry club took in any real money for the promoters. That was the bout between Willie Ritchie and Ad Wolgast, and a record breaking house, worth $39,000, was necessary before the club could reap a profit.

Demand About All.

When Andrews and his associates matched Welsh and White, they did so with the understanding that the pair box for a percentage of the gate money. Welsh right on the jump demanded 45 per cent for his end, and White wanted nearly as much as the champion. Then the state commission had to get its usual 5 o'clock. Andrews saw where the club would get about 15 per cent, out of which it would have to pay all expenses, including rental of the Milwaukee auditorium, and balked. He told the fighters they would have to come down "out of the clouds" or he could not do business with them.

As a result Welsh squeezed his bid down to 40 per cent, and White offered to fight for 27½ per cent, and the promoter accepted, in order that the fight might go through.

"But this will be all for me," said Andrews last night. "Doing business with fighters isn't profitable, for they demand all the money, and, rather than give benefits for them all the time, I'm going to get out of the promoting game."

White Puts In Hard Day.

Charley White put in a strenuous day training at O'Connell's gymnasium yesterday. He boxed four rounds with Frankie Lynn and today will increase his work by taking on Jimmy Travers in addition to Lynn.

Johnny Dundee, the little New York Italian, will be in Chicago this morning. Dundee is returning eastward from the coast, where he fought Willie Ritchie a four round draw a few days ago. He intends to stay in this vicinity for a few days in the hope of securing a match at one of the Wisconsin clubs.

Jimmy Anderson, the Indianapolis lightweight, also is looking for trouble. His manager, Joe Sullivan, says Anderson isn't particular who makes the disturbance for him.

DARTMOUTH, BY PLUNGES, WALLOPS AMHERST, 32 TO 0

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 31.—Amherst succumbed to the powerful attack of Dartmouth's back field today and was defeated, 32 to 0. For the first half Amherst forwards held the Green to a single touchdown, but the heavy plunges of the Dartmouth backs wore down the visitors appreciably in the last two sessions.

LANE DEFEAT BY ENGLEWOOD UPSETS DOPE

Tech Students Play in Hard Luck in Chicago Prep League.

WINNING SCORE, 7-0

BY PREP.

Englewood High school made hash of the dope in the major section of the Chicago prep league by beating the Lane eleven in a desperate battle on De Paul field yesterday, 7 to 0. Consistent plunges in the second period put the south siders within scoring distance and Hoeppner crashed through the Tech line of defense for the only touchdown of the game. Wolfe booted the ball across the bar for the extra point.

Twice Lane seemed certain of tying the score, but each time a break in the game was against the Techs and their efforts went for naught. In the last few minutes of play a pass across the Englewood line was fumbled after the Lane rooters had started cheering at the prospect of a tied score. Earlier in the fray the Techs pounded their way to within a yard of the south siders' goal, but a play that sent the ball across was declared illegal, and Englewood finally took the ball on downs. Lineup:

Wendell Phillips, 38; Crane, 0.

Crane retained its reputation as the "weak sister" of the heavy section by allowing Wendell Phillips to pile up a count of 38 to 0 at Tigers' park in an after breakfast engagement. Koehler's consistent gains featured. He was responsible for fourteen points, scoring two touchdowns and booting the goal after each of them. Haggerty's work at quarter was the best seen on a "prep" field this year, but he was withdrawn because of a minor injury. Lineup:

Crane Minors, 12; Austin, 0.

Crane minors gave their school a fifty-fifty break on the day by beating Austin in a preliminary to the Crane-W. P. contest, 12 to 0. Vernier and Hasenjaeger were punctured about various parts of their anatomy and were forced to give way to green substitutes. Vernier scored a touchdown before he quit, however. The other marker was credited to Lewis. Lineup.

Harrison Minors, 13; L. Midgets, 0

Harrison Tech. lightweights proved good enough to trim the Lake midgets by a 13 to 0 count at American Giants' park. Frequent fumbles marred the play. Caster and Kral were sent across the Lake line for the two scores recorded by the Techs. Caster scored in the second and Kral in the third quarter. Hollis booted one goal and missed another. Vandrasek distinguished himself by spectacular tackling which destroyed whatever hopes Lake had of crossing the Tech goal. Lineup:

Touchdowns—Caster, Kral. Goal from touchdown—Hollis. Referee—Steffens. Umpire—Fessender. Head lineman—Meyers. Time of periods—15 minutes.

Senn, 58; Schurz Minors, 0.

Senn had such an easy time with the Schurz minors in their alleged battle at the latter's field that the game resembled a cross country race more than a gridiron contest. Careful counting revealed the fact that Senn won by 58 to 0. Guggenheimer and Swanson led the attack with three touchdowns each, and Barnes shot across for two scores. Lorentz chalked up the last marker for Senn. Schurz never had a chance to win and was seldom within hailing distance of the Senn goal line. Lineup:

TOWNSHIP HIGH WINS PREP GAME FROM THORNTON

Evanstonians Count 41-0 in Major Section of Suburban League.

Evanston Township High rolled up a score of 41 to 0 against Thornton in the major section of the Suburban "prep" league in a morning combat yesterday on Northwestern field. From whistle to whistle it was merely a question of how many points the Evanston plungers would acquire.

Capt. Ellingwood led the rampage for the victors by shooting across for two touchdowns. He was well on the way to several long runs when his inability to retain his footing sent him to the ground without any interference from Thornton players. Kirkbride pressed his captain for honors with a pair of touchdowns, and he lent variety to the clash by booting a field goal from the thirty-five yard line in the last quarter. Lineup:

	Evanston [41].	Thornton [0].

U. High, 21; New Trier, 12.

University High Majors defeated New Trier at Kenilworth, 21 to 12. A safety gave the winners the jump in the second quarter, but before the period ended each team secured one touchdown. They kept up the battle by scoring one apiece in the third quarter, but U. High proved the better in the endurance test and stowed the game away in the final period of play. Graham, Wood, and Carry were the individual stars for the winers. Killen featured for New Trier. Lineup:

Oak Park, 26; Lewis, 0.

Oak Park's heavyweight champions of the Suburban league took advantage of an off day to show the Lewis institute team a few tricks. The champions romped away with a 26 to 0 win on Phipps field. One touchdown in each period rewarded the persistent attack of the Oak Park squad. Only twice during the game did Lewis succeed in holding the winners for downs.

Phelps qualified as a sprint possibility by tearing off three long runs, each of which netted a gain of over forty yards. Jypson of Lewis quit by request after a little debate with Referee Page. Lineup:

	Oak Park Majors [26].	Lewis Institute [0].
R. E.	Royal [capt.], Steele, Royal	Maxwell	L. E.

O. P. Minors, 34; Thornton, 6.

Oak Park minors tightened their grip on first place in the lighter division of the Suburban league by beating Thornton Township at Harvey, 34 to 6. A sixty yard run through a broken field by Tutwiler was the most stirring incident in the clash. The dash resulted in a touchdown.

Thornton's only real chance happened in the third period, and Miller made the most of the opportunity, going over for the only Thornton score. Lineup:

	Oak Park Minors [34].	Thornton [6].

Proviso, 19; Riverside, 0.

Proviso heavyweights defeated Riverside High at Riverside, 19 to 0. Mack, the center for the losers, was knocked unconscious in the closing quarter, and when he came to he was unable to walk. He was removed to his home in an automobile. It is not thought that the injury is serious. Mack went into a scrimmage just in time to receive a kick on the back of the head. Wright earned special mention by his stellar work at quarter for Proviso.

Morgan Park minors defeated the featherweight collection of Evanston Township High in a morning game on Northwestern field, 47 to 0. The feathers are the third team at the north side school.

Bowen had little trouble with St. Ritas in their practice game on the losers' field, winning by 37 to 0. Sederstrom scored three touchdowns and booted three goals. Bowen crossed the Catholics' line in each of the four quarters.

WOLGAST GETS CHANCE TO WIN TITLE HE LOST

Ad Must Knock Out Wels Tomorrow Night to Regain Laurels.

MEET IN GOTHAM RIN

BY RAY C. PEARSON.

Ad Wolgast, former lightweight cha pion of the world, has a chance to pe form a feat that few boxers have acco plished—regain the crown after once ha ing lost it. That chance comes to Wolga tomorrow night at Madison Square gard in New York, where the Michigan "Bea cat" is to exchange wallops with Cha pion Freddie Welsh.

Welsh and Wolgast are billed to ho up in a bout limited to ten rounds, a there isn't a person in the world w knows anything about boxing who w concede that Wolgast has anything be ter than an outside chance to emerge vi tor. Even were Wolgast good enou to outpoint the champion he could n capture the title because of the ban decisions in New York state, which pu it up to the "Bearcat" to score a knoc out if he is to regain the title.

First Clash of Pair.

This meeting tomorrow night is teresting for many reasons. Welsh a Wolgast, for years considered at the t of the heap of lightweights, have ne met. Three years ago they were match to battle twenty rounds in Los Ange before the club operated by Promo Tom McCarey. But they didn't meet in that failure to clash Freddie Wel may attribute his success in winn the championship later. It will be membered that only forty-eight ho before the "Bearcat" and Welsh we to have climbed into the ring, the mer was attacked by appendicitis, was taken to the hospital, where an op ation was performed and was out of game for a long time.

As an eleventh hour substitute for W gast, Promoter McCarey hit upon W Ritchie, then a raw kid of San Franc Ritchie grabbed the chance to battl Britisher, and turned out to be better expected, for he gave Welsh the har kind of a battle for twenty rounds, Britisher winning the bout on poi But his ability to give a boy of Wel class such an argument was the m ng of Ritchie and he followed it up winning the championship.

Wolgast Battles Ritchie.

Wolgast, after taking what he beli sufficient time to recover from his eration, decided to take a tryout in of those four round bouts which popular in San Francisco. He not the promoters that he was ready the man they elected to try him out none other than Willie Ritchie. fans of the Golden Gate city never a four round fight like that staged tween Wolgast and Ritchie. It w hammer and tongs affair from the tap of the gong until the last and so did they slug that both boys were kno to the canvas.

After that clash Ritchie got the that he could win the title from "Bearcat" and a lot of promoter the coast, including Jimmy Coffroth, had taken a liking to Ritchie, also tho so, and they immediately began ering for a twenty round bout betw Wolgast and Ritchie. Coffroth fi secured their signatures to articles a match on Nov. 28, 1912, at Daly C For ten rounds of that battle Wol hammered Ritchie. Then the Cali nian began to show the stuff of w he is made. He turned the tide of tle and was gaining the upper hand w Wolgast committed a foul, hitting opponent low, and the referee gave fight and championship to Ritchie. foul was the second of a pair landed Wolgast in the sixteenth round just a the "Bearcat" had been knocked to canvas by one of Ritchie's famous crosses.

Careful Work by Champion.

Gaining the championship made Rit a popular titleholder. He played game carefully, met the best boys were secured as his opponents by promoters, and always was in the of condition that wins, with the that he scored victories over such as Joe Rivers, Leach Cross, and oth Among those others was Ad Wolgast in their third meeting, a ten round in a Milwaukee ring. Ritchie outpoi the Michigander so far that there w any doubt as to who had won.

All this time Freddie Welsh was "ha ing." After winning the decision Ritchie in the latter's first big bout Los Angeles, the Britisher always lieved that he could take the mea of the San Francisco kid. So w Ritchie took the title from Wolgast, F die barked more loudly. For a time he couldn't draw any fire the champion. One reason was tha one would offer a big enough pur suit Ritchie. But Welsh finally arra for that. He discussed terms with don promoters and agreed to let Rit take all the money if they woul him in the ring. The promoters off Ritchie $25,000 for his end and it this lure that cost Ritchie the title. batt'ed twenty rounds and at the of that session the decision and title awarded to Welsh, making a new ch pion.

Chance for Strange Result.

Now comes the strange part of tangled skein. Welsh, now cham is to meet the boy who was chos when their other match was preve by an attack of appendicitis. In tween came Willie Ritchie, who su tuted for Wolgast and later won championship from Wolgast. Woul the situation be strange if Wolgast to defeat Welsh tomorrow night and gain the title?

Face to Face with DEATH for Two Days

A true account of the experience of Stevens, the American, in the European War. —Mistaken for a Spy

by James O'Donnell Bennett

By JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT
[Copyright: 1914: By J. O'D. Bennett.]

AIX-LA-CHAPELLE, Germany, Oct. 4.—Europe is spy crazy, and Stevens, the American, experienced diabolical proof of the fact.

The ordeal to which he was subjected calls in question both the honor and the sanity of one German officer who, his own men intimated, was not mentally sound, and the recital of that ordeal has shocked every other German officer and civilian to whom the facts have been made known.

Stevens is an American, 28 years old, and of a slightly wan and decidedly poetic cast of countenance. He was born in Pontiac, Mich. His father was Lawrence Sterne Stevens, a clergyman of the Protestant Episcopal church, who died ten years ago. He will be remembered in Saginaw, Toledo, Buffalo, and Lockport, where he ministered in the course of a long life. He was also for a time a teacher in De Veaux college, once a famous preparatory school in Niagara Falls.

The subject of this letter likewise bears the name of Lawrence Sterne. Old Mr. Stevens was named after the author of "Tristram Shandy" and the "Sentimental Journey," and the Stevenses of the present day trace a relationship to the satirist.

Young Lawrence Sterne Stevens is one of the finest fibered men I ever met; a painter, a musician, an observant traveler, a good critic of books, and a bohemian without the nonsense. For five years he has been living in Brussels, working on his pictures and music and managing some kind of advertising agency.

Hollow-eyed, but unshaken, Stevens told me his story while every detail was as vivid as fire in his memory, and it is here set down in his own words, save where the routine part of it has been a little compacted.

Quaint Quartet Leaves for Front.

Stevens left Brussels in an automobile on Monday morning, Aug. 24, in company with his friend, Maurice Gerbeault, Brussels correspondent of the Chicago Daily News. Gerbeault is a Frenchman whom fate may, and occasionally does, sit on, but has never yet succeeded in suppressing.

It was his purpose, more brilliant perhaps than sagacious, to follow the German columns that were moving south through Belgium and France and to take photographs of the wonderful pictures afforded by that gigantic expedition.

For a Frenchman, even though he had been for seventeen years self-expatriated and had regarded himself as an American, the project was little less than madness; but nobody could have convinced Gerbeault of that on the sunny morning he sailed out of Brussels and past the battlefield of Waterloo in a $5,000 automobile which Stevens had borrowed from a Spanish friend.

In extenuation of Stevens' recklessness it can be said that he supposed Gerbeault had some sort of status as an American citizen through a connection of several years' standing with the American consulate in Brussels. That was one of Gerbeault's fancies. Stevens also believed that Gerbeault's passports were of a much more convincing nature than they ultimately proved to be.

With them the careful pair took a Belgian photographer named Victor Hennebert, whom Queen Elizabeth sends for whenever she wishes new pictures made of the royal children, and a negro chauffeur, originally from Sierra Leone, named David Eike.

The quaint quartet therefore included a Frenchman who called himself an American, and who was thought of by Americans as a Belgian; an American who looked like an Italian—for Stevens is of a distinctly Latin type; a half sick Belgian, who liked not the boom-boom of the German cannon even when it came to him across miles of countryside; and a black man who spoke French, English, Italian, German, Danish, Spanish, Flemish, and a smattering of Russian.

If you can surpass that for an international comedy quartet you are welcome.

If the reader desires to localize the adventure of the mad party he can do so by glancing at a detailed map of southern Belgium and northern France. Roughly speaking, their troubles were bounded on the north by the considerable town of Nivelles in Belgium and the French town of Hestrud, about five miles over the border, and they continued acute, not to say agonizing, from 12:30 o'clock Monday afternoon, Aug. 24, until Thursday afternoon, Aug. 27.

During those four days there was not a waking hour when all four men had not the expectation of death heavy upon them. Gerbeault's troubles, indeed, continue to thrive and he has been for nearly three weeks the sole occupant of cell No. 20, tier X., in the imperial prison at Aix-la-Chapelle. Stevens is sitting opposite me at a big writing table working up from memory the most engaging little pictures, in black and white of war scenes in Belgium. Occasionally I look up and ask him to verify a date or the name of a town—and that annoys him.

Just outside Nivelles the men passed the German wagon train that soon was to manifest an oppressive curiosity as to their identity, purposes, and passports. Ten minutes later, at the crossroads village of Aquennes, they met a little band of refugees who had heard heavy firing in the direction of Lobbes and Thuin.

Arrested and Searched.

Simultaneously with their putting of questions to the refugees they made the discovery that their gasoline was failing and that they must give up all thought of going farther south. They turned back, intending to run to Brussels. So they again met with the German wagon train, which was still rumbling out of Nivelles.

Not reconciled to an utterly fruitless finish of the trip, they left the machine to ask of the officers in charge of the wagon train permission to take photographs and make sketches. As they approached an over-lieutenant he cried: "Halt!" in German, and was not able to understand the request they made to him in French. That over-lieutenant's name Stevens was later to hear in the reading of depositions, but today it is utterly obliterated from his mind. Certain German officers who have heard Stevens' story have intimated that it is a lucky thing for the over-lieutenant that, in all the multitude of details Stevens remembers, this detail should be missing.

"Halt!" shouted the over-lieutenant. His manner was overbearing and excited.

An under-lieutenant and a private who spoke in French and with quietness and dignity came forward and made clear to their superior the nature of the men's request. Stevens, Gerbeault, and Hennebert were bidden to show their papers. Stevens displayed his sketch book and asked if he might make sketches. There was some conversation about this between the over-lieutenant and the under-lieutenant, and the over-lieutenant finally said: "O, yes; that is of no importance," and, turning to Stevens, added, "Yes, you may make sketches." His sketch book was returned to him.

"At this," says Stevens, "I walked rapidly—but not too rapidly—down the road in the direction of Nivelles. It was evident that Gerbeault and Hennebert, who carried cameras, were in for a more rigid examination, and the over-lieutenant, who seemed baffled and overwrought, was fussing nervously over their papers."

Stevens had not gone twenty paces down the road when the over-lieutenant again cried "Halt!" Stevens says the word landed in the small of his back. He promptly presented himself to the over-lieutenant, who as promptly ordered a private soldier to remove from the lapel of Stevens' coat a little silk American flag.

Meanwhile Gerbeault and the Belgian queen's photographer were deprived of their cameras. The over-lieutenant fussed impotently over one instrument until he had succeeded in exposing the film. Thus he would have destroyed the very evidence he was seeking. As a matter of fact, the men had taken no pictures.

Gerbeault was ordered into an army wagon standing near by.

"Get into the auto!" shouted the distrait over-lieutenant to Stevens.

The man from Pontiac complied.

"Get out of the auto!" shouted the over-lieutenant an instant later.

Stevens again complied.

Then Gerbeault was ordered into the auto and he and the Belgian photographer and the negro David and a guard of four soldiers disappeared up the road. Stevens was left behind to face alone the bitter ordeal that awaited him.

Stevens Detained Alone.

Nearly twenty-four hours were to pass before he saw his companions again, and at the end of that time he knows he was a much older man, and he thinks he was a little wiser. He was to walk in the valley of the shadow.

After the automobile had disappeared Stevens was ordered to climb into the wagon Gerbeault had occupied. While he was doing so the over-lieutenant had another fit. Passing a soldier, he tipped over the gun on which the soldier was half leaning. This caused an explosion of language on the part of the over-lieutenant and in lunging about to regain his footing he inflicted, either by accident or intention, two cruel kicks on the soldier's ankle—right where that kind of a blow hurts most.

Then the wagon train moved on, and except for a short halt during which Stevens bought beer for the soldiers at a wayside tavern, it kept moving until 4 o'clock, when it reached the Belgian town of Manage.

After making the square of an open field next to the gendarmerie at Manage, the wagons were parked for the night and Stevens was ordered to descend from the wagon on which he had ridden for more than three hours under a heavy guard. He was very weary and he felt desolate.

He rested a little by walking up and down near the wagon. A kind hearted soldier gave him all the food which he had obtained for himself—a bowl of soup, some meat, and some bread and jam.

The over-lieutenant again appeared. He discovered that the gun of the soldier who was standing guard over Stevens was capped, and that set him foaming with rage. He seized the gun, uncapped it, threw the cap on the ground, and removed the bayonet.

"Is your gun loaded?" he shouted.

"No."

The over-lieutenant then loaded the gun with five cartridges, making, meanwhile, remarks of a by no means reassuring nature to and about Stevens.

A private soldier adroitly pulled Stevens a little out of the path of the storm, muttering as he did so, "This is dangerous!" He also made a furtive gesture of tapping his forehead, and Stevens thinks he meant to indicate that the over-lieutenant was unbalanced.

Having loaded the rifle and returned it to the guard, the over-lieutenant said: "If he moves, shoot!" In bad French he told Stevens what he had told the guard.

Dusk was drawing on.

In a few minutes the over-lieutenant gave the order: "Take him to the gendarmerie."

Into the courtyard of the gendarmerie the prisoner was marched. A soldier brought him a camp chair. Another handed him a copy of a French funny paper. Stevens has a wry remembrance that that blithe publication failed to produce the intended effect.

But his remembrance of the kindness of the common soldiers and of officers whom he was later to meet is lively.

"The soldiers were all fine," he said. "Always when drink was served out I was given the first glass. If a man had only one cigaret left he insisted upon my taking it. And I know that, granting that I had a right to any of the food of these hungry men, I was always given more than my share. Invariably it was the same—the first drink, the last cigaret, the good food.

"If the French comic weekly failed to appeal to me, I remembered that there was one thing that did. For, anxious and angry as I was, I thrilled with excitement and pleasure when an artillery train galloped by at full tilt. I think a German detachment must have been in a tight place at that instant. The spectacle of the bringing up of help was magnificent. That was to be my last joyous sensation for many, many hours."

The over-lieutenant again appeared before his prisoner and repeated, to the accompaniment of vehement pantomime, his admonitions relative to the peril of any attempt to escape. To emphasize his meaning, he did pantomime with the sentry's rifle.

It was quite dark now.

"Monsieur, Morgen Fusilier."

Stevens was taken into a room of the gendarmerie that opened directly on the courtyard. In one corner lay a dirty mattress and the floor was ankle deep in papers—Belgian orders of mobilization, blank police forms, and that kind of thing. On the table was a battered oil lamp with a dilapidated shade. Thence he passed to an inner room that was even less inviting. It was vilely dirty and its foulest object was a pallet of straw. Soldiers closed the shutters and carefully examined the fastenings of the windows.

The prisoner was commanded to lie down. He did so, and was left alone.

In a few minutes came the order, "Get up." A sergeant led him to the doorway of the outer room, where stood the table with the dilapidated lamp on it. The over-lieutenant was sitting there with a secretary. A private soldier was standing on a stool, one hand upraised, as if he were being sworn. The under-lieutenant who had spoken quietly and with dignity to Stevens when he was gathered in just outside Nivelles and some private soldiers were sitting around the room.

After the prisoner's papers, which included a German laissez passer, signed by Gen. Jarotzky, and a passport signed by United States Minister Whitlock, had been taken from him, he was led back to the inner room where he was left alone for fifteen minutes. Then the over-lieutenant came to him and pushed him back into the outer room, saying in a villainous jargon of German and French:

"Monsieur, morgen fusilier." He left out the "vous serez" before "fusilier," but Stevens says he had no difficulty in understanding that the lieutenant was trying to say, "Sir, in the morning you will be shot." The words made him very angry. He remembered distinctly that that was his sole sensation. The other sensations were to come later. The lieutenant led him to the doorway opening into the courtyard. In the dim light he saw eight soldiers standing in the courtyard at present arms.

Then he blew up.

"This is a vile crime," he shouted in French to the lieutenant. "You are going to kill a man who has done nothing wrong and you will not give him a chance for his life. It is a shameful thing. It is unworthy of a soldier."

For answer came the words "Shut up!" in German, and the lieutenant gave him a shove that sent him sprawling back into the room.

"Tie his hands," said the lieutenant to his men.

"In front?" they asked.

"No, behind him."

He then ordered them to search the prisoner.

The process was thorough, for it extended to even the cuffs of his trousers. They took from him his wallet, letters, penknife, button hook, pocket electric lamp, cigaret lighter, binoculars, and 90 francs in Belgian paper. A handful of loose change in Belgian money went into the pockets of the soldiers. In that loose change were an American quarter and perhaps half a dozen English and French coins of small denominations.

These pieces were later to be returned to Stevens, along with his Belgian paper money. He never saw any of his other belongings, such as his wallet, penknife, cigaret lighter, binoculars, and passports again. It is curious that his wrist watch and the pin of the Delta Sigma Nu, a preparatory school fraternity in Pontiac, were overlooked. His handkerchief they started to take, but returned it.

After the search the lieutenant said, "Morning, 6 o'clock," in German, and then in French, "Monsieur, une bonne nuit."

"Sit down," said the soldiers. An armed man took his place on each side of Stevens. A sergeant, also armed, seated himself on a chair by the door. There he dozed, with his legs stretched out across the doorway. Eight soldiers lay down on the mattress with their guns by their sides.

It was now 9:30 o'clock and the stage was set.

Stevens' long vigil had begun.

From this point onward I shall give his narrative precisely as I took it down from his own lips, because for all the purposes of vividness and poignancy no writing man could beat Stevens' quiet style as long as he was speaking.

He lay on the bed in my room, a cigaret between his teeth, and he told his story in a dreamy monotone, without gestures and without a suggestion of excitement. I sat at a table and wrote as rapidly as he spoke. When he got to the bitter part I was a great deal more moved than he was. To me the psychology of the thing seemed enormous; to him it seemed merely curious.

Later I tried an experiment. I asked him to write out in the most particular detail certain phases of his mental struggle after sentence had been pronounced and the long night of piteous self-examination had closed in on him. I wanted to see what he would make of all that when he took a pen in hand and began to prick his own soul. He didn't make much, it seemed to me. He grew a little rhapsodic and there was a kind of bogus profundity in the thing. I don't mean that as offensive to Stevens, but merely as a criticism of his literature.

Lying on the bed and speaking without a touch of self-consciousness, he was great, and in one part of his story he almost made me cry. But when he began to consider himself as a topic he was like an amateur trying to write about another man's experience. What he wrote was sweet and grave and gentle (I saved the pages after he had thrown them away in disgust), but the cold sweat and the sting and the quiet anguish had gone out of it.

What Stevens said made Irvin Cobb get up from his chair and say, "God, I wonder if I could have gone through with that fight to save self-respect the way you did," and he looked over at Stevens with absolute humility.

But what Stevens wrote left you cold.

The Agonizing Wait for Death.

So here is his story as he told it off, incident by incident.

It begins ten seconds after the over-lieutenant, whom Stevens has not seen from that hour to this, had said in his bad French, "Monsieur, une bonne nuit," and the sergeant, the two guards, and the eight soldiers had disposed themselves around the stuffy room in the gendarmerie.

"It was half past 9. On a table a little behind me stood an old fashioned wooden clock. It had a dirty face. By turning a little I could easily read the hours. Often it came over me that never had I heard a clock tick so loud. Sometimes it seemed like a triphammer. The battered lamp on the table in front of me smelt.

"As time passed the lamp flickered lower and lower. At midnight it almost went out. I remember saying to myself as I watched the lamp flicker—though perhaps I didn't really form the words—'God, how much that lamp is like me. It's going down, down, down!'

"The soldiers had orders not to speak to me. I knew, though, that I had the sympathy of all those fellows from the glances they gave me; but not a word would they speak. The room was very quiet, but I could hear night sounds from outside, the stamping of horses tethered in the stable yard of the gendarmerie and a great whinneying and thrashing of hoofs when one horse would nip another.

"For the first two hours I suppose I suffered about as much hell as a man can go through. It was not the fear of death that tortured me. That fear hadn't come yet. My only thought was the bitter unfairness of things, the injustice of life. Here was I, trying to make a name and play the game as I had been taught to do, and now there was to be this sickening finish. What had I done to deserve it? Those things bothered me most. They made me rage inside myself.

"Naturally I thought of my mother, but just then they were not thoughts that gave me any comfort, for I kept running over in my mind the fact that she would never know what had become of me. There wouldn't be any headstone to tell her where I lay—not even a little cross.

"Then these thoughts drifted away and I thought of what pictures my experiences had given me and how much feeling and understanding I would be able to put into a big study of a condemned man's last night. I knew that no living man could tell me anything about it which I myself hadn't felt, and the words kept singing in my head: 'What a chance! What a chance!'

"Then I leaned forward against the table and tried to sleep, but just as I would drop off the horror of the thing would come upon me. Uncontrollably a great gasp would shake me. There was no volition or thought in it. The gasp would be upon me before I knew it. I suppose it was the heart struggling to do its work against a terrific mental strain.

"Right in the midst of this I looked around at the clock. The hands pointed to midnight. 'Good God!' I thought. 'In six more hours will be the last time I'll be able breathe.'

"Perhaps I might have got hysterical, except that just at that instant five or six soldiers came boisterously into the room. It was the changing of the guard. One of the soldiers had found a bottle of brandy. Another looked kindly over at me and poured me out a whole teacupful. I drank it and felt absolutely no effect. Half an hour later they gave me another teacupful. I drank it down and felt no burning and no gagging. Under ordinary conditions I suppose two teacupfuls of raw brandy would have made me very sick or shrieking drunk. I thanked the soldiers.

"It was about this time that the lamp on the table in front of me being nearly out, a soldier brought in another.

"After that I put my head down on the table so that I could sleep. 'Hell,' I said, 'there's no need of my getting myself into a frenzy.' Maybe I slept half an hour.

"When I awoke the idea came to me of trying to get away. It was 1 o'clock then and I suppose I thought over and worked over the idea till nearly 2 o'clock. In tying my hands behind me the soldiers had not passed the rope directly around my left wrist, but over the coat sleeve.

"So I softly and slowly worked the muscles and fingers of my hands until I had brought the rope down over the coat sleeve. That left a little slack in the rope, and so, very, very slowly, I was able to work one hand free.

Plans to Escape Fail.

"Every fifteen minutes I looked at the clock. As I saw the hands marching around I became more and more determined. It was a gamble, of course, but it seemed to me a pretty good one. It was one thousand to one that I was going to be killed anyway. If I made a run for it, after turning over the lamp, there was at least one chance in a hundred that they would not hit me. There was another chance in a thousand that if they hit me they would only wound me.

"Then this thought gave me pause: Suppose a reprieve should come in the morning and that meanwhile I had ruined everything by a fatal effort to escape. Was it, then, a mad idea? I had a vision of myself—as clear as any picture or any actual scene I ever saw—of my body crumpling and pitching forward before the volley of the firing squad. That vision decided me.

"I felt I knew the countryside pretty well, for I had observed it sharply in the afternoon when the wagon train was drawing into Manage. I knew that on the other side of the gendarmerie was an orchard, and a quarter of a mile behind the orchard a railroad track leading to Brussels. I would make through the orchard and up the track and continue along that way until daylight broke. Then I would hide in a forest or a peasant's house.

"I knew the horses were tied and that it would take the soldiers some time to make ready to pursue me on horseback. Through the orchard I would run zigzag as I had been taught to do in football. I knew I was a good runner.

"Now the proposition had to be considered in its close at hand aspects. 'I will turn the lamp over,' I said to myself, 'on the papers strewn over the floor. That will start a fire and a panic. Then I will make a dash for it.'

"I thought of my shoes. It would be best if I took them off so that the sentinels could not take aim at me by the sound of my footsteps as I ran across the courtyard.

"Were the big iron gates of the courtyard locked? I wondered. I didn't believe they were. The men hadn't locked them when I came in. There were two sentries at the gate, I knew, but it was so dark that I thought I might get past them.

"Another idea occurred to me—not to overturn the lamp and make a dash for the door, but to ask one of my guards to take me to the door for a breath of air because I was sick. That would get me past ten of the eleven soldiers in the room. Then I would kick my shoes off, trip up the soldier by my side so that I could throw him off the steps, and make the dash across the courtyard.

"I remember thinking that if I decided to act on this last plan I must tuck the laces inside the shoes after I had unlaced them, so that the sleepy guards in the room would not hear the tin tips rattling against the papers on the floor as I was being taken to the door for air. Thus they would not notice that my shoes were unlaced and so would not be suspicious of my request. It is wonderful how carefully a man in such a position looks after all the little details.

"While all these thoughts were running through my head I had got one hand free of the rope, and I remember that all that time I was not very nervous—most nervous of all, perhaps, when, feeling my left hand come free of the rope, I said to myself, 'Can I ever get it back if these dozing guards wake up?'

"I leaned forward and began to work quietly on my shoes. I had the left shoe all unlaced and the right shoe half unlaced when a soldier, who with his beard and mustaches looked like a Prussian of the war of 1870, came in. He sat on the mattress beside my chair, his knees fairly touching mine.

"I knew then that the jig was up.

"Only two German words came to me—'morgen' and 'schützen.' I spoke them to the Prussian, making motions as I did so with my head toward my chest. I did not dare point, for when he entered I had hastily thrust my left hand behind me and tried to make it look as if it were still tied.

"When I said 'morgen' and 'schützen' I also glanced at the clock. The soldier seemed to understand. At least he shrugged his shoulders in an affirmative way, but he spoke no word.

"Now I knew that my business was to calm down. A good many things seemed to become quite clear to me, and I was able to put them all into sentences.

"'Here are you, an American,' I said, 'and you are innocent. Even if nobody in the outside world ever is to know, you must show these Germans that an American knows how to die.'

"That was my prayer. I didn't want to die like a dog."

Prays for Strength to Die Bravely.

The four correspondents in my room were very still. Stevens reached for a glass of water. "Did you put the prayer into words?" I asked him quietly. "I mean did you formulate it in an actual spoken petition? I don't mean to ask offensive questions," I added, "but the psychology of all this seems to me terrifically interesting."

Stevens caught my point of view. He was not offended.

"Yes," he said, "I put it into the form of a prayer. It was a prayer for self-respect. I did truly pray. I have told you that my father was an Episcopal clergyman, and I was brought up in the church. I have had my doubts and questionings, though I am by no means an atheist—a reverent agnostic, I suppose you would say.

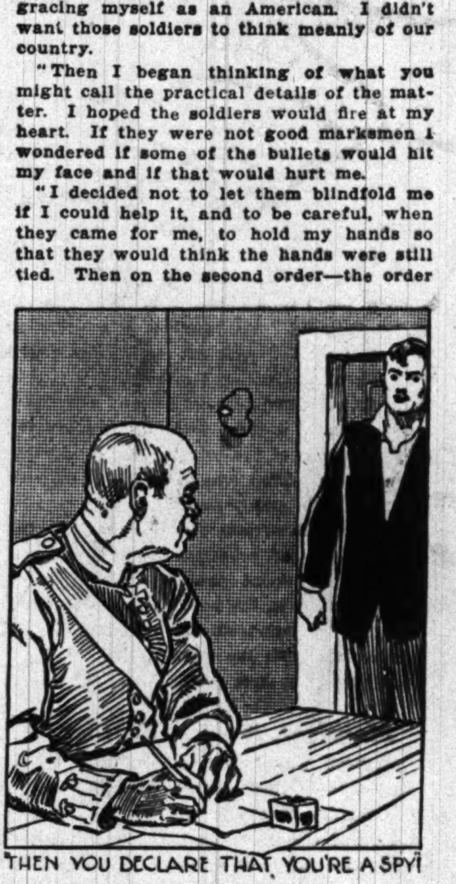
"There in the gendarmerie I wondered reverently if it is really so—is there a God in the sense of a God who speaks to each individual? And if there were, I wondered if it were wrong and blasphemous for me, after my doubts, to come back and ask him to take me through this trial like a gentleman.

"I didn't ask him to save me. I thought that would be selfish and presuming. But would he let me keep the strength he had given me? It seemed to me that it would be like dying twice if I felt my knees fail me when the guards came to take me into the courtyard. 'Please, please let me keep my strength,' I kept saying.

"I suppose I must have been a long time with these thoughts, going over and over them. Suddenly I noticed that the gasping had stopped. A feeling of perfect peace had come over me. I felt confident that I could go through the thing without disgracing myself as an American. I didn't want those soldiers to think meanly of our country.

"Then I began thinking of what you might call the practical details of the matter. I hoped the soldiers would fire at my heart. If they were not good marksmen I wondered if some of the bullets would hit my face and if that would hurt me.

"I decided not to let them blindfold me if I could help it, and to be careful, when they came for me, to hold my hands so that they would think the hands were still tied. Then on the second order—the order to aim after the order to make ready—I would throw my arms out and so die more like a man and less like a thing tied up.



THEN YOU DECLARE THAT YOU'RE A SPY!

"It must have been betweeen half past 2 and 3 o'clock when I finished thinking out these things. I was calm. The little one of the two guards who sat beside me—a funny little man who looked like a tailor and who had the kindest of hearts—found a curtain on the floor—a kind of half sash curtain. He folded that up and put it under the side of my head when I leaned forward under the table. It made a very decent pillow. Then I went to sleep.

Sees His Grave Dug.

"Some time later a stirring in the room woke me. I thought it must be 6 o'clock and time to go. But it was only 4 and the men who had entered were not soldiers come to fetch me out, but two sappers. One of them carried a spade, the other an acetylene lamp. They lit the lamp and were some time adjusting it to make it burn properly. Then they went into the courtyard. I could see by the shadows the lamp cast through the doorway that finally they had set it on the ground, and from the sounds I heard I judged that one of them was working at the hard ground with the spade—kind of picking at the ground.

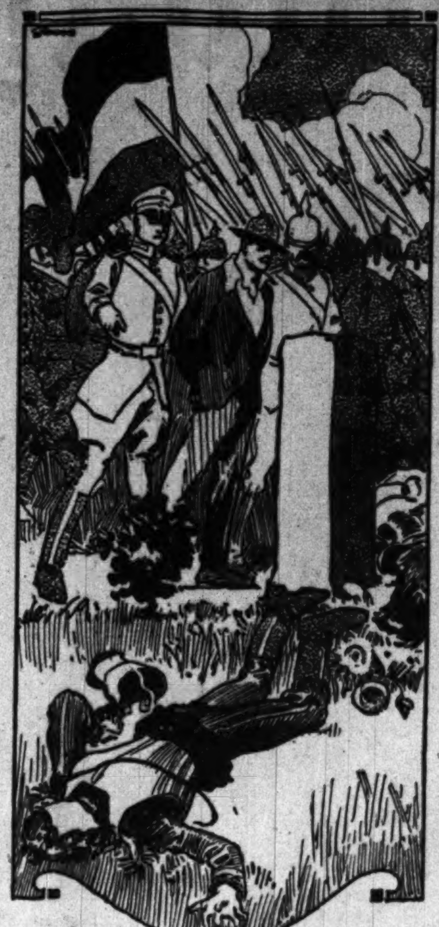
'Good God!' I thought. 'If that Prussian hadn't come in and sat down beside me I might have gotten away.' But the thought didn't make me distracted.

"The two sappers had left the door open. By craning my neck a little I could look out and see them working. I watched them some time. It was fascinating, absolutely fascinating, to think that they were building the place that I should soon be tumbled into. That was curious—the psychology of that. After I had given up my soul to God it was the psychology that interested me.

"I can't say I had remorseful pangs, and I was spared the misery of having to say, 'Why did I do this?' and 'Why did I do that?' After all, in looking back on my life I felt that the things I had done that I ought not to have done were only peccadilloes in the great total.

"I did think of the disagreeable task that my foolhardiness would put on my old friend Lewis Richards of Brussels, the pianist, who used to live in Detroit. He would have to tell my mother and the rest that I had disappeared, and he would have to close up my affairs.

"The sappers had begun working between 4 and half past 4, and perhaps they worked till 5. After their suggestive operations started there was naturally no more sleep for me. But I found a way to pass the time. I had the clock behind me and I started a guessing game. Every ten minutes I would guess the time and then look back at the clock to verify my guess. I seemed to guess accurately. I remember saying once, 'I'll bet I've got forty minutes to live.' That time I was within two minutes of right. I never missed by more than three minutes.



THAT WAS MY ENTRY into FRANCE

"At 5:30 the camp began to stir. Soldiers came in with coffee, bread, and jam. Nobody offered me any this time. I didn't mind.

"'It's fair,' I said to myself. 'What's the use of wasting that food? My digestion will stop in half an hour anyway. Let it go at that.'

"It rather caught my attention—I can't say that it amused me—that things ran through my mind in the language of every day, and I distinctly remember saying to myself at five minutes to 6, 'In five minutes little Willie will be in kingdom come.'

"To go back a little—when the hands of the clock pointed to half past 5 I said, 'It's a sure thing now,' and for fifteen minutes the hand seemed to gallop. And then it was curious that at a quarter to 6 they seemed absolutely to stop.

"At five minutes to 6 the bugle blew. At that sound the guards strapped on their cartridge belts, opened up their guns, and loaded them. Their knapsacks they left in the room. In two or three minutes the sergeant came in.

"I took account of myself. I stood up. I slipped my left hand into the loop. I stretched myself. I was thankful from my soul that my knees didn't tremble. There was no sweat. I was in absolutely as good physical condition as I am at this moment, and no more nervous.

"I was marched out into the yard, and there I saw a pile of dirt. I tried to make out whether it had come from my grave. I couldn't. We had got half way across the yard when my sergeant was stopped by an old color sergeant. There was talk between them and after it I was marched through the gate of the yard to the auto of my Brussels friend, which has since disappeared utterly from my ken. I was placed in the auto with a guard of four men and a chauffeur—a guard on each side of me, one in front of me, and one in the seat with the chauffeur.

"They unbound my hands now, and they did it tenderly. We rode for three-quarters of an hour, arriving at Lobbes, where I saw a sign over one of the shops for the speedy making up of mourning garments which you encounter so frequently in Belgium. The sign read:

MOURNING IN TWELVE HOURS.

"Everywhere there were signs of recent battle. The ruins of houses were still smoldering and the streets were one mass of broken guns, dead horses, French caps, shoes, and knapsacks. Several bass drums were strewn along the road.

"Not yet was I hoping for any change in the status of my case. From chance remarks made by my guards I gathered that we were going to the high commander, and I supposed that I was to be shot with the rest of our party.

"On the edge of the actual battlefield one of the tires of the $5,000 automobile received a puncture, hence our progress was slow and I was able to take in everything.

"The field was a gently sloping plain half a mile wide. French dead lay here and there and the ground had been torn all to pieces. A gray mist hung over the plain. Through what was left of the standing grain moved a straggling German column. Its march was hindered a little by dead cows and calves which had been torn apart by shells.

"There were new made graves in trench form, and in them the German dead must have been buried, for nowhere was the body of a German soldier to be seen nor any sign of German equipment. This, as you and I have since learned, was in accordance with German practice. If they can possibly avoid it they leave no evidences of German losses behind them.

Officer Encourages Him.

"As we went limping across the battlefield with our punctured tire we met a young German officer, who gave me my first bit of encouragement. He spoke exquisite English. After I had told him my story he said, 'If your papers are right I hope for the best.'

"'Is the commander a just man?' I asked him, meaning Gen. Sixt von Armin, who had led the German troops into Brussels.

"'Yes, a very just man, a very fine man,' replied the young officer; 'but you must understand that he has so many things to do that the case of an alleged spy is a very small matter.'"

"Did your voice shake when you were talking with the man who gave you your first reason to hope for life?" I asked Stevens.

"I don't think so," he replied.

It seemed to me that the mere lack of food would have made Stevens tremulous by this time, for the reader will remember that he had had nothing to eat since the night before. I said as much to the narrator.

"I hadn't then felt the lack of food," he answered. "That was to come later."

But let him resume his own way of telling his story.

"The automobile reached the Château Casteau, a beautiful old place typical of the life of the old aristocracy of the Belgian countryside. In the courtyard stood a long table, and at it sat nigh officers who were poring over maps. One of them was drawing a new map. Dispatch bearers were coming and going on horses and bicycles, and the court was full of automobiles.

Brought Before Tribunal.

"As I stood leaning against a balustrade of the terrace watching the brilliant picture I thought of Gillette's 'Secret Service,' and it came to me that only a love affair was lacking to make my place in the scene harmonize with the rest of it. But for me there was no romance in the situation. I resented that.

"After perhaps fifteen minutes they ordered me to be taken across the road into an apple orchard. In the orchard was a platoon of German soldiers standing at parade rest, say half a company, or sixty men, and my guards took me to the left of the platoon.

"It was then that I first caught sight of the other fellows of our party. They were under a guard of six men on the other side of the orchard. There was the inevitable stone wall, and I thought to myself that with true German thrift they had brought me here to turn me off with the others—Gerbeault, Hennebert, and black David. I was wearing one of the new fashioned German outing shirts with what they call a Goethe collar. Gerbeault said afterwards that I made a perfect picture of a spy on his way to execution. In that respect at least I fitted in with the Gillette scheme of things.

"I did not then join my friends. We all stayed for some time in the orchard, listening to the sound of cannon in the distance. Then I was marched out with the platoon. It joined the rest of its company—the Seventh of the Thirteenth regiment—which had been doing general staff guard. The staff led the way in autos and we started on the march south toward the French border.

"The way was hot and dusty. I began to feel the lack of nourishment and I feared I was going to faint. I didn't want to do that. I asked a guard for bread and water. He had none, but he very generously offered me wine. After half an hour's march we halted and I again met my kind English speaking German lieutenant. He tried to reassure me by speaking of Gen. von Armin's character for justice. 'But,' he added, 'you must understand that he is very busy.'

"Two other lieutenants were passing on the other side of the road. Evidently they had heard of my case. 'Do you speak English?' one of them called to me. At my reply they bade me come across to them.

"They gave me a whole box of chocolate, filled my pockets with chocolate, and ordered bread and jam for me. Both were charming men. I wish you would mention their names in THE TRIBUNE. One was Dr. August Thienemann, a scientist, of Langenstrasse 25, in Münster; the other Heinrich Bergmann of Hufferstrasse 25, in Münster.

They kept right with me, ordering the guards to fall back. To them I outlined my story. We marched together until 2 o'clock. Five or six miles before Beaumont a train of heavy field artillery passed us. All who saw me shook their fists at me, made motions across their throats, and called me 'pig dog' and 'spy,' but my two lieutenants were at pains to explain to officers who passed that I was not a spy, and they gave two or three fellows the devil when they flung hard words at me. Thienemann especially fell all over himself to be nice to me, and when we halted at a deserted farmhouse he brought me the first chair he could lay his hands on and gave me water and cigarets before he would do anything to make himself comfortable.

"My head and my mustache were white with dust and my eyelashes so heavy with dust that I could hardly see. He helped me to wash up and brought me bread and jam and wine. He had a silver flask of old brandy. There were just two drinks left. He poured out the larger part for me.

"'You are being very decent to me,' I said, 'and I can't thank you.'

"'No! No!' he said. 'It is my duty to be decent.'

"On this stage of the march there was an intensely comical incident that even I could relish. The soldiers came to a schoolhouse, where they found the bass drum, snare drum, cymbals, horns, and music racks of what I suppose in happier times had been an energetic village band. Forthwith the tired marchers gave a burlesque concert and parade. They found straw hats and umbrellas and with these made a 'march past' that was like nothing so much as the antics of the clown band in the circus. Other soldiers leaned against the walls and trees and laughed until they were gasping.

Verdict Delayed.

"Some time after 2 o'clock I was ordered to be taken before the judge advocate general. I asked Dr. Thienemann if I might mention his name to the judge. 'Most certainly,' he said. 'In fact, I shall go with you to him.'

"The old judge sat in an old fashioned victoria with a grim looking secretary by his side. He was gentle, fatherly, and soft voiced and there was a humorous twinkle in his eyes as he scrutinized me. I have forgotten his name, but I remember learning that in civil life he is a very eminent German jurist and that in the army his rank is that of division commander.

"He held my papers open before him. It was raining and he ordered me to put on my hat. Having asked my name, the date and place of my birth, and my religion, he told me to tell my story. When it was finished I remember that one of his comments was, 'Don't you know that correspondents and artists aren't allowed with the army? This is not a Mexican war.'

"Then he dismissed me, and all the rest of the way of the march into France I followed the judge's carriage. On every side I continued to see the signs of a French rout, and among the signs were champagne bottles.

"Finally from way up front we heard the sounds of cheering and of soldiers' voices lifted in the strains of 'Die Wacht am Rhein' and 'Deutschland Ueber Alles.'

"Still advancing, we came to the frontier post, a rough hewn field stone four or five feet high. At its base and partly in the ditch lay a dead French dragoon, a trumpet at his feet. A German soldier had covered the face with a bit of cloth. That was my entry into France in war time. It was such a picture as a man carries with him till his last hour of life.

"After a march of four kilometers into France we reached the town of Hestrud, halting in a field. Again I was taken up to the judge advocate general's carriage, and there I gave him as references for the truth of my story the names of the American minister to Belgium, Brand Whitlock, and the American consul at Brussels, Ethelbert Watts. With that my examination apparently was closed.

"All this time we were so close to the firing that we could hear the rattle of small arms amid the thunder of the big guns.

"I was taken to a house in the center of the town and there I again found my companions. After a wait of half an hour I was ushered alone from the hall into the sitting room, and no sooner was I inside the door than the old judge rounded on me with: 'Then you declare that you are a spy!' ('Alors, vous declarez que vous etes un espion!')

"I was staggered.

"'No! no! Certainly not,' I cried. 'Not only that, but I swear on my honor that I never had any such intentions.'

"The old man's manner suddenly changed. 'Ca, c'est bien!' he said, and beamed kindly on me again.

"My companions were brought into the sitting room, together with a young officer who was sworn in as an interpreter. He read our depositions—which had been taken down at different times by the judge advocate's grim secretary—from German into French, and each of us signed his deposition.

"'Now, listen carefully,' said the old judge; 'these are the depositions that have been made against you.'

"There were read out to us then the depositions of a trumpeter, a sergeant, two other soldiers, and the pleasant spoken underlieutenant and the overbearing lieutenant who were of the detachment which we had encountered on that unfortunate Monday noon just outside Nivelles. Only the day before, as a matter of fact, but how remote it seemed!

"All the depositions varied materially and were contradictory, but all of them united in contradicting the trumpeter's, which was the most confused and false as to the numbers in our party and our conduct when we were arrested. At one point, when it was stated that our party had numbered five and that the fifth man had run away, I said 'That is an absolute lie.' The grim secretary gravely took notes of our denials. A legal process in a Berlin court could not have been more methodically conducted.

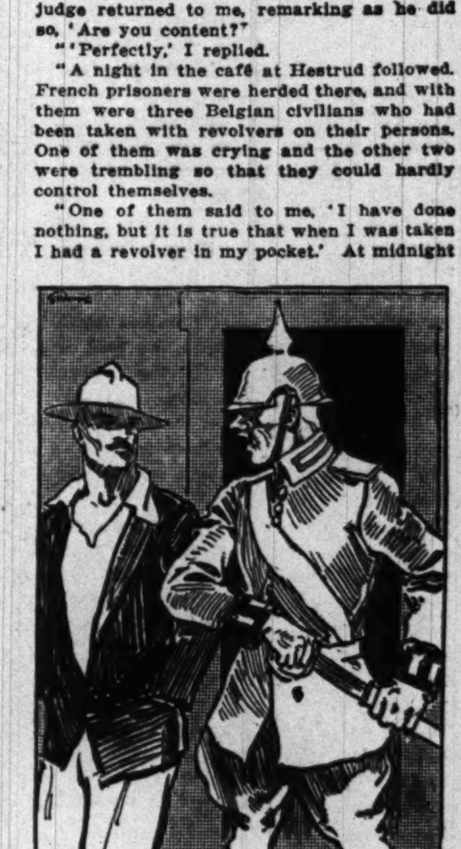
"We were led out of the sitting room and Thienemann entered it. He must have said something pretty strong for us, for when he had rejoined us in the hall and I had asked him how our case was going, he said: 'O, I think it's going all right,' adding, 'and now you are to go to bed.'

"I asked that my belongings be returned to me. All I got was my money, which the judge returned to me, remarking as he did so, 'Are you content?'

"'Perfectly,' I replied.

"A night in the café at Hestrud followed. French prisoners were herded there, and with them were three Belgian civilians who had been taken with revolvers on their persons. One of them was crying and the other two were trembling so that they could hardly control themselves.

"One of them said to me, 'I have done nothing, but it is true that when I was taken I had a revolver in my pocket.' At midnight they were led away. Their case seemed desperate. The next day from the window of my prison in Beaumont I saw them swinging cheerfully along the street. They were free and they were laughing.



"SIR, IN THE MORNING YOU WILL BE SHOT."

The Firing Squad Again.

"Our food that night was a pint of soup for the four of us and a handful of biscuits.

"In the morning vile coffee was served out, and on it we made the march back into Belgian territory and to the town of Beaumont. Before the march began the captain of the company, much less austere than he had been before, came to us and asked, 'Do you want to march with the company instead of with the prisoners?'

"'Yes,' we said, 'by all means with the company.'

"And so we started away on the last stage of our weary journey. We were passed by constant streams of German troops marching out of Beaumont to the front. It was nearly noon when we reached that town of Beaumont which is the seat of Prince de Caraman-Chimay, whose first wife was Clara Ward of Detroit. Just make a note that we got there about noon, for the fact later became amusing in a horrifying sort of way.

"At Beaumont we were ordered into the courtyard of what seemed to me to be a convent school, and there again was the suggestive wall such as had given me so much cause for reflection at the gendarmerie in Manage and in the orchard at Château Casteau.

"In the courtyard troops are drawn up. The captain of the company with which we had marched remarks to the concierge that three priests are coming. So-so, I thought, they are not going to turn us off without the last rites.

"The queen's photographer, an intensely volatile person, spent most of his time in bleating about the imminence of death, and that was beginning to get on my nerves, for I felt I needed all the steam I had left after two days of misery. So I spent most of my time telling the Belgian to dry up and trying to bear it in upon him that he was a menace not only to us but to himself. Along about this time the judge advocate appeared briefly upon the scene, and for the last time. There is a short conference, the result of which is that we are ordered to the temporary military prison, or guardhouse, in the adjacent street.

"Save for us, the prison, a room fifteen feet square, with five tons of shells piled in the hallway leading to it, is empty. The sergeant of the guard, a university bred man, is very kind to us. Little things they were, but they meant so much, such as giving us things to eat and cups to drink from. Wednesday night we spend in this prison, but before I lay down in the straw to sleep I ask a soldier to go out and buy me two or three postcards, so that I can send some word to Brussels. One that he brought back pictured a scene from the ancient annals of Beaumont. 'The meeting of Charles Quint and the three Auvergnats on the route to Philippeville,' was the line under the picture.

"You remember that a few moments ago I asked you to note the fact that we had arrived in Beaumont about noon. Well, over the picture was this bit of doggerel:

"'Ville de Beaumont, ville de malheur,
Arrivé à midi, pendu à une heure.'

"At first glance this line about Beaumont, 'city of misery, where you arrive at noon and are a hanged man at 1 o'clock,' gave me quite a turn, but then I realized that 1 o'clock was already passed and that I was not yet hanged. So I took heart of grace and lay down to pretty peaceful dreams.

"Thursday morning twenty-seven Frenchmen were thrust into the room 15x15 feet. So we numbered thirty-one, and you can imagine from some of your own recent experiences while under surveillance what it was like. In the course of the morning, though, the Frenchmen were sent out to sweep the streets, and the instant the room was cleared of them you and McCutcheon and Cobb and Hansen and Lewis were brought in.

"It was that instant that the fear of death lifted from me after more than seventy-two hours. I felt that if the Germans had really decided to execute me they would not have allowed me to join a party of my countrymen."

Imprisoned with Correspondents.

I should add that, seeing us and feeling the long strain suddenly lift, Stevens still did not collapse. In truth, of the nine suspects in the room at that instant he was the most composed. The gallant Gerbeault was a bit heady with relief; the Belgian, a wretchedly sick man, was in rather a pulpy condition, and of the state of brave black David nobody stopped to take any account. As for us five Americans who were newcomers in the prison, we were so dazed to find ourselves in actual imprisonment after a morning of mere surveillance in a tavern that I don't think we had made up our minds whether to be frightened or angry.

As a matter of fact, before we had made up our minds we were returned to the tavern, and so Stevens was left alone again with his foreign friends.

Here are the last sentences of his narrative:

"The few minutes you men were with us amid the straw cheered me immensely and I never realized so fully how true it is that misery loves company. After you left, the thing that was hardest to bear was the black looks and blistering words of the German private soldiers, who would stop in front of the windows of the prison as they passed along the street and look at us as if we were wild beasts. I could bear it no longer and appealed to the officer of the guard that, whatever we might have done, this was more than fair punishment. He took compassion on us and had the shutters of the windows closed.

"In a few minutes appeared the kind Rosenthal of whom you wrote so appreciatively in one of your dispatches to THE TRIBUNE, and after questioning us he turned to me and said: 'But you are an American! Come with me.'

"It was then that I was brought into the tavern where you were, and you got me a drink of brandy and offered me cigarets. If there was any time in the course of my troubles that I was very close to tears it was then. You will remember that in a few minutes Rosenthal took me back to prison. He asked me for more details of my story, and when I had given them I said: 'I swear by all that is good that what I have told you is true!'

"'I believe you,' he replied, 'and I'll go to the commandant and do the best I can for you.'

"How good his best was you know, for in three-quarters of an hour I was back with your crowd in the tavern, and your crowd was my crowd."

Retrospect.

That was Thursday afternoon, Aug. 27. Stevens slept with us that night on the tavern floor. On Friday night he left with us and a big detachment of French and English prisoners on a train bound for Aix-la-Chapelle. We reached Aix on Sunday morning. Here Stevens is no longer under surveillance, as we all were during our first four days in Aix, but he has given his word of honor to the German military authorities not to try to make his way out of Germany to Brussels until they give him permission. He will keep his word. Such men do that.

One day some of us were speaking of his experience as a test of character—how it would help a man to know himself in either his weakness or his strength.

"Yes," he said in his musing way, "I wouldn't take ten thousand dollars for the experience—but I wouldn't go through it again for twenty thousand."

He bears no rancor and does not rail at the German army. Of the man who put him through the night of hideous torture he merely remarked that he would like to 'punch his head.' For the behavior of the German troops on a hostile countryside he had only words of praise, calling our attention to the fact, which we also had observed, that drivers of the ponderous German army wagons scrupulously gave the carts of the refugee peasants their share of the road when they met up with them in the neighborhood of Nivelles. He spoke, too, of the fact that in the final adjustment of his troubles he was subjected to no drumhead court martial of the spy of story books, but had the privilege of a patient hearing before a great German jurist who was with the army to see justice done in just such cases as his.

What, then, is the explanation of the studied theatricalism of the dreadful night at Manage—the tying of the hands, the barring of the windows, the mock trial without the hearing of the prisoner's testimony, the placing of the death watch, and the appearance of the two sappers with the spade and the acetylene lamp?

Was it all a hideous practical joke, devised with diabolical cunning by a brutal and degenerate mind, or was it a sickening blunder?

Was the over-lieutenant mad, or was he a credulous, overzealous, overbearing, incompetent, worried man who had lost his head?

Stevens does not know.

Probably the only men in the world who do know, or ever will know, are the eleven soldiers of the guard who played their part in the wicked farce, if farce it was.

It is certain that the over-lieutenant's own men indicated by their furtive pantomime during the encounter at Nivelles that their commanding officer was unbalanced and ferocious; and it likewise is certain that Germans who heard the story have said that the over-lieutenant ought to be court martialed.

Anyway, we called the principal actor in the tragi-comedy "Stevens, good American," and we were proud to shake his hand.

For Stevens came through.

TODAY the greatest geography class that ever existed is studying its lessons with an earnestness that would bring joy to the heart of a schoolmaster. Before the maps in front of the newspaper offices, in front of store windows where portions of atlases are displayed, poring over the daily records of the advances and retreats of the European armies are thousands of students of geography.

And many of them have learned facts that astound them. They have learned that in an area almost equal to the United States and Alaska Europe has twenty-six countries and that only one of these countries, Russia, is larger than Texas; that nine are larger and seventeen smaller than Illinois; that several have less population than Cook county.

If the members of the class have looked up the statistics of population they will have found that although many of the countries of Europe are densely populated, because of their small area some of them have about the population of single states in our country. Of the strenuous Balkan states which a few years ago humbled Turkey only Roumania has more people than Illinois. Roumania has about 7,200,000 people, Illinois 5,638,591. Bulgaria has about 4,300,000 people, Greece only 2,600,000, Servia 2,900,000, and Montenegro but 250,000.

Illinois has almost as many people as Sweden, Portugal, the Netherlands, or Belgium. It exceeds in population Switzerland, Denmark, or Norway. Luxembourg has but 259,000 people, less than the number on the north side of Chicago and only a fourth of the number on the west side. A number of wards in Chicago have more people than one of the independent countries of Europe, Monaco, and the city of Chicago has more people than Greece or Norway. Five countries the size of Belgium could be put in Illinois, almost four the size of Denmark, about eight the size of Montenegro, almost four the size of Switzerland, and almost five the size of the Netherlands.

Russia is the only country comparable in size with the United States and it has a greater area than the combined areas of the other twenty-five countries. Placed in the United States it would occupy all the land west of the Mississippi to the Pacific except Missouri, Arkansas, and Texas. The British isles would equal in territory New England, New York, and two-thirds of New Jersey. Belgium could be placed in the southwest and Holland in the northeast quarters of Pennsylvania. France covers an area equal to our Atlantic states from Pennsylvania to South Carolina; Switzerland could be contained in the western third of Virginia, and Italy would cover half of Alabama and Georgia and all of Florida. Denmark equals little more than the northern peninsula of Michigan; Germany equals about four states the size of Illinois and Austria-Hungary is four times as large as Missouri. The six Balkan states could be placed in Texas and there would be much room left.

In the Latitude of Canada.

It must be remembered in making these comparisons that many of the countries of Europe would not fall within the United States at all if they were moved in a direct line across the ocean, for the great nations of Europe have developed their industries, cities, and great populations not in the latitude of the United States so much as in the latitude of Canada. To bring the warring nations within the area of our country the various cities and countries must be shoved south a distance of approximately 700 miles.

If Canada had centered under one government the peoples, industries, and resources of Europe lying north of the forty-ninth parallel of Europe we would not stand today at the head of the countries of the western hemisphere with more people and greater wealth than all the other American countries combined, but we would be only a poor second to our northern neighbor. The lady of the snows would boast of a population of 250,000,000 occupying the greatest industrial area of the earth; for in Europe north of the forty-ninth parallel we find all of the British isles, Belgium, the Netherlands, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, nine-tenths of Germany, an equal portion of Russia, and the northern strip of Austria-Hungary and France from Paris to its northern boundary.

Along the sixtieth parallel we find three great national capitals—Christiania with 240,000, Stockholm with 346,000, and Petrograd with 2,000,000. Moved westward to the American continent Christiania would rest on Fort Churchill on the west shore of Hudson bay, Stockholm would be in the middle of the bay, and Petrograd would lie on the east shore near the northern part of the peninsula of Labrador

London, The Hague, Brussels, and Berlin similarly transplanted would follow close to the fifty-second parallel. London would be in Manitoba, 100 miles north of Winnipeg; The Hague and Brussels in the Northwest territory of Canada north of the province of Ontario, and Berlin on the Albany river, 200 miles north of the northwest point of Lake Superior. Paris alone would be near our boundary line, for it would be situated near the Lake of the Woods on Minnesota's northern boundary.

War Zone on American Soil.

Today it is estimated that of Europe's 450,000,000 population 18,000,000 men are under arms. These men are on battlefields scattered over a territory less in extent than that of our own country. Suppose then Chicago were the center of this storm from which men are going out to meet the enemy on the north and south, as they have from Berlin; suppose Berlin were placed on Chicago, what would be the relative positions of the armies?

Paris would be located west and a little north of Topeka, Kas. The road from Berlin to Paris, therefore, would pass across Illinois, through the northern part of Missouri and into Kansas. Where the boundary lines of France and Belgium touch the ocean would be placed north of Lincoln and west of Des Moines. From there the French boundary line would sweep south and east to a point west and a little south of Jefferson City, Mo., near the Kansas and Missouri line. This latter point would correspond with the junction of the French, Swiss, and German boundary lines.

The middle west, therefore, would be the battle ground of the German army of the southwest.

On the northeast the Russian boundary would start at a point east and a little south of Georgian bay and north of Lake Erie and extend in an irregular line to a point in North Carolina near Raleigh. This latter point corresponds with the junction of the boundaries of Roumania, Austria-Hungary, and Russia.

Across the eastern half of the United States and well into the southern states the armies of the czar and kaiser would be engaged. The Servians would be battling along a line extending from a point in Georgia about midway between Atlanta and Tallahassee, Fla., to a point near the Georgia-South Carolina line, south and a little west of Columbia.

Considering merely territory a great part of the United States would not be affected by these battles. Probably only a portion of not more than thirteen states would be in the war zone. The great west, New England, and much of the middle west would be far from the smoke of battle. But in this territory all but 2,000,000 of the total males of militia age would be engaged. In 1910 the total male population of the United States between the ages of 18 and 44 years was given as 20,473,684. With 18,000,000 men in the field but 2,000,000 would be left to carry on the necessary work of the whole United States as well as produce the supplies for these great armies.

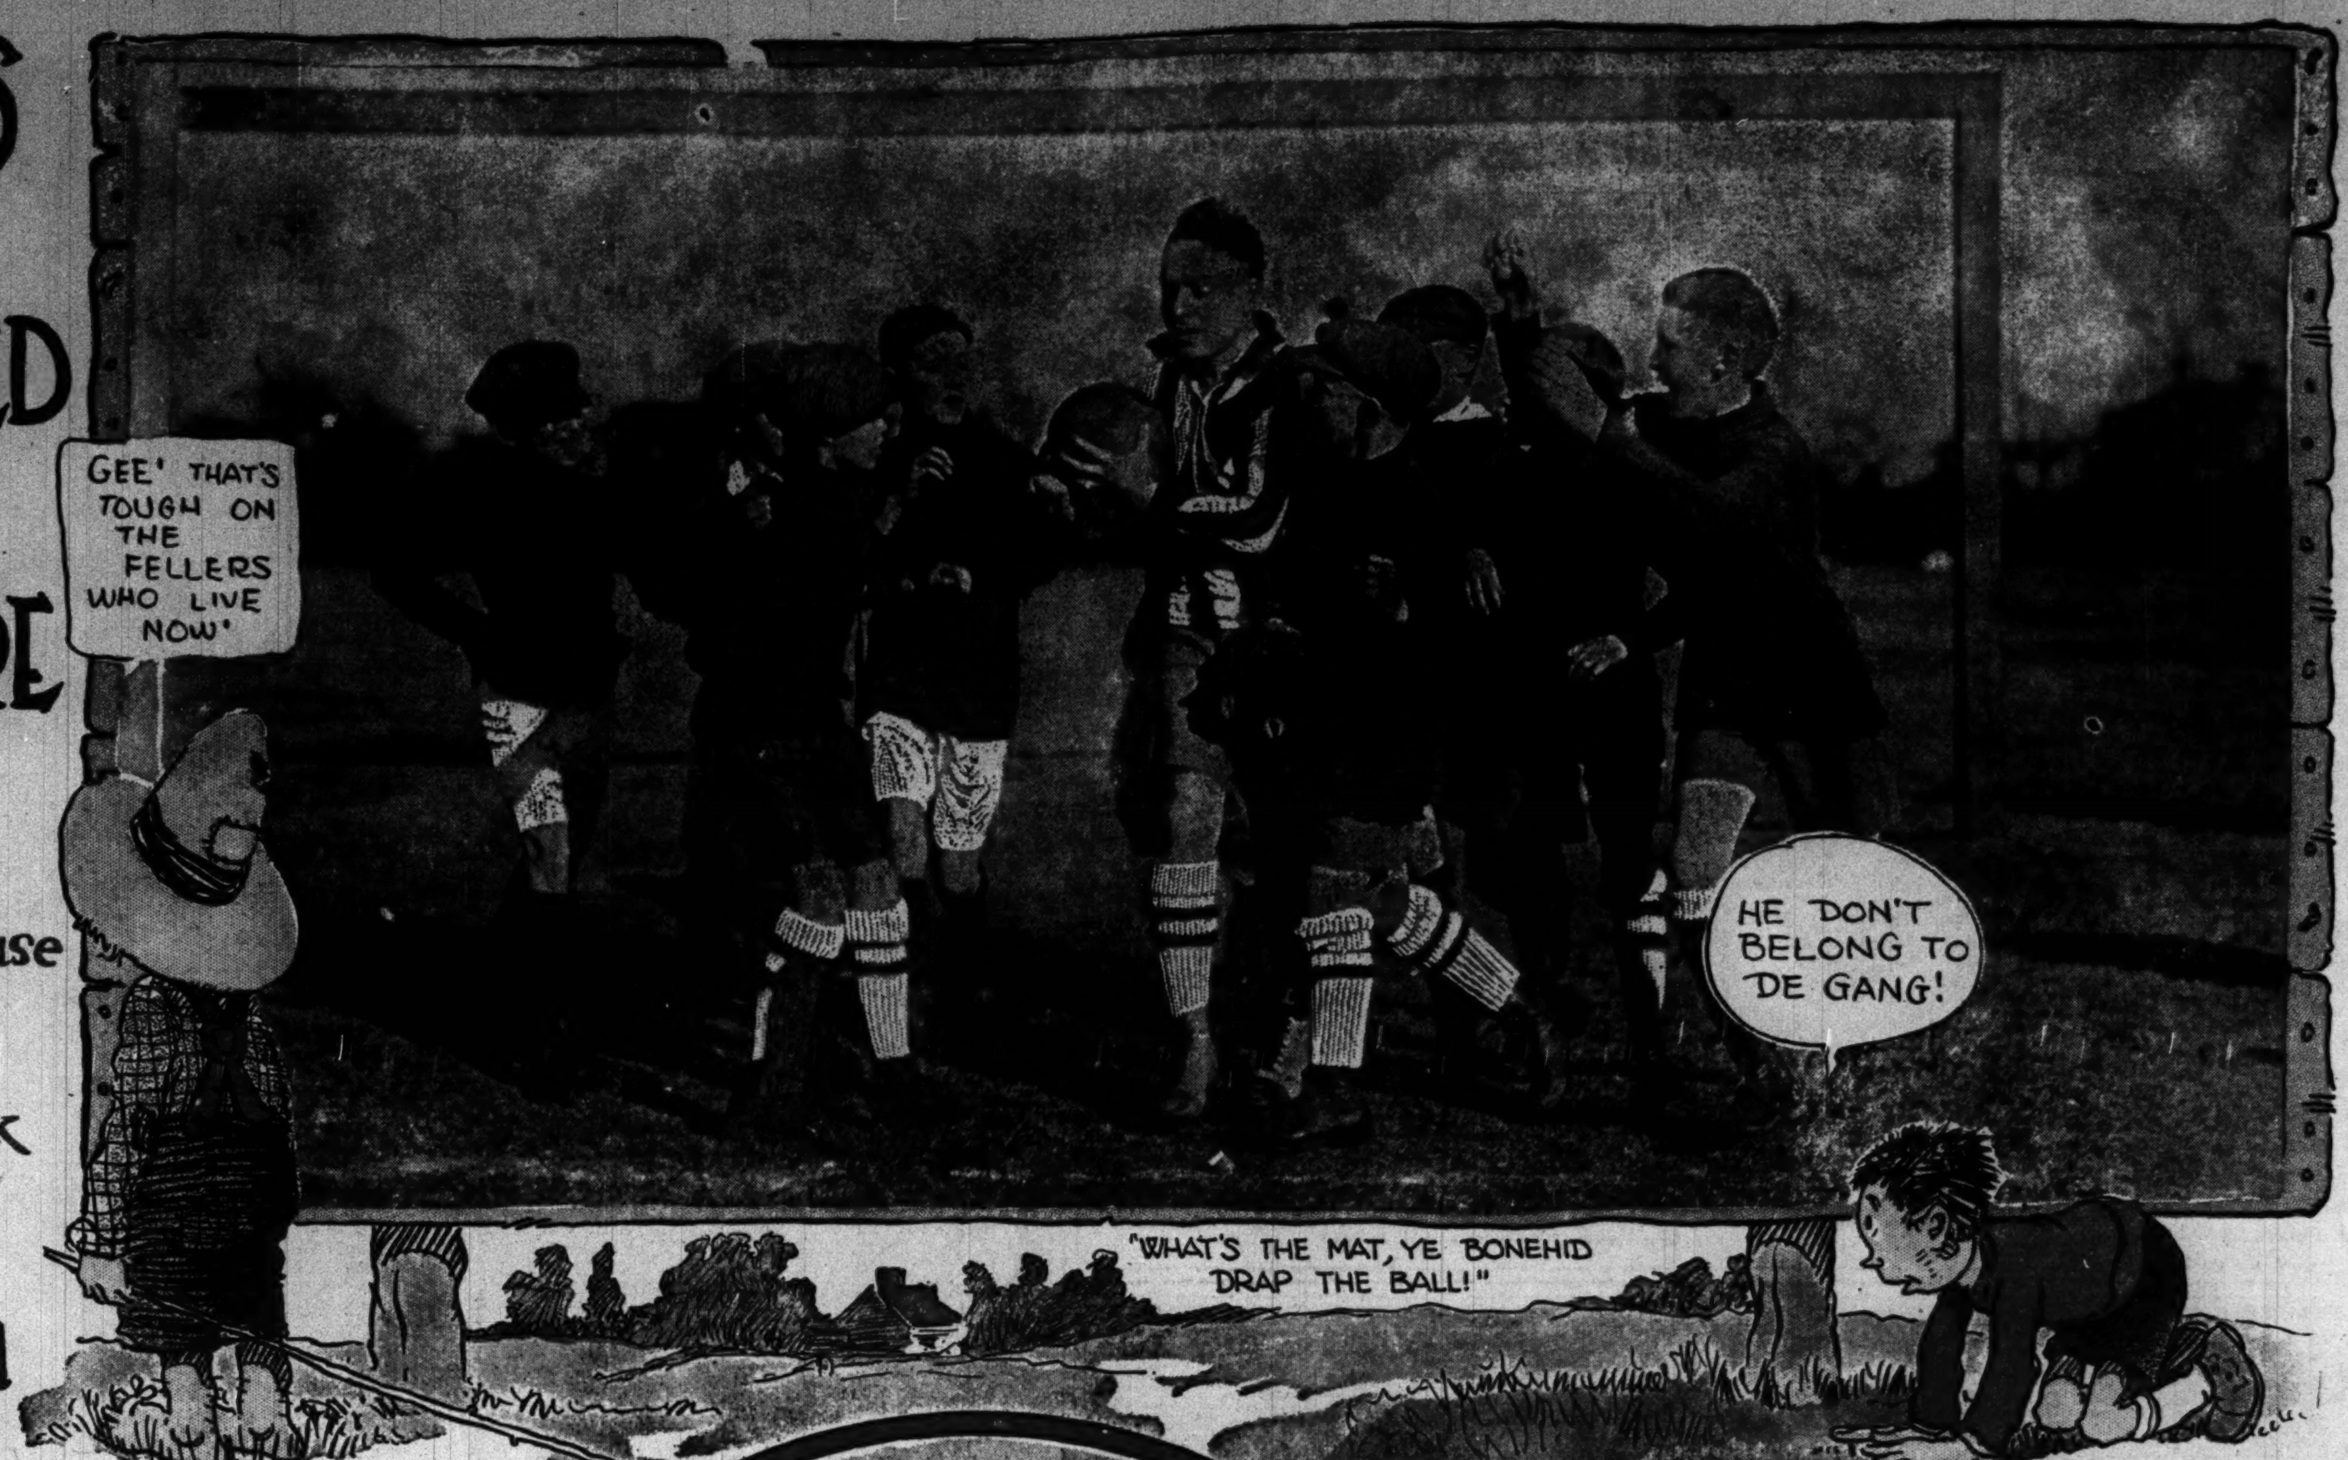
THINGS HAVE CHANGED SINCE WE WERE KIDS

I know because I was play director at Palmer Park for a day, Says Oney Fred Sweet



GEE' THAT'S TOUGH ON THE FELLERS WHO LIVE NOW'
HE DON'T BELONG TO DE GANG!
"WHAT'S THE MAT, YE BONEHID DRAP THE BALL!"

WHEN I first found out that I was going to be director for a day at one of Chicago's biggest playgrounds I looked forward to hollering to "Skin-nay" to "come on over." I had not been on the job ten minutes before I came to the realization that our old friend "Skin-nay" was nowhere in the neighborhood. Before the day was over I was glad Skin-nay couldn't be with us, because I am sure the experience would have made him weep.

The old apple tree that Skin-nay used to climb is today a perfectly tested apparatus upon which the 1914 Chicago boy exercises according to instruction: "Legs together, toes pointed, head up, chest out, stomach in, shoulders back." And, Skin-nay, you should see what has taken the place of that old swimming hole that you and Buck Engledorf knew in the woods out north of town. Instead of that deep spot in the "crick" just after the shallow point where the water trickled down over the "riffles" and became dark shadowed beneath the overhanging maples, they've got a big concrete tank that can be filled with water until it is from three to fifteen feet deep. If you get a stone bruise you're hurriedly given "first aid." There is no such thing as stepping on crawfish or getting bloodsuckers between your toes. There is no such thing as "staying in" all afternoon. You're only given an hour, and that includes all the moves you would make between the time you are given your locker key and your final supervised shower bath. They can tell whether or not you've been in before the same day by how clean your face looks, and now they're even wise to the "repeaters" who were caught rubbing their features with dirt.

Kids went in swimming at the rate of 225 an hour on the hot days last summer, Skin-nay. But that's nothing. Why, out at Palmer park, where I was director of play the other day, we had enough kids to make seventy-five baseball teams. Do you remember what a hard time you had getting enough kids together for two baseball nines? The kids at Palmer park don't wait to be chosen to pitch or play left field. They "sign up." In fact, to tell you the truth, Skin-nay, out at Palmer park I found that the kids were even cutting out the good old game of baseball that your gang used to play. But I will tell you about my painful experience in this connection later. During my day on Palmer park's forty acres I didn't hear a single "Yoo-hoo." It was all "At-aboy! At-aboy!"

"Here Comes the Bluebird."

Within a few blocks from Palmer park are the Pullman shops, to which 12,000 men carry collapsible dinner pails that don't look a bit like the kind you see in the prosperity cartoons. It is the men recently from England who are employed as upholsterers—padding chairs and tacking linings; it is the men who have come from Holland (wooden shoes are still worn near Palmer park) who are the experts at cabinetmaking—the turning out of fancy panels, each one just alike, day in and day out; from Scotland—in fact, right from Bobbie Burns' old home town—have come the varnishers and painters; Poland has furnished those huge fellows who for a period of two years at least can stand the strain as riveters of steel; and there are all sorts of odd jobs for the newly arrived Italians and Lithuanians. And so it happens that Peter von Deudekom, and Andy McGregor, and Heine Berger, and Veto Wolfranski, and Tony Petryskoski all chase together as soon as school is out to get to Palmer park to play. Consciousness of nationality and race and religion is as faint a thing there as the hushed echo of mingling voices that reaches you of an evening when you pass on an Illinois Central suburban train.

My first half hour of play directing was on the girls' part of the well shaded, concrete benched, geranium bedded, high iron fenced playground. I wish, Skin-nay, that you could have seen bloomered Celia Grotsky swing on one of the maypole ropes. I will never forget what a picture she made with the autumn breeze sending in every direction the bobbed blonde locks, with their pink ribbon adornment that was tied in a bow on top of her head. And then I had to blow a whistle because Alberdina Langredyk was standing up in one of the swings. Alberdina understood immediately and she decided to quit swinging anyhow and join Bessie McLeod and Zuretta Petrocello and the rest in playing:

Here comes the bluebird through the window,
High diddle dum, dey dey dey dey;
Takes a little dancer and hops through the garden,
Sings high diddle dum, dey dey dey.

It wasn't a bit like "Drop the handkerchief" or "Clap 'em out," like you used to play at surprise parties. There was a classic dance mixed up in it that had to be taught by a woman teacher who had studied it all at college.

Christina Zotti, aged 9, half Italian and half Swedish, left the game to try the traveling rings. They were just like you used to see in the circus. Swinging far from the ground, she would never let go on one ring for another until she had said something like this clear though:

O and Cye and Constanta, Nye,
Nople and a popol and a Constantinople.

And, Skin-nay, on the teeters they didn't say "Teeter totter, bread and water." They dipped up and down to "When that midnight choo-choo leaves for Alabam."

Even Nicknames Have Been Changed.

When I got over to the place where the kids above the age of 10 play I actually found, Skin-nay, that even nicknames had changed, and instead of Buffalo Bill, Ty Cobb was the popular hero. You know those pants you used to wear that fitted tight around your knees and had to be patched continually? Well, the Palmer park kids wore trousers that were bloused at the knees, their sweaters were monogrammed, and their coats had fancy belts and plaits down the back. Instead of giving a fellow a nickname because of some peculiarity in his anatomy, they drew their inspiration for such purposes from the various degrees of mental efficiency. "Skin-nay" and "Stubb" and "Fatty" have given way to "Bughouse" and "Ivory Dome." There were no bullies. When being a bully means being deprived of the park privileges, one ceases to care to be a bully. War? Tony Anastasia summed up the extent of interest taken in that affair. "Aw," poohed Tony, "we ain't in it."

Of course, having been a kid like you were, I wasn't a bit leery of showing other kids how to play any more than you would have been. When I thought we had had about enough of the apparatus, exercise on which has been shown to take away 48 per cent of the crime committed in a community, I thought it time to start something like "one old cat" or ante over"; or, seeing that there was plenty of material, a regular baseball game—throwing up the bat and catching it for a test of "hand over hand" before picking out the players. But, Skin-nay, while there are not as many of the Scotch as there are of certain other nationalities that help make up the 55,000 persons who live in the community for which Palmer park is the recreation center, I will say that the Scotch have certainly predominated when it comes to furnishing pastimes. What do you suppose the kids all yelled for? "Soccer!"

What! Hadn't I heard of Bennie Govier, Pullman's champion soccer player?

Did I suppose I could play without putting on a soccer costume with a striped sweater and my bare knees exposed to the autumn winds?

Was it possible that I knew nothing about the comparative standing of the Kensington Stars, the Roselands, the Pullmans, or the Hyde Park Centers?

Well, they didn't get my goat for a minute, Skin-nay. I still figured that kids hadn't changed very much after all; there might be one or two new twists to the games, but I would quickly catch on.

It wasn't long before the team from our park was out on the field ready for the referee's whistle. I didn't take as much interest as I might have in the preliminary practice and the game was almost ready to start when Veto Wolfranski came over to tell me that Heine Berger hadn't shown up and they were shy an "inside left." Would I take his place? Of course I would. Why not? They chased me back to the "gym" to get me into a costume that was something between a baseball and a football uniform. The referee tooted and the big game was on. I was glad the ball didn't come my way for some time, because I was confused by the Harry Lauder talk that was going on all along the sidelines: "What's the mat, ye bonehid, drap the ball!" "New, git the ba' awa' from ye!" "Do na' play wi' tha ba', Johnny, pass it r-r-reght across!"

And then all of a sudden the big soccer ball came my way. It was my turn to show these 1914 Chicago kids how we used to do. With the whole bunch chasing in my direction, I grabbed the pigskin firmly in both hands and started for the goal of the opponents. Skin-nay, what happened was awful. There was a din in my ears such as I have never heard before. As with difficulty I made progress down the field, I was interfered with not only by the players of the other team but by our athletes as well. They were all yelling at once, and above it all I could hear clear cut from their elders on the sidelines: "Bonehid! Bonehid!" By the time I had been brought to a stop and the referee had explained that a penalty would have to be paid for my foul in touching the ball with my hands, both teams had exhausted themselves in hurling epithets at me. It is my painful duty to record, Skin-nay, that after that my team would have no more of me in the game. Neither would they have any more of me as a director of play.

I don't know how the game ended. I didn't dare linger around to find out. But I had found out one thing, Skin-nay—things have certainly changed since we were kids.

$10,000 for 100 Words.

$10,000 for an idea, which you must tell in 100 words or less.

There will be no second prize.

Only one first prize of $10,000 for the man, woman or child who gives the best idea to finish "The Million Dollar Mystery"!

$10,000 for an idea.

READ THE CONDITIONS.

THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE prints today another installment of "The Million Dollar Mystery," a mystery story for the solution of which a prize of $10,000 will be given by the Thanhouser Film corporation. The story will run twenty-two consecutive weeks in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE. As each chapter appears in THE TRIBUNE a two reel film corresponding with it may be seen in the various moving picture theaters. By this arrangement with the Thanhouser Film corporation it will be possible for TRIBUNE readers both to read the story and see the moving picture of it as it progresses from week to week. The first film was released on June 22. Each week another will be released until Monday, Nov. 16. The last chapter of the story will appear in THE TRIBUNE on Sunday, Nov. 22.

CONDITIONS GOVERNING THE CONTEST.

The prize of $10,000 will be won by the man, woman, or child who writes the most acceptable solution of the mystery, from which the last two reels of motion picture drama will be made and the last two chapters of the story written by Harold MacGrath.

Solutions may be sent to the Thanhouser Film corporation, either at Chicago or New York, any time up to midnight, Jan. 14. They must be received not later than that date. This allows eight weeks after the first appearance of the last film releases and seven weeks after the last chapter is published in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE in which to submit solutions. The Chicago address of the Thanhouser company is 166 West Washington street and the New York City address is 71 West Twenty-third street.

A board of three judges will determine which of the many solutions received is the most acceptable.

The judges are to be Harold MacGrath, Lloyd Lonergan, author of the scenario, and Miss Mae Tinee of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

The judgment of this board will be absolute and final. Nothing of a literary nature will be considered in the decision nor given any preference in the selection of the winner of the $10,000 prize. The last two reels, which will give the most acceptable solution to the mystery, will be presented in the theaters having this feature as soon as it is possible to produce same. The story corresponding to these motion pictures will appear in this newspaper coincidentally, or as soon after the appearance of the pictures as practicable. With the last two reels will be shown the pictures of the winner, his or her home, and other interesting features.

Solutions to the mystery must not be more than 100 words long. Here are some questions to be kept in mind in connection with the mystery as an aid to a solution:

No. 1—What becomes of the millionaire?

No. 2—What becomes of the $1,000,000?

No. 3—Whom does Florence marry?

No. 4—What becomes of the Russian countess?

Nobody connected either directly or indirectly with "The Million Dollar Mystery" will be considered as a contestant.

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS.

Stanley Hargreave, millionaire, having joined what he believed to be a great social movement, finds that in reality he has been trapped by the Black Hundred. After a miraculous escape from the den of the brilliant thieves, he lives the life of a recluse for eighteen years. One night, surrendering to a restless spirit of rebellion, Hargreave enters a Broadway restaurant and there comes face to face with the Black Hundred's leader, Braine.

After the meeting, during which neither man openly recognizes the other, Hargreave hurries to his magnificent Riverdale home and lays plans for making his escape from the country. He writes a letter to the girls' school in New Jersey, where, sixteen years before, he had mysteriously left on the doorstep of the institution his tiny baby daughter—named "Florence Gray" by the note attached to the basket—and arranges that she be sent to him at once. He also pays a visit to the hangar of a daredevil aviator.

Braine and members of his band surround Hargreave's home at night, but as they enter the house the watchers outside see a balloon leave the roof. The safe is found empty—the million which Hargreave was known to have drawn that day was gone. Then one of the men outside announced that he had punctured the balloon and sent it to the bottom of the ocean.

The next day Florence arrives from the girls' school and is greeted by the butler, Jones, whom Hargreave has taken into full confidence. She is later visited by Countess Olga, Braine's companion, who claims to be a relative. Two bogus detectives call, but they find themselves thwarted by Norton, a newspaper man, who happens to be on the scene at the right moment.

Later Florence is lured from home by the band, but succeeds in freeing herself from their clutches. The next day Jones removes a box from its hiding place and, pursued by Braine's men, rushes to the water front. A race in motor boats ensues and Jones drops the box into the sea.

Concealed above the rendezvous of the Black Hundred, a man learns of the recovery by a sailor of the box Jones dropped into the sea and of its subsequent return to the sea, and he quickly communicates the fact to Jones. A duplicate box is planted and later secured by the band, but before its contents are examined the box mysteriously disappears.

Through treachery in the Hargreave household Florence is delivered into the hands of an unscrupulous doctor, who is in the pay of the Black Hundred. From the faithful Susan, Norton learns that the doctor has declared that Florence is stricken with smallpox and that he is preparing to spirit her away. By acting quickly, the reporter, with the aid of Susan, succeeds in extricating the young woman from the danger after an encounter with members of the gang.

Braine and Countess Olga plan a daring attempt to capture Florence and Norton at a masked ball given by Princess Parlova. They defeat their own plan by overanxiety.

CHAPTER XIX.

FLORENCE was a fortnight in recovering from the shock of her experience at the masked ball of the Princess Parlova, who, by the way, disappeared from New York shortly after the fire, no doubt because of her fear of the Black Hundred. The fire did not destroy the house, but most of the furnishings were so thoroughly drenched by water that they were practically ruined. Her coming and going were a nine days' wonder, and then the public found something else to talk about.

Norton was a constant visitor at the Hargreave place. There was to him a new interest in that mysterious house, with its hidden panels, its false floors, its secret tunnels; but he treated Jones upon the same basis as hitherto. One thing, however: He felt a sense of security in regard to Florence such as he had not felt before. So, between assignments, he ran out to Riverdale and did what he could to amuse his sweetheart. Later, they took short rides in the runabout, and at length she became as lively as she had ever been.

But often she would catch Norton brooding.

"What makes you frown like that?"

"Was I frowning?" innocently enough.

"I find you this way a dozen times in an afternoon. What is the matter? Are they after you again?"

"Heavens, no! I'm only a vague issue. They will not bother me so long as I do not bother them. It has dwindled into a game of truce."

"Do you think so?" eyeing him curiously.

"Why, yes."

"What's the use of trying to fool me, Jim? If they haven't been after you, you are sensing a presage of evil. I'm not a child any longer. Haven't I been through enough to make me a woman? Sometimes I feel very old."

"To me you are the most charming in all this wide world. No, you're not a child any longer. You are a woman, brave and patient; and I know that I could trust you with any secret I have or own. But sometimes a person may have a secret which is not his and which he hasn't any right to disclose."

She became silent for a while. "I hate money," she said. "I hate it, hate it!"

"It's mighty comfortable to have it around sometimes," he countered.

"As in my case, for instance. If I were poor and had to work no one would bother me."

"I would!" he declared, laughing. "Come; let's throw off moods and go into town for tea at the Rose Garden; and if you feel strong enough we'll trip the light fantastic."

They had been gone from the house less than an hour when a man ran up the steps of the veranda and rang the bell. Jones being busy at the rear of the house, the maid came to the door.

"Is Miss Hargreave in?" the stranger asked.

"No," abruptly. The door began to close ever so slowly.

"Do you know where I can find her?"

The maid eyed him with covert keenness; then, remembering that the reporter was with Florence, said: "I believe she is at the Rose Garden this afternoon."

"That is in town?"

"Yes."

"Thanks." The man turned abruptly and ran down the steps.

The maid ran back to Jones.

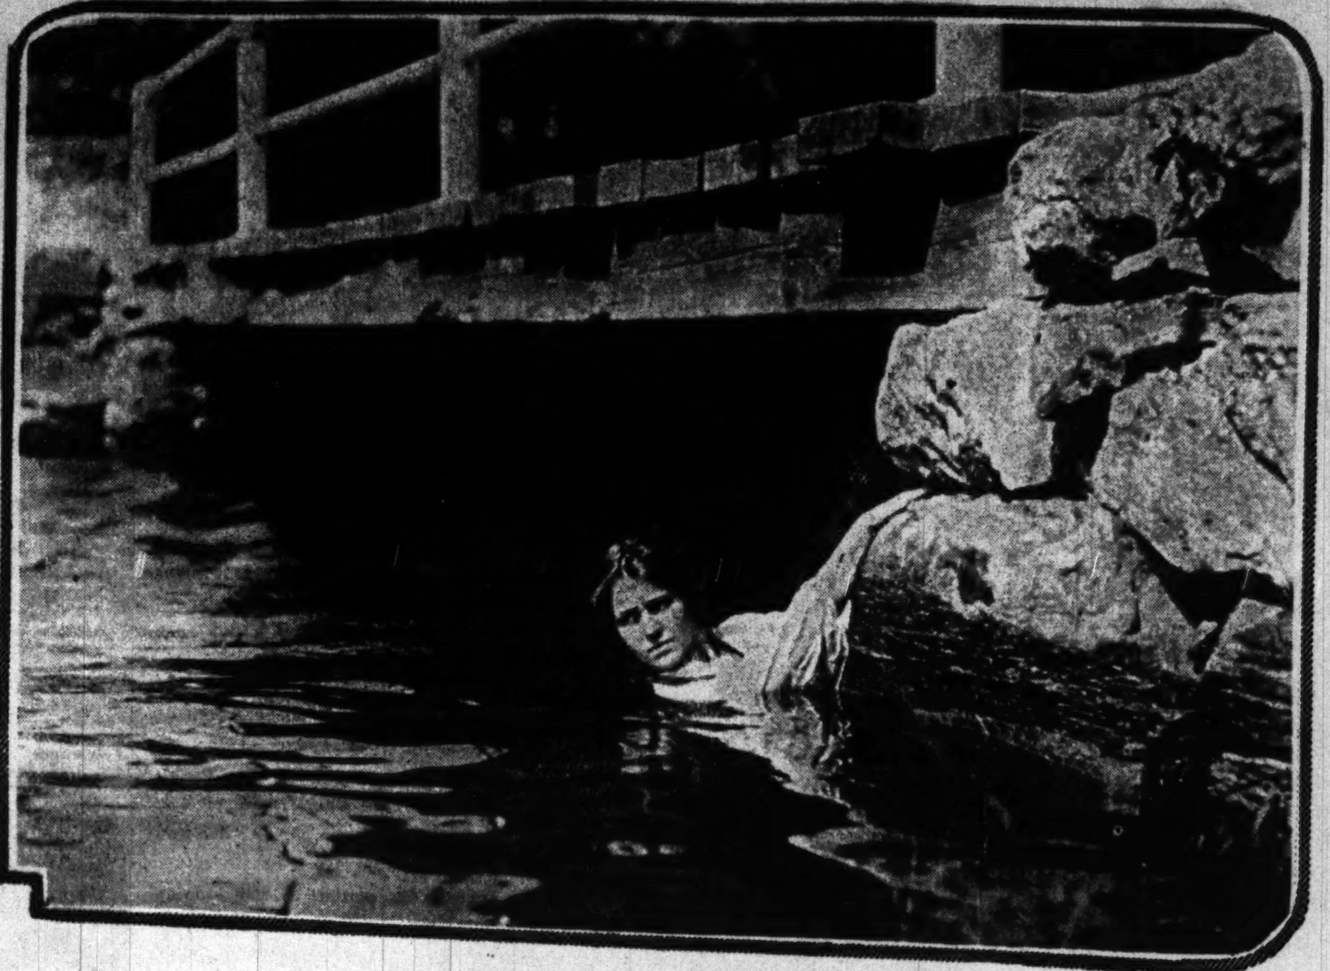
"Why didn't you call me?" he demanded impatiently.

"There wasn't time."

"Did you tell him where she was?"

"Yes. But I shouldn't have told him if Mr. Norton had not been with Miss Florence."

Jones ran to the front, dashed out, eyed the back of the man hastening down the street, smiled, and returned to his work, or, rather, to the maid. He took her by the shoulder, whirled her about, and shot a look into her eyes that quailed her.



THE WELL PROVED TO BE AN UNDERGROUND RIVER.

"WHERE HAVE THEY HIDDEN THAT MONEY?"

"Always call me hereafter, no matter what I'm doing. That man has never laid eyes on Florence and has no idea what she looks like. Why did you drug my coffee the night of that ball?"

She stepped back.

"And how much did they pay you for letting that doctor send Florence to Atlantic City? I know everything. Hereafter, walk straight. If you play another trick I'll kill you with these two hands. And listen and tell this to your confederates: I always know every move they make; that is why no one is missing from this house. There is a traitor. Let them find him if they can. Will you walk straight, or will you leave?"

"I—I will walk straight," she faltered. "The money was too big a temptation."

"Did they give it to you?"

"Yes. And more to stay here. But this is the first dishonest work I ever did."

"Well, remember what I have said. Another misstep and I'll make an end to you. Don't think I'm trying to scare you. You've witnessed enough to know that it's life and death in this house. Now run along."

At the Garden Jim and Florence sauntered among the crowd, not having any particular objective point in view.

"Sh!" whispered Jim.

"What is it?"

"Olga Perigoff is yonder in a box."

"Very well; let us go and sit with her. Is she alone?"

"Apparently. But don't you think we'd better go elswhere?"

"My dear young man," said Florence with mock loftiness, "Olga Perigoff has written me down as a simple young fool, and that is why, sooner or later, I'm going to put the shoe on the other foot. You and Jones have coddled me long enough. Inasmuch as I am the stake they are playing for, I intend to have something more than a speaking part in the play."

"All right; you're the admiral," he said with pretended lightness.

So the two of them joined their subtle enemy, conscious of a tingle of zest as they did so. On her part the countess was always suspicious of the sleepy-eyed reporter. She never could tell how much he knew. But of Florence she was reasonably certain; and so long as she could fool the pretty infant the suspicions of the reporter were of a negligible quantity. She greeted them effusively and offered them chairs. For half an hour they sat there, chatting inanities, all the while each mind busy with deeper concerns.

When the man in search of Florence eventually arrived and asked the manager of the garden if he knew Miss Hargreave by sight the manager pointed toward the box. The man wound his way in and out of the idlers and by the time he reached the box Jim and Florence had made their departure. The man bowed, approached, and asked if she was Miss Hargreave. For a moment the countess suspected a trap. Then it appealed to her mind that if there was no trap it might be well to pose as Florence, if only to learn what the outcome might be.

"Yes. What is wanted?" she asked.

The man took a letter from his pocket and handed it to Olga, saying: "Give this to your father. He knows how to read it."

Before she could reply the man had turned and was hurrying away.

Olga opened the note, her heart beating furiously. It was utterly blank. At first she thought it was a hoax. Then she happened to remember that there was such a thing as invisible ink. At last! Hargreave was alive; this letter settled all doubt in her mind on this question. Alive! And not only that, but the girl and Jones were evidently in communication with him. She summoned a waiter, made a secret sign, and he bowed and approached. She slipped the letter into his hand and whispered: "Show that at the cave tomorrow. It is in invisible ink and meant for Hargreave."

"He's alive?"

"Positively."

"Very well." The waiter bowed and strolled away nonchalantly.

Braine was in Boston over night, otherwise the countess would have taken the mysterious note at once to him. She remained for perhaps a quarter of an hour longer and then left the garden. She would have taken the letter to her own apartment but for the fact that the chemicals needed were hidden in the cave.

Now it happened that Florence went out for her early ride the next morning, and, crossing a field, she saw a man with a bundle under his arm. The sun struck his profile and limned it plainly, and Florence uttered a low cry. The man had not observed her. So, very quietly, she slipped from the horse, tethered it to a tree and started after the man to learn what he was doing so far from the city. She would never forget that face. She had seen it that dreadful night when the note had lured her into the hands of her enemies. The face belonged to the man who had impersonated her father.

It occurred to her that she might just as well do a little detective work on her own hook. She had passed through so many terrifying episodes that she was beginning to crave for the excitement, strange as this may seem. Like a gambler who has once played for high stakes, she no longer found pleasure in thimbles and needles and pins. She followed the man with no little skill and at length saw him approach a knoll, stoop, apparently press a spring, and a hole suddenly yawned. The man vanished quickly, and the spot took on again its virginal appearance. A cave! Florence had the patience to wait. By and by the man appeared again and slunk away.

When she was sure that he was beyond range she came out from the place of concealment, crept up the knoll, and searched about for the magic handle of this strange door. Diligence rewarded her, and she soon found herself in a large, musty, earth-smelling cave. Loot was scattered about and there were boxes and chairs and a large chest. Men evidently met here, possibly after some desperate adventure against society. She found nothing to reward her hardihood, and as she was in the act of moving toward the cave's door she beheld with terror that it was moving!

She was near the chest at that moment. The cave was not a deep one. There was no tunnel, only a wall. Resolutely she raised the lid of the chest, stepped inside, and drew the lid down. She was just in time. The door opened and three men entered, talking volubly. They felt perfectly secure in talking as loudly as they pleased. To Florence it seemed almost impossible that they did not hear the thunder of her heart. Strain her ears as she might, she could gather but little of what they said, except:

"If Hargreave had this paper we might all be put on the defensive. To an outsider it is a blank paper. But the boss will be able to read it. . . ." The speaker moved away from the vicinity of the chest and she heard no more.

Very deftly Florence raised the lid just enough to peep out. The man who had been talking was putting the note in his hip pocket. As he turned toward the chest he sat down on the soap box immediately in front of the chest. An inspiration came to the girl, an exceedingly daring one. She took her liberty in her hands as she executed the deed. But the dimness of the cave aided her. When she crouched down again the magic paper was hers.

It seemed hours to her before the men left the cave. As she heard the hidden door jar in closing she raised the lid and stepped out, breathing deeply. The paper she had purloined was indeed blank, but Jones or Jim would know what to do with it. And wouldn't they be surprised when she told them what she had accomplished all alone? Her exultation was of short duration. She heard the whine of the door on its hinges. The men were returning. Why?

They were returning because they had discovered a woman's shoeprint outside. It pointed toward the cave, freshly, and there was none coming away. To reënter the chest would be foolhardy. It would be the first place the men would look. She glanced about desperately. She saw but once chance, the well. And even while the door was swinging inward, letting the brilliant sunshine enter, she summoned up the courage and let herself down into the well, which proved to be nothing more nor less than an underground river!

The men came in with a rush. They upset boxes, looked into the chest, and the man who was evidently in command gazed down the well, shaking his head. Their search was thorough, but they found no one. And at length they began to reason that perhaps a woman had got as far as the door and then turned away, walking on the turf.

Meanwhile Florence was borne along by the swift current of the river, which gained in swiftness every moment. From time to time she bumped along the rocky walls, but she clung to life valiantly. In ten minutes she was swept to the other side of the hill, into the rapids; but the blue sky was overhead, she was out in the familiar world again. On, on she was carried. Even though she was half dead she could hear the roar of a falls somewhere in advance.

Braine thought he really had a clew to the treasure, and with his usual promptness he set about to learn if it was worth anything. He procured a launch and began to prowl about, using a pole as a feeler. All the while he was being closely watched by Norton, who had concluded to hang onto Braine's trail till he found something worthy of note. Braine was disguised, but this time Jim was not to be fooled. But what was he looking for, wondered the reporter? Braine continued to pole along, sometimes pausing to look over the gunwale down into the water. In raising his head after the last investigation he discerned something struggling in the water, about three hundred yards away. The current leisurely brought the object into full view. It was a young woman with just power enough to keep herself afloat. The golden head roused something in him stronger than curiosity. It might be!

Braine proceeded to move the launch in the direction of the girl. It was this movement that turned the reporter's gaze. He, too, now saw the woman in the water and wondered how she had come there. When Braine reached the girl and pulled her into the launch Jim saw her face plainly.

He flew from his vantage point, found a skiff, and started after Braine.

"By the Lord Harry!" murmured the rogue. "Well, they can talk of manna from heaven, but this is what I call luck. Florence Hargreave, out of nowhere, into my arms! The god of luck has cast another horseshoe and it's mine."

He had a flask in his pocket, and he forced some of the biting spirits down the girl's throat. She opened her eyes.

"Well, my beauty?"

Florence eyed him wildly, not quite understanding where he had come from.

"I don't know how you got here," he said; "and I don't care. But here we are together at last. Where is your father?"

"I—I don't know," dazedly.

"Better think quickly," he warned. "I want lucid answers to my questions, or back you go into the water. I'm about at the end of my rope. I've been beaten too many times, my girl, to have any particular love for you. Now, where is your father?"

"I don't know; I have never seen him."

Braine laughed.

And Jim's boat ran afoul of some rocks and into the water he went. He had not attracted Braine's attention, fortunately. He began to swim toward the drifting launch.

"Where have they hidden that money?"

"I don't know."

"Well, well; I've given you your chance. You'll have to try your luck with the water again."

Florence, weak as she was, set her lips.

"You don't ask for mercy?" he said banteringly.

"I should be wasting my breath to ask for mercy from such a monster as you are," she answered quickly.

"That damned Hargreave nerve!" he snarled.

He rolled up his sleeves and stepped toward her. She braced herself, but did not turn her eyes from his. Suddenly, from nowhere at all, came a pair of hands. One clutched the gunwale and the other laid hold of Braine. A quick pull followed, and Braine began to topple. But even as he fell he managed to fling himself atop his assailant; and it was only when the struggle began in the water that he recognized the reporter. All the devil in him came to the surface and he fought with the fierceness of a tiger to kill, kill, kill. In nearly every instance this meddling reporter had checkmated him. This time one or the other of them should stay in the water.

Norton recognized that he had a large order before him to disable Braine. The recognition between them was now frank and absolute; there could never again be any diplomatic sidestepping.

"You're a dead man, Norton!" panted Braine as he reached for the reporter's throat.

Norton said nothing, but struck the hand aside. For a moment they both went under. They came up sputtering, each trying for a hold. It was a terribly enervating struggle.

Florence could do nothing. The boat in which she sat continued to drift away from the fighting men. Once she tried to reach Braine with the pole he had been using, but failed.

From the shore came another boat. For a while she could not tell whether it contained friends or enemies. It was terrible to be forced to wait, absolutely helpless. When she heard the newcomers call encouragingly to Braine she knew then that the brave fight of her sweetheart was going to come to naught. She knew a little about motors. She threw on the power and headed straight toward the rowboat. The men shouted at her, but she did not alter her course. The rowboat had its side crushed in and the men went piling into the water.

"Jim," she cried.

Norton suddenly flung off Braine and began to swim madly for the motorboat, which Florence had brought about. Even then it was only by the barest luck in the world that Norton managed to catch the gunwale. The rest of it was simple. When they finally reached a haven, Florence, oddly enough, thought of the horse she had left tethered nine miles from the stables. She laughed hysterically.

"I guess he won't die. We can send some one out for him. Now, for heaven's sake, how did you get into this? Where were you? What have you been up to?" with tender brusqueness.

"I wanted to do a little detective work of my own," she faltered.

"It looks as if you had done it. You infant! Will you never learn to keep outside this muddle? It's a man's work."

Florence, thoroughly weakened by her long immersion in the water, began to weep silently.

"You poor child. I'm a brute!" And he comforted her.

Later that day, at home, she remembered the blank paper.

"I stole this from one of the men in the cave. He said this blank paper would probably save father."

Jim took it. "Hm! Invisible ink, and it's had a fine washing."

"But maybe it's waterproof."

"Maybe it is. Anyhow, Miss Sherlock, we'll show it to Jones and see what he says."

THE RUSSIAN NATIONAL HYMN.

God save the noble Czar!
Long may he live in power,
In happiness, in peace to reign,
Dread of his enemies, faith's sure defender,
God save the Czar!
God save the Czar!

It may be interesting to Russian-Americans to know that an American version of this hymn was written by S. F. Smith, who wrote "My Country, 'Tis of Thee." He called this version "God Ever Glorious." It is sung to the tune of the Russian national hymn and the words are as follows:

"GOD EVER GLORIOUS."

God ever glorious!
Sovereign of nations
Waving the banner of peace
o'er our land;
Thine is the victory,
Thine the salvation,
Strong to deliver,
Own we Thy hand.

Still may Thy blessing rest,
Father most holy,
Over each mountain, rock,
river and shore;
Sing Hallelujah!
Shout in hosannas!
God keep our country
Free evermore.

FOR some time the Russian people used the English or Prussian national anthems upon state occasions, but this did not please Czar Nicholas I., so he ordered the musician, Von Lvoff, to compose some music for the words written by Joukovski, that Russia might have her own national anthem composed especially for the Russian people.

Alexis Feodorovich von Lvoff was born at Reval, Russia, in 1799. He was educated for the army and rose rapidly in the military service and was advanced to the rank of major general, and was appointed an aid de camp to the Emperor Nicholas. His father was a famous musician, and so the young Alexis received a good musical education in the home and later he became a musician of marked ability.

In 1836 Alexis von Lvoff succeeded his father as director of the imperial court choir. Von Lvoff was an excellent violinist and was well known in Russia and in Germany as a quartet player. He organized a famous string quartet in St. Petersburg, which was celebrated for its perfection of ensemble. He became deeply interested in Russian church music and wrote an essay on "The Rhythm of Old Russian Church Songs." He studied into the subject so sincerely that he was able to compose many sacred songs. He also arranged the music for some of the old Russian folk songs which had been sung to him as a child. He wrote a great deal of instrumental music and composed four operas, but the work by which his memory lives is this Russian national hymn, which is one of the most impressive of all the national hymns.

Von Lvoff suffered from deafness and during the last years of his life he was saddened by being unable to hear his own compositions. On account of this affliction he retired from active service in 1867, and died on his estate near Kovo Dec. 16, 1870.

These inspiring words were written by the Russian poet, Joukovski. Joukovski was born near Bielev, in the government of Penza, in the year 1783. When quite a young man he wrote many poems for a journal in Moscow. He was an ambitious student and knew many languages, so that he was able to translate poems from foreign lands into the Russian language, and it is said that he made his reputation by his remarkable translation of Gray's "Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard." He also made many excellent translations from the tales of other countries and wrote many prose essays.

When Napoleon led his campaign against Russia in 1812 Joukovski, like all the loyal patriots, joined the volunteer troops at Moscow and at this time he also helped his country's cause by writing some spirited ballads, called "The Minstrel in the Russian Camp." These songs became popular with the Russian soldiers and won for their author the special favor of the emperor and empress. When the Grand Duke Nicholas was married he appointed Joukovski to teach his wife the Russian language, and so the poet lived in the palace with the royal family and later he became a tutor for the young prince, who was Alexander II.

Joukovski was so beloved by the emperor and all the people that when he died in 1852 a monument was erected to his memory.

The Russian consul at Chicago, Mr. Wolf, and Mr. M. R. Polakoff of the Russian Art shop very kindly helped me with this story, and they say that whenever and wherever this national hymn is sung all the people stand, the men remove their hats, and the words are sung with deep feeling. They also told me that the Russian people have a strong feeling of patriotism and reverence for the "Little Father," as they lovingly call the czar, and that the soldiers today as they march to the war are singing with fervor "God Save the Czar."

THE TEENIE

"DO you know we have received a lot of letters we should have answered?" remarked the general one evening as he walked out on the porch of teenie weenie house.

"Yes, I know it," answered the lady of fashion. "I was thinking about it today. They should have been answered long ago. It's not polite to leave letters unanswered."

"Quite right," put in the old soldier. "We must answer them tomorrow."

"I'd like to know how we're going to answer them," said the cook.

"Why, with pen and ink and paper, of course," said the lady of fashion.

"Yes, I thought possibly you would use paper and pen and ink," said the cook, as he made a mock bow to the lady of fashion, "but did it ever occur to you that our teenie weenie letters would be so small the postman would never find them after they were dropped into the letter box?"

"Sure," cried the dunce. "A regular two cent postage stamp would cover about a dozen of our letters."

"One of our letters would be just about the size of this,"  and the cook drew a picture and handed it over to the teenie weenie lady of fashion.

"O, dear, what shall we do?" and two teenie weenie tears rolled down her little cheeks.

"The only way I can see," said the general, "is to find a desk somewhere and use pens and ink and paper such as big people use." "That'll be an awfully hard job," remarked the cowboy.

The next morning the Teenie Weenies discovered a desk, and, climbing to the top, they dragged out a piece of paper. After a great deal of trouble they removed the cork of the ink bottle and dipped the pen into the ink." "Now where's the list of names and addresses?" asked the general.

"I have them," answered the old soldier. "Read them," commanded the general.

"Jewel Alkire, Virginia, Ind.; Jean Simons, Chicago; Frederick Lewis Jr., Chicago; John B. Kimberly, Neenah, Wis.; Ruth Hoover, Sycamore, Ill.; Helen Hanson, Chicago; Harry J. Kane, Chicago; Robert La Follette, Fort Madison, Iowa; Richard — —"

"Help" (splash) "Help, help" (splash). "What's that? What's that?" asked the general.

"The dunce has fallen into the ink bottle," replied the Teenie Weenies.

The cowboy and the Turk climbed onto the ink bottle and fished the half drowned dunce out.

"Bring up the blotter, boys, and blot this inky fellow," yelled the general.

The dunce was rolled on the blotter until he was quite dry. "When—when you answer that little girl's letter—the one that sent kisses to me—don't—don't—please don't tell her I fell into the ink," blubbered the dunce, as he was led off to be scrubbed and sent to bed.

"Hem—I would like you to especially remember me to the little girl who said she liked me because she said I was so brave," remarked the general, as he pulled his teenie weenie mustache and strutted up and down the sheet of paper.

"You might tell her about the time he killed a fly, single handed, with his sword," added the old soldier, "and tell the boy who worried about my having only one leg, that I don't mind—I get a pension, and I like that pension pretty well. If I had two legs I wouldn't have it."

The Teenie Weenies had a hard time writing their letters. The pen was so big it was hard to handle, and they spotted so many sheets of paper they finally decided to get the man who draws their pictures to answer their letters for them, on the typewriter. So the Teenie Weenies ride back and forth on the typewriter carriage and tell just what they want written in their teenie weenie letters to their many little friends.

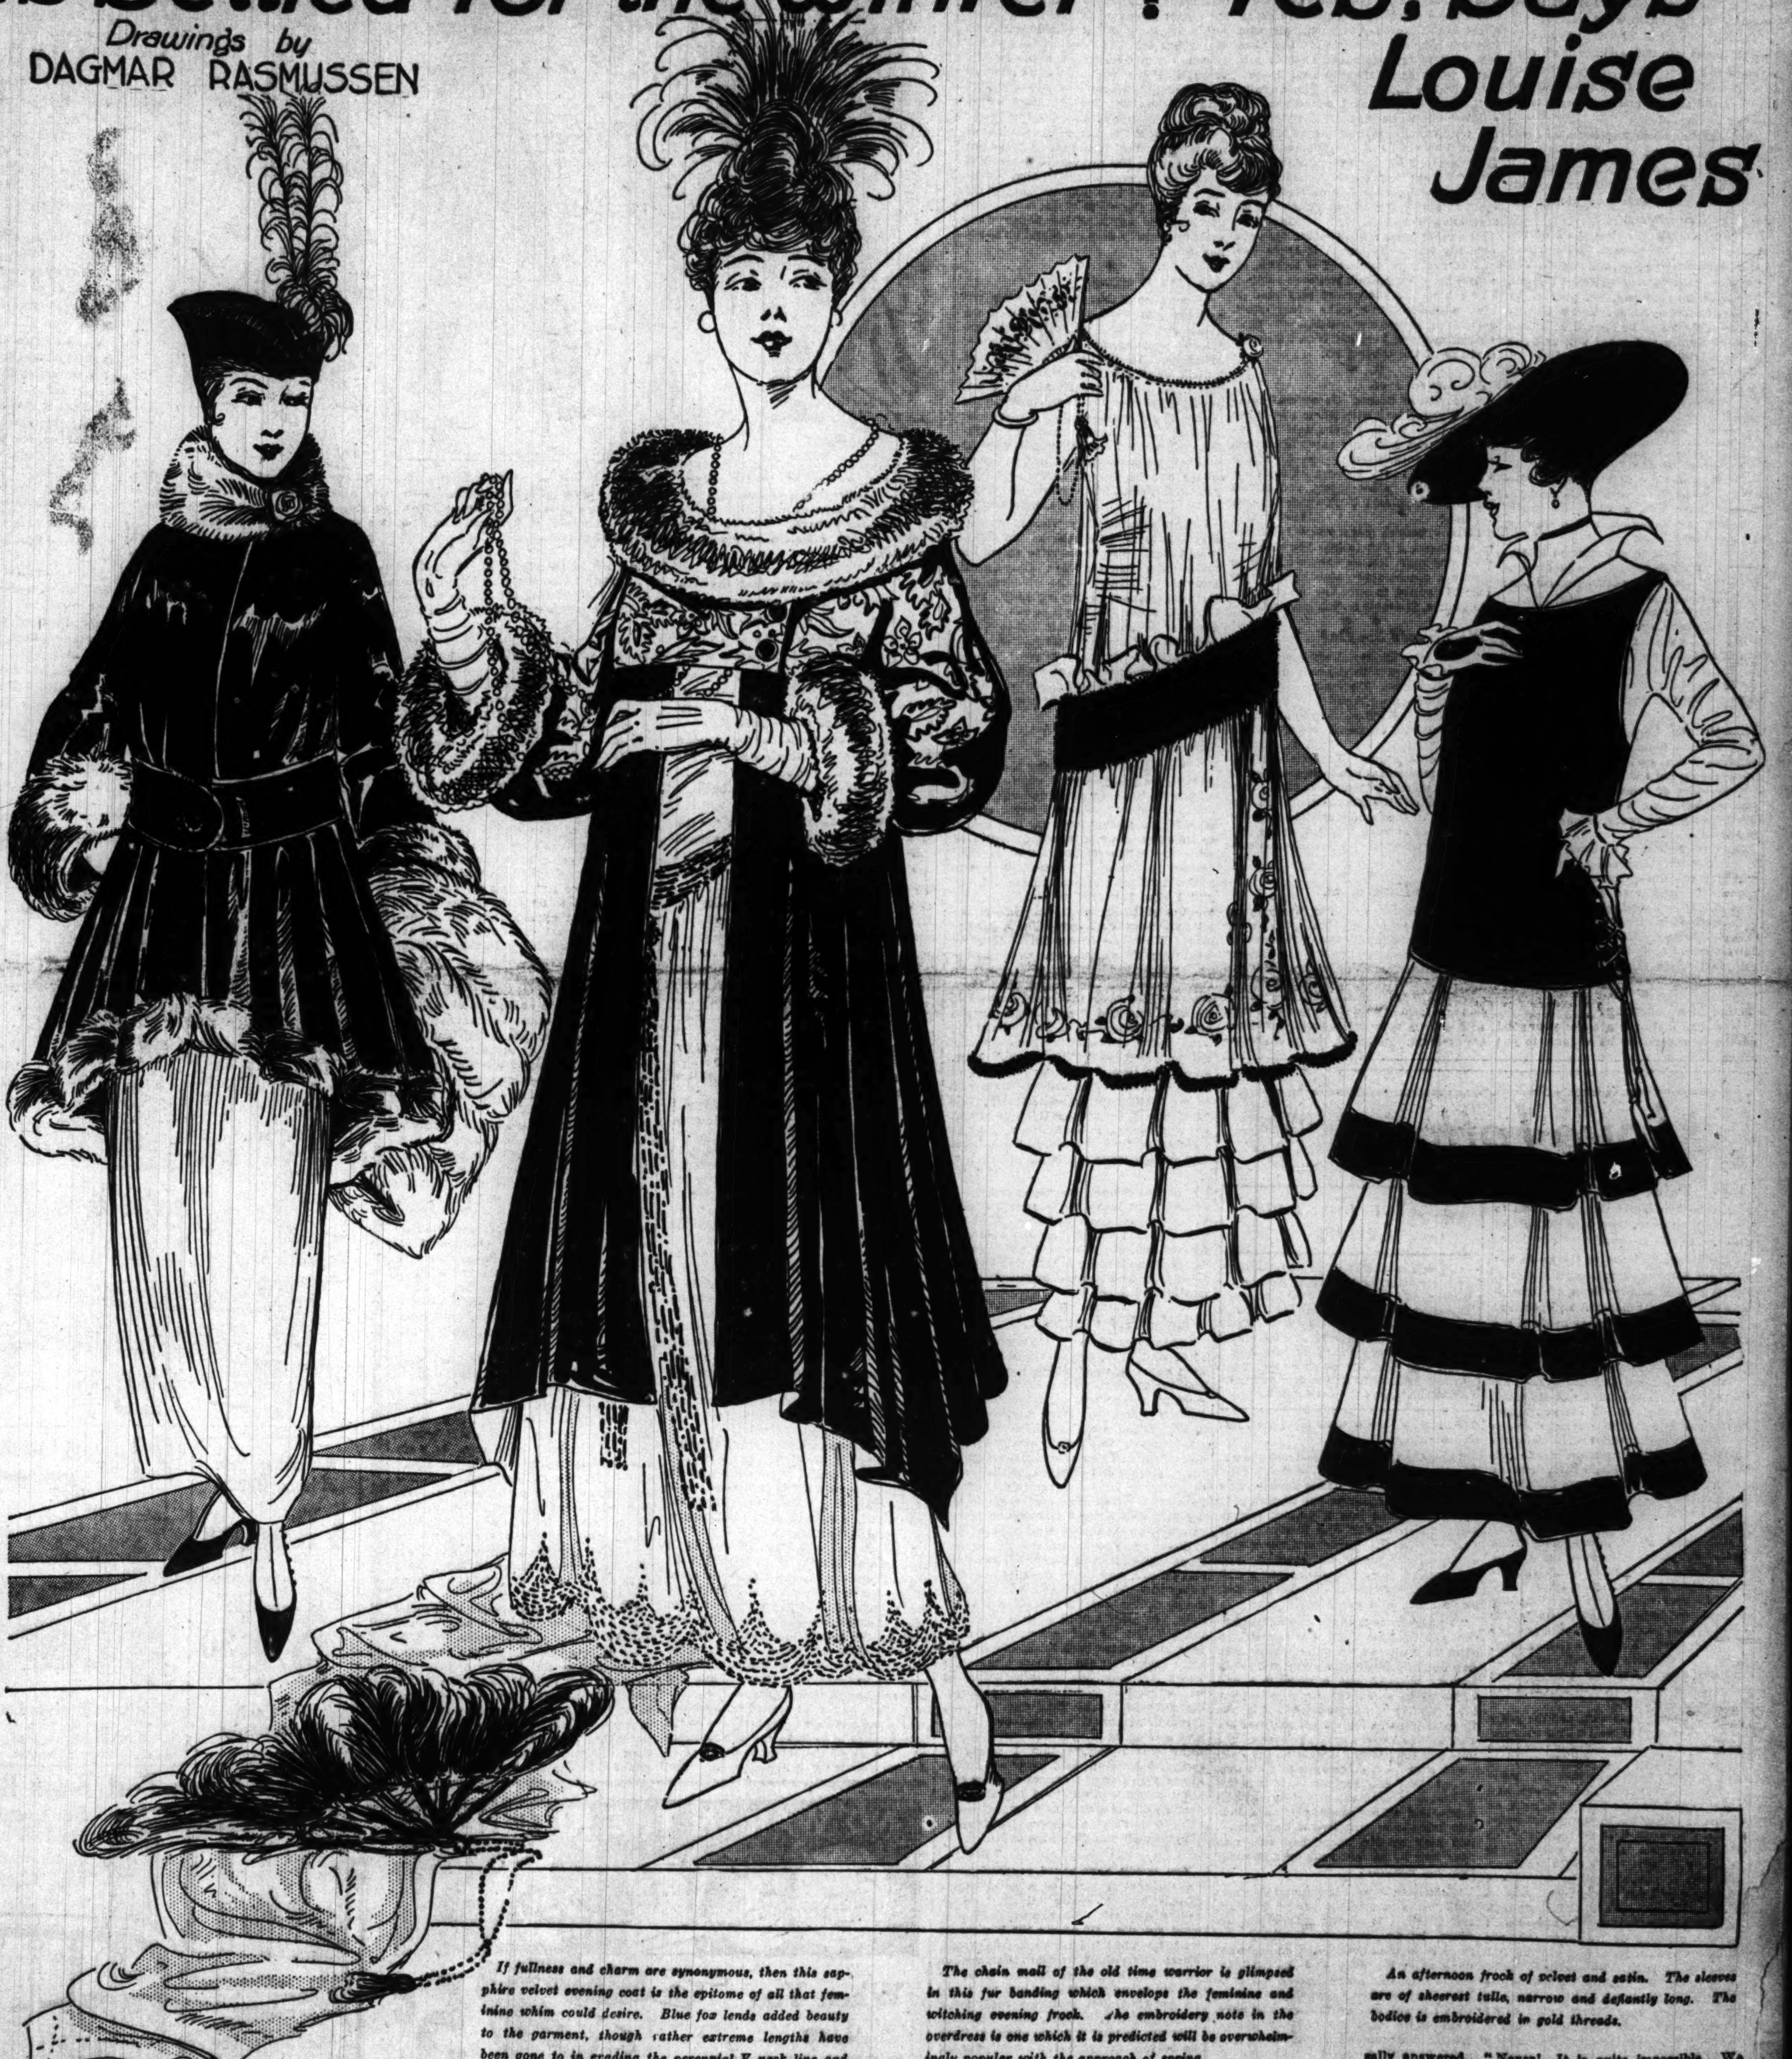
Are Styles Settled for the Winter? Yes, Says Louise James

Drawings by
DAGMAR RASMUSSEN

All sartorial jeremiads to the contrary, fashions are settled for the winter. Our Lady of Dress is taking a bit of long needed rest before she absorbs herself, body and soul, in the problems of spring. Where the spring fashions will come from no one can state definitely. But all opinions seem to be that Paris will create them and launch them the same as she has done in the years that have gone. They may not be so abundant, they may not be so varied, but they will be Parisian and as such will be accepted.



A caracul coat in which are glimpsed many of the latest fashion notes. The tendency to shorten is evident as well as the present reckless indulgence in all full effects. The quaint trimming in 1830 style is carried out in skunk fur.

If fullness and charm are synonymous, then this sapphire velvet evening coat is the epitome of all that feminine whim could desire. Blue fox lends added beauty to the garment, though rather extreme lengths have been gone to in evading the perennial V neck line and giving a novel touch to the whole effect.

The chain mail of the old time warrior is glimpsed in this fur banding which envelops the feminine and witching evening frock. The embroidery note in the overdress is one which it is predicted will be overwhelmingly popular with the approach of spring.

An afternoon frock of velvet and satin. The sleeves are of sheerest tulle, narrow and defiantly long. The bodice is embroidered in gold threads.

OUT of chaos comes order at last, I'm glad to say. Fashions are settled for the winter. There is not the slightest danger of any radical change along any particular sartorial line. Women may take a long breath and indulge themselves in a period of mental calm. Was ever news more welcome? Was ever a respite more warranted? Was ever a respite more needed? After all the distracting confusion of the early fall months and in the face of all the uncertainty of the coming spring ones this present stretch of established quiet should surely be appreciated to the full.

The general opinion among leading dressmakers, designers, and buyers here is to the effect that fashions for the winter are definitely settled. No radical changes are anticipated. To be sure, there will be a few innovations, but all of minor importance, accessories rather than essentials. That is all.

Madame Ripley, speaking along this line said to me quite frankly: "There are to be no startling changes in the fashion world as far as the winter styles are concerned. What will come with the spring cannot be so definitely stated. Now, though, all styles are established. Of course, there will be developments. Nothing stands still. The full skirt will grow fuller. It can hardly grow shorter. The tendency to dispense with trains is so marked that few evening dresses possess them any more. The explanation of this is that the great majority of social functions demand dancing and the long train is a burden not to be borne."

Concerning this same full skirt problem I might mention here that if you have had your winter suit made up with a comparatively narrow skirt there is no reason to be unduly alarmed. There is no denying the fact that skirts are to get fuller every month from now on, but fashion seldom progresses in leaps and bounds and it will be well on in the spring before there is any spectacular fullness to the average skirt. The same will hold true in the case of the short coat. That will be a note of spring and as such will doubtless achieve a large degree of popularity.

I have just received an interesting letter from Durante Bros., Paris, in which the question of spring styles is taken up.

"We can assure you that by Dec. 1 we will be displaying our usual importations for spring and also the early delivery of January lingerie," they write. "After having seen the leading Parisian couturiers we conclude that the prevailing fashion for spring will be longer tuniques which drape tight at the hips and run wide and wavy three and one-half to four yards at the bottom. The skirt protrudes slightly three to four inches and is worn extremely short to the ankle. Tuniques are to be much embroidered.

"Bodices, tight fitting and buttoned high up with the high collar, are to be a new feature. Lace flouncings and light weight filet are to be employed, while silver and gold, especially the light weight silver, are still much in favor."

Madame Caroline of this city had much to say on the same subject. Concerning the styles for the winter she was of the same opinion as the many others whom I interviewed on the matter. All women may rest easy on this subject. Their winter wardrobe need bother them no longer. As for the spring she had only conjecture. Beyond that no one has more.

"I think," she says, "that by spring the effect of the war on fashions will be a noticeable thing. I feel sure that fashions will be less frivolous and less immodest. Also I am convinced that higher class styles from a moral and ethical standpoint will be created.

"Should the time arrive in the near future when Paris models will be no longer available, I fear that they will be greatly missed, for American fashions have been dependent too long on Paris tendencies and on French impetus to change. However, so far no such dearth is in sight. Irrespective of whether the war will last into the spring season there will come from Paris the cues for the spring creations. Already several houses have promised to have shipments here for around Christmas, and there is every probability that more will continue to respond.

"I do not think, though, that this is the time for us to rack our brains and search diligently for whatever bit of the creative spark there is in us. Our semiannual trips to Paris for the new fashions have been splendid schooling. Since we have known so well how to select the best styles of that city we should be ready to apply our cleverness at adaptation to the present situation."

Madame Marguerite disclaims any influence so far on fashions from the war. She admits that as far as the winter styles are concerned they are quite settled, but she says that little is definitely known about the spring importations. She is continuing to get her designs from Paris. They are not coming in, of course, with their customary profusion, but they are far from a negligible quantity. Several of the leading department stores here are getting in models from Paris right along. The women in Paris are doing the work, it is said.

It is interesting to note how the question, "Will American fashions for American women crowd out the supremacy of the French fashions?" is almost universally answered. "Never! It is quite impossible. We are clever here. We do much of our own creating, but we can never equal the French, nor do our patrons want us to equal them. The French label is an open sesame to the approval of the average rich American. It would take a long process of education to change this viewpoint. It may be wrong. It may be silly. It may and is detrimental to the encouragement and progress of home industry, but it is a state of affairs which exists now, as much as in the past."

Why such fidelity on the part of American designers to the French supremacy, one cannot help wondering. But as long as it exists, neither can one help submitting, and regarding the French model as something superior in point of style to the American model.

Doris Blake Says

"The chrysanthemum is November's flower; the topaz November's birthstone."

Articles by Doris Blake and her replies to letters appear every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Have you a perplexing love affair? Do you need the advice of a sympathetic, capable woman? Write to Doris Blake, care CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

HAVE you a November birthday? If so you may like to know a little about the month itself.

November gets its name from "Novem," the Latin word for nine. It was called by the old Saxons the "Wind-Monath" (Wind Month). Another name given by them to November was "Blot-Monath," or sacrifice month, from the custom of preparing cattle for their winter supplies.

Sagittarius is the zodiacal sign for November. It means the Archer and is derived from the Latin word Sagitta (arrow) and is typical of the sudden cold which shoots into the earth, causing vegetation to cease. The sun is in the constellation Sagittarius from the 22d to the 30th of the month, and in Scorpio from the 1st to the 22d.

Both signs influence the November born.

Many good traits are showered upon November children. Scorpio bestows thrift, ambition, mental and physical vitality, and great executive ability, according to the oracles.

If born during the last half of the month you will be earnest, fearless, generous, sympathetic, just, and honest. You will be impulsive and quick of temper, and liable to extremes, but your anger will be of short duration. You will make quick decisions and be blessed with keen sense of humor and great wit, and you will be a bright conversationalist.

November birthstone is the topaz, meaning fidelity and friendship. Have you ever heard the little verse about the topaz?

Who first comes to this world below
With dread November's fog and snow
Should prize the Topaz's amber hue,
Emblem of friends and lovers true.

The November flower is the chrysanthemum. To wear a red or pink chrysanthemum signifies love, a white one truth, a yellow one dejection, and a Chinese variety cheerfulness.

It is quite safe to get married in November, although most brides prefer sunny skies. Here is an encouraging couplet:

Married in veils of November mist,
Dame Fortune your wedding ring has kissed.

This prophecy, so says the oracles, then will come to pass if you are married on any of November's lucky days. They are the 5th, 11th, 13th, 22d, and 25th. There are five unlucky days in November. The days are the 15th, 20th, 29th, and 30th.

Stranger and Lonely.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been in Chicago just a few weeks. I haven't got any friends here, but I would like to make the acquaintance of some nice boy who is a stranger here, too. I am 22, have been in this country nine years. Please help me if you can. D. D."

There is a Lonesome club under the auspices of Trinity Episcopal church, which will give you the opportunity of getting acquainted with nice young men and women. If you will write to the Rev. John McGann in care of Trinity Episcopal church, Twenty-sixth street and Michigan avenue, he will be happy to give you full particulars about the club and to welcome you into its fellowship.

What Shall She Say?

Dear Miss Blake: Have read your good advice to others, so have come to you for some. I am invited to a hayrack party next Saturday by a man and, as I have not kept company with very many, I am a bit awkward about manners. Would like to know what to say when he takes me home.' Hoping to hear from you this week in THE TRIBUNE. LUCINDA.

There is no necessity in your saying anything in particular. Let the young man do the talking. He will undoubtedly enjoy himself better and it will be much easier for you. If there is one thing a man likes to do it is to talk to an interested listener.

A Popular College Boy.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am in the fourth year of college, and love a boy friend who is in my class. He is very good looking, and so many of the girls are crazy about him. There is one certain girl who just got acquainted with him, but likes him, and is trying to get another girl friend to fix up a date with him. Do you think that is right? I like him awfully well, but I don't think I would ever get another girl to do that. If he didn't like me well enough to ask me of his own accord I would let it go. Wouldn't you? He has asked me for several dates, and lately I have had to refuse under the circumstances. Now I think he thinks I don't like him any more. How can I let him know I do? GRACE."

Has there been a good reason for your refusing his invitations? If there has and if you have explained it to him, of course he will not think you have stopped liking him. If you are so very fond of him, why don't you make every effort possible to accept his invitations? That will undoubtedly keep him from the machinations of the other girls.

He Kissed Her.

"Dear Miss Blake: On several occasions a young man with whom I work has kissed me. While I have told him repeatedly that I do not approve of such actions, he doesn't seem to pay any attention to what I say. I am sure I don't encourage him. What would you advise me to tell him, as I don't think he cares for me? ANXIOUS."

I cannot believe that if you were sincere in not wanting him to kiss you he would do it anyway. Refuse absolutely. If he does not accept your refusal as final, report his action to some one in authority. He isn't a desirable friend, anyway.

What Should She Do?

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl and am in love with a young man four years my senior. He used to come and meet me once a week and now he does not come at all. What would you advise me to do, call him on the phone or write to him? T. D. H. G."

Don't do anything. Forget about him. When a man treats you so discourteously he is not worthy of your friendship. You are a foolish little girl to give your heart to one who shows so plainly he does not want it. I'm sure you'll meet another man soon who will appreciate your devotion.

Broke the Engagement.

"Dear Miss Blake: For five years a successful doctor called on a fine young woman of good family two or three evenings every week and during this time he has been the family physician. For the last three years they were engaged to be married. Through the influence of the doctor's father, who is a crusty old man with a little money, the doctor broke the engagement. Although the young woman tries not to show it, the doctor's action has altered her life, and has very nearly broken her heart. Granting the above facts, do you believe the young woman and her family may with good taste still retain him as their family doctor? The young lady and her entire family, with one exception claim the above facts make no difference, and declare that professionally they shall continue to consult the doctor whenever necessary. The dissenting member of the family holds the doctor has acted as a cad, and the young woman in self-respect, and the family, through loyalty to her, should end all professional relations and visits to or from the doctor. What is right in the matter? A PERPLEXED SISTER."

I agree with the dissenting member of the family. The doctor surely acted like a cad, and he has no right to the respect of the family, even professionally. I cannot understand how you can subject the poor girl to the visits of the man. Her life must be anything but happy when even her family does not stand by her in her trouble.

He Isn't Working.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl and am considered good looking. I am going with a friend, but really don't care for his company, as he seems to be quiet in talking. He lies to me at times, and I don't think I would care for him, nor do I think I could trust him. I see this young man every day, as he stands on the corner and I work nearby. I also must tell you that this young man isn't working, and when I ask the reason, why, he tells me his parents want him to attend college and he doesn't care to go. Do you think I could learn to love this man? "HEARTBROKEN."

You are sensible in not wishing to have anything to do with such an unreliable young man. Simply refuse to accept his invitations. You might do the boy a great kindness by telling him the exact reasons for your refusal of his company. Perhaps you would like him if he would go to work or go to school and try to make something of himself. He has no right to expect any girl to be happy to accept his attentions when he wastes his time. I do not think that you could ever learn to love a man who is lazy and this boy apparently is.

She Doesn't Answer.

"Dear Miss Blake: During the time I went to grammar school I was deeply infatuated with a girl of my own age. Some called it puppy love, but I never said a word. She reciprocated my love and I called at her house and got quite intimate with the whole family. The mother seemed to like me real well. I graduated a half year before the girl did, but still I saw her over to her house, and seemingly things went on as before. At all our meetings I acted like a gentleman. When she graduated I naturally went up to the graduation. In the morning I helped her with her recitations. In the afternoon, after the graduation, we were walking down the street, a crowd of us, when I walked up and took her by the arm. She objected and said, 'I am not lacking for company.' I being equally hot tempered, said, 'Very well.' Now, since this time I have written several times but received no answer. I am only 18 now, but nevertheless consider this carefully. I am always thinking of her. If I saw her in a public place, would it be right to go up and speak to her without first having some recognition? "H. E. L."

If chance should throw you together I see no harm whatever in your going up to the girl and speaking to her. If I were you I should call on her and apologize for my actions. She will undoubtedly say that she is sorry for the way she has acted, too, and you will be friends again as you used to be.

They're Not Engaged.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young man of 22 and have been keeping company with a girl two and a half years my junior for about three years. I have been working away from my home town for quite a while, but made regular visits home. When away she goes out with other fellows, but I don't mind that, as I don't happen to be of a jealous disposition. We are not engaged, neither of us believing in long engagements, but we have often talked of getting married. On my last visit home a young man of my own age, an old school chum of hers from a distant city, also was visiting at her home. The girl and I went out as usual, and on our way home she said she was going to be real mean and send me right home, as she was very tired. I said all right, but after having gone a short distance I found I had forgotten my raincoat and started back for it. On returning I found this young man, although it was a late hour, had not retired, but had waited for her. They had not heard me, but I could see all that was going on through the glass door. I watched a while and was going in, but was afraid something would happen that I would be sorry for later on, as I know when I get angry I do things I cannot account for. Did I do wrong in watchin? I love the girl dearly and she always said I was the only one and that all the rest were just friends. What would you advise me to do? "R. B."

You would have saved yourself much unhappiness if you had gone in immediately, but since you did not I see no reason why you should be worried about what you did. Of course the boy would wait up until his hostess came home. There was nothing wrong in that, neither was it anything more than courteous for her to sit up and talk to him until you returned. Unless you saw them doing something which makes you think that they are in love with one another I see no reason why you should feel yourself mistreated.

To an Old Lover.

The best love letter from a woman to a man is submitted by Mrs. W. R. of Fulton, Mo., as follows:

"My Dear: The fire in the grate has gone out and the room is quiet and cold. It is 3 o'clock, and the dawn of my wedding day is not far distant. My eyes have not closed during the weary hours of the night; yet, sitting in the pallid moonlight, unconscious of time or space, I have been 'dreaming dreams and seeing visions.'

"Yesterday I was 40, but tonight I am only 19, back in the old university town, with you beside me. I see you again, handsome, self-confident, fascinating, as I saw you that Christmas night when you came to meet the 'prettiest girl in college?' With kaleidoscopic rapidity scene follows scene. Now you are beside me, beneath the old elms of the campus; now poring over some French lesson or over the pages of some charming romance of fact or fiction; again, in the mazes of the dance we glide, or across the college classroom our eyes meet in a swift acknowledgment of unspoken love.

"That year was but one glorious day of unalloyed happiness. But, the tender parting over, I have never heard another word from you. Wherein was I wanting, my dear? Wherein did I fail you? Over and over again has my aching heart asked these questions, and as often has the answer eluded me.

"I am weary, heartsick, and the years have been long, for I realize I have missed the prize of life—love, which is 'the chief possession within our imagination.' I have striven against the love that overwhelms me, for Pride has arisen and said, 'Your love has been flung aside as a common thing,' but the campaign seems hopeless because it is an endless series of battlegrounds, a campaign which is not likely to have any end till death.

"I hear of you, an eminent surgeon in a distant city. Does, perchance, a thought of the 'little sweetheart' of college days flit occasionally through your busy brain? Never a morning do I awaken that my first conscious thought is not of you. But tomorrow I give my life to a man I honor among men. To him and his motherless children I henceforth dedicate the best that is within me. Never again will I willingly permit my thoughts to wander to you, but may the Giver of all good gifts be abundantly gracious to you, prosper and bless you through all the years of your useful life."

His Reel Girl.

A man's letter to a woman comes from S. L. Davies, 743 Greenwood avenue, Portland, Ore.:

"Dear: I haven't even the right to say dear friend to you. I won't write any salutation at all—yes, I will—I'll write what I am always thinking in my heart any way: 'Dear little girl.' You have never seen me, but I have seen you every night that I could, for a whole year. I have drawn pictures of you in the margins of everything at the office, I have dreamed you into all sorts of dreams, and I was always in all of the dreams, too, of course. That is the only place where I ever will be with you, I am afraid. But I won't believe it, I won't! That is why I am writing this letter, just on the chance.

"You don't know what you mean to me. I know you've heard men say that before, but this is different. Ever since I dug a dime out of my pocket one night a year ago and walked into a moving picture show on Broadway and then suddenly saw you on the screen and never saw anything else the whole evening, you have meant more to me than just a girl, though you are the most wonderful girl, as just girl, that ever lived!

"You are more than that to me, though. Can you imagine what it is like to be a clerk in a downtown office, living each day out in just the same way, with only Sunday baseball and a novel in a hall bedroom to stand for romance in your life? Can you imagine what it is like to have lived in New York all your life and not to know anything more of the outdoors than taking a walk on the Palisades over on the Jersey side once in a while? Can you imagine what it is like to dream of the west, and the great outdoors, and of horseback rides and hills and trees—you who live in California—and play cowgirl parts, and ride with your hair flying and your eyes shining? Can you imagine?

"You are the west to me, and the great outdoors, and adventure, and freedom, and life! It is knowing that you are there, happy, outdoors, laughing and free, it is that that keeps me up when days seem too gray and the office too terrible to stand any longer. It is on those nights when I come home wishing that I might just go to sleep and never wake again that the memory of your flowing hair and your smile makes me smile in spite of myself.

"I am saving a pitiful little fund to go west with some day, and I am coming to California, and I am going to find you, and just see you once, only once—but that's only a dream, too. But if it should come true—if it should——

"This is not the first letter that I have written to you; I have written many letters and torn them up, just as I shall tear this one up. You will never see it. What right have I to think that you would even care to? I shall kiss it and seal it, just as if I were really going to mail it to you—and then—but, why not? Dare I? I will! I am going to send it to you, I am going to mail it, even though you should not read it through.

"Good-by—I must take it and drop it in the mail box quickly before my courage gives out.

"With all my love."

Dance frock of printed taffetas. The sleeves are of chiffon. Ruffles on the skirt are scalloped according to the present fashion.

Reception frock of satin with girdle of metal brocade in gold effect. Flaring tulle collar at the nape of neck.

TO one disputes the fact that the slender silhouette prevalent for so long made every woman look young. That is, she looked young from her neck to her heels, which is at least three-fourths of the battle. Nor is there any more denying that the full skirt adds years to the wearer with every inch that is added to her bulk.

There is only one way so far that woman has been able to outwit inconsiderate fashion this fall, for she was inconsiderate when she insisted that skirts should grow full and then still fuller, without regard for the size of the woman nor the number of her years. Skirts were made shorter, and in that way the youthful note has been kept, to a certain extent, anyway.

Now we have for the most part full skirts and short ones. This applies to street and house frocks, and when evening gowns and dance frocks are concerned the same holds true, with the exception that in the case of the dance frock much is added in the way of fluttering shoulder draperies, drifting scarves, floating, wavering tunics. Everywhere is glimpsed the "life note," as the artist would say, the catchy, quivering, magnetic effects which give the most effective touches to the evening toilet.

One should go about this new short full skirt vogue a bit cautiously, however. It is just as dangerous as it is stylish, and so far American women have shied off from it in its extremest form. Since all signs point to the fact that it is going to be much more stylish before it is less so, every woman might just as well take a little time off and consider the problem.

In the first place it is not necessary to have the fullness at the hips. This is too hard on the average figure to make it really tolerable. All kinds of subterfuges may be indulged to confine it in bands and beneath yokes, letting it flare out abruptly just before the knees are reached. If you do not care for yokes, box plaits running from the waist to the hem are possible, or again I have seen weird splashes of oriental embroidery applied over the hips and dropping some fifteen inches below the waist.

One of the secrets of adding to the attractiveness of the short skirt is to have the hem irregular. It does not need to dip in the front and the back as so many of the English and the French skirts do, but there is a certain charm in lifting it up a little at the sides.

Another noticeable fashion feature in the average evening frock is that it inclines decidedly toward sloveliness shrdl clines decidedly towards sleevelessness. Since Paris started the vogue for them some months ago their popularity has been on the steady increase. If one insists on some pretense at arm covering then the vaguest bit of tulle and chiffon may be brought into play. While the average bodice is low necked, the décolleté effect is much lessened from what it was some time ago. In fact, one of the latest notes is to have the flaring collar at the neck of the tango dance frock as I have illustrated in the drawing. And Dame Fashion puts forth as her excuse for having shortened the skirts in such shocking fashion that she has lifted the neck of the bodice even to the tips of the ears.

Silver and gold run lace is to be much worn this winter on party frocks, and the woman who does not wish to go to the expense of having a whole tunic or deep ruffle of this metal lace can at least wear a touch of it somewhere or other on her gown. For instance, she can wear a ruffle of it at the back of her neck, or she may inaugurate it as shoulder straps to hold up her bodice. These same shoulder straps may be edged with fur, for fur is just as popular, if not more so, this season than it was last year.

Fur girdles are one of the latest fashion whims for the sheerest and most filmy of evening frocks. Sometimes this girdle drops so low over the hips that one is in constant terror lest it fall off, for at no point must there be a suggestion that it is fastened on by any artificial means. The wearer must carry it off much as though it were the hoop of a barrel which fitted her miraculously.

Everywhere are scallops seen on the dance frocks. Several months hence they may be so common as to be no longer popular, but they have not reached that stage at present. Scallops are a particularly old fashioned and at the same time particularly youthful form of trimming, and in their latest form they are seen edged with fur on the tunics and overskirts of the flimsiest dance gowns.

Spangles, both opalescent and jet effects, are especially liked this season, and they are inaugurated in the flouncings, bands, ruffles, and tassels which adorn the dressier frocks. All beaded and all spangled gowns are modish. Crystal beads in net also are worn. The same leaning towards the spangled effects in birds and other ornaments is seen in the millinery field. Fur trimming and metal flowers combine on turbans and large hats alike. Some of the new flowers show the most adorable fur petals and fur centers, while all variety of fur bandings, fur loops, fur tassels, and rabbits' ears of fur are much in evidence.

To return to the subject of dance frocks, there is no denying that while full skirts are in the majority, the long loved tunic has not been completely routed. It may be in retreat—indeed, it has been in retreat for some time—but it is still figuring more or less inconspicuously. In many cases, while the most of it has disappeared, a tiny remainder is glimpsed. For instance, on one frock of charmeuse the skirt was fulled slightly about the hips and in the back hung a three-quarter length piece which looked for all the world like a chafing dish apron. I have seen this same apron effect dropped in the front in the same way, and again I have seen it dropped on the side.

Among the dress goods for the simpler and less dressy frocks there are many novelty weaves popular which are of the peau de soie variety. At the beginning of the season the French dressmakers showed every inclination to take up this particular material, and this fact, perhaps, went far to popularize it in this country. Then, too, there are silks of the ribbed sort which are semi-soft, and then this same softness is artificially stiffened by the introduction of cross over ribs. This kind of material gives a somewhat distended effect to the full tunics and full skirts.

The general liking which is prevailing for this stiffer kind of weave has had a tendency to further the solidarity of the taffetas position from a fashion standpoint. Taffetas lend themselves peculiarly well to the now fashionable box plaits, full tunics, and round skirts, and for this reason, if no other, they are being more widely used than ever in plain colors and weaves with silk embroidered figures and also in the warp prints.

Something to Do Evenings.

SOME time ago I met a girl I had not seen in a long time, and when I remarked that she did not appear to be in good spirits, she said she was glad I spoke of it, as it gave her a chance to tell someone how discontented she was with herself.

"I am tired of working all day," she said, "and going home at night, eating my dinner, reading for a little while, and then going to bed. Except for going to the theater or to a party occasionally, I do not go in much for society, and I feel that I ought to do something with my evenings."

"Why not go to school two or three evenings a week and take up some course that you think would interest you?" I suggested. "There are any number of subjects you could study. For instance, you could take up advanced English, a foreign language, music, art, elocution, domestic science."

I was pleased to note that my suggestion seemed to have impressed my friend and asked her to let me know what she decided to do.

A day or two ago my friend called me up and told me that she immediately acted upon my suggestion and is now attending a night school studying German. She said she finds it rather difficult, but she is intensely interested in it. In fact, in her enthusiasm she has induced two of her friends to study with her and is trying to get others to join the class. She also added that since she has given up two nights a week to study she is glad to have some free evenings so that she can stay at home and go to bed as early as she pleases.

Night study, of course, does not appeal to all business girls. There are many girls who would not be interested at all, and there are others who do not feel as though they can afford to put any extra strain upon their eyes.

The girl who does not care to study and finds some of her evenings hang heavily on her hands would do well to join a gymnasium class. There are few business girls who take enough exercise. The girl who takes exercises systematically, under the direction of a trained instructor, if only one evening a week, finds that she is not only benefiting by it but that she gets a good deal of enjoyment out of her evening.

Some girls I know who could not find a gymnasium convenient to their homes last year started a walking club. They walked for an hour and a half every Monday and Thursday evening last fall and winter. The benefit the members of this club derive from their little jaunts is so apparent that they have more applications for memberships than they care to accept, as they do not wish to make the club too large.

By far the most popular and most enjoyable form of exercise is dancing, and the girl who does not care for more strenuous exercise will find it an easy matter to form a dancing class among her friends to meet one evening a week during the winter. There are not many girls who will refuse to join a class to "study" the new dances, and it is pretty safe to prophesy that the members of the dancing class will spend most of their free evenings practicing the new steps in the privacy of their own rooms.

"Dear Miss King: I am a business girl, just starting out on my career, and I have had the remarkable luck of two raises in pay in the ten months since I have been occupied. My salary is now $15 per week. All would be well if I could settle with my own conscience and my mother just what per cent of this money I should give at home. My parents are not poor, but I must be self-supporting, and it is necessary for me to pay for my board, although my room would always be at my disposal while my parents live. They, however, pay rent for the apartment and I feel that I want to be entirely independent, so that they may have every luxury possible. My expenses for lunch and car fare amount to about $2.50 per week. What proportion of the remainder do you think it would be fair for me to give at home each week? As I said before, I wish to do the fair thing and be independent. M. V."

If your mother does not feel like naming a certain sum for you to pay her each week for your board I would suggest that you give her as much as you feel you can afford to. Probably $5 a week would be a fair amount. Since your expenses for lunch and car fare are $2.50 a week, giving your mother $5 would leave you $7.50, just half of your salary, for your clothes and other expenses that you might have.

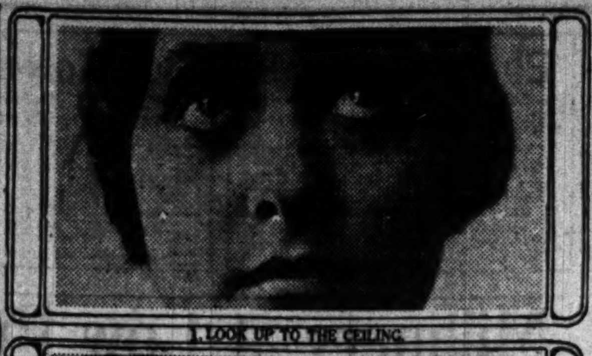
KEEP YOUR EYES YOUNG AND BRIGHT

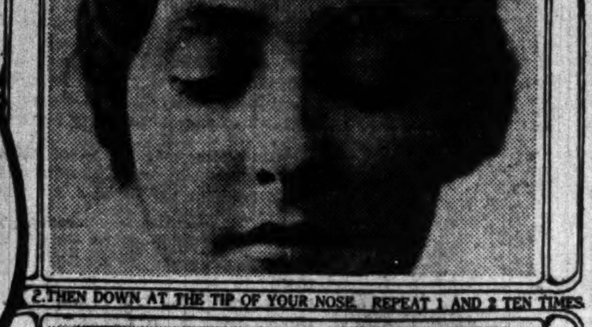
Says LILLIAN RUSSELL

Practice the following simple eye exercises every day and you'll give strength to your eye muscles and improve the sight and brilliancy of your eyes.

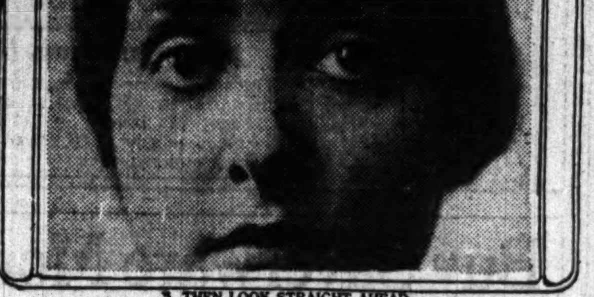
THE VEIL THAT DAMAGES EYESIGHT
Photos by Matzene



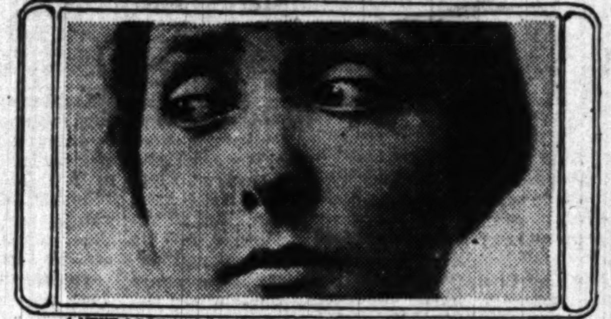
1. LOOK UP TO THE CEILING.



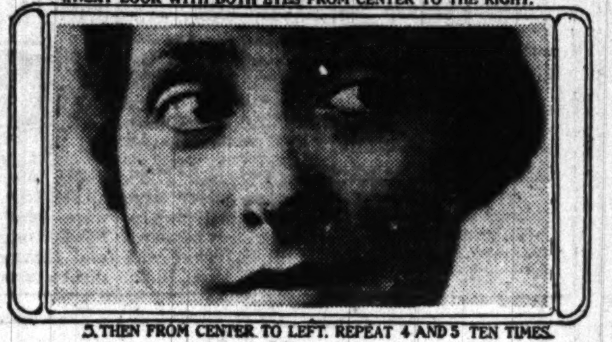
2. THEN DOWN AT THE TIP OF YOUR NOSE. REPEAT 1 AND 2 TEN TIMES.



3. THEN LOOK STRAIGHT AHEAD.



4. NEXT LOOK WITH BOTH EYES FROM CENTER TO THE RIGHT.



5. THEN FROM CENTER TO LEFT. REPEAT 4 AND 5 TEN TIMES.

[Copyright: 1914: By The Tribune Company.]

WE hear so much about old eyes—"So-and-So has old looking eyes" or "So-and-So has bright, young looking eyes"—and some people are cruel enough to say that the bright, young looking eyes are an indication of ignorance. That is not true. Rather is it an indication of intelligent consideration for the eyes. Tired, sunken eyes are signs of neglect, and nine-tenths of the people in this world neglect to care for their eyes. They read in poorly lighted rooms, they rub their eyes with soiled fingers, and rarely wash the eyes.

I have had people ask me how to make their eyes look fresh and young, and after telling them carefully what to do they would exclaim: "O, I wouldn't take the time to do that."

Our eyes are the most necessary of all of our faculties, and ordinary common sense ought to teach us how to care for them. They should be exercised every day to give strength to the muscles. It takes but a few moments. Look up to the ceiling, then look down at the tip of the nose with both eyes at the same time, repeating the exercise ten times. Look straight ahead, then look with both eyes around to the right, from center to right, ten times. Then from center to left ten times. That is all. It is simple, but such eye exercise will give strength to the eye muscles and improve the sight and brilliancy of the eyes.

Cleanliness also is necessary to keep the eyes young. An eye cup should be used night and morning. No medicine is necessary, simple warm water is sufficient to wash out the dust and particles that collect inside the eyelid.

Reading under a poor light causes more eye troubles than any other thing people are careless enough to do, and persons who read themselves to sleep always awake with puffy eyes.

It requires but a little time, thought, and attention to keep the eyes young and bright. Years have nothing to do with fading eyes. There are many old people who have never required glasses and whose eyes are bright and beautiful. Strong lights are injurious to the eyesight, and dim lights are fatal. The old fashioned candle light was the best ever known for resting the eyes. Hundreds of them would never cause a glare. They were always soft and mild upon the optic nerves. Today we have too much light and generally all in one part of a room. If rooms were evenly lighted all around the eye would never feel the glare, but when the light is all in one place either one eye or the other suffers.

When you read or sew sit with your back toward the light and so that the light falls over the left shoulder. If you are reading hold your book or paper nearly on a level with your eyes and at a distance of about twelve inches from your eyes. When you sew hold the goods you are working on at least twelve inches from the eyes. Sewing on black goods by artificial light should be absolutely forbidden. Reading in a recumbent position is a pernicious habit and it is especially injurious when convalescing from an illness or when tired, and reading in moving vehicles or trains is injurious to all eyes.

The wearing of veils of any kind is not good for the vision, but the thick and dotted veils are most dangerous. If you insist on wearing a veil, as some women always will, let it be a veil with a single mesh, in which dots (if dots are insisted upon) are so far apart that none shall come over the eyes.

There are some colors that rest the eyes to look at. Dark greens and browns are most restful. Reds, orange, and light greens cause the eyes to smart if gazed at for any length of time.

IF YOU WOULD HAVE OLD, SUNKEN AND TIRED EYES—

Read in a poorly lighted room!

Read on trains and street cars in motion!

Never wash out the dirt that accumulates inside the eyelids!

Wear veils with "binding" dots and patterns!

Sew by a poor light and sew on black goods by artificial light!

BUT IF YOU WOULD HAVE YOUNG, BRIGHT AND HAPPY EYES—

Read with your back toward the light so that the light falls over the left shoulder!

Hold your book or paper on a level with your eyes and at a distance of about twelve inches!

Keep your eyes clean!

Practice the eye exercise illustrated here!

Staring is a disagreeable eye habit that should be discouraged in the beginning.

It is extremely rude to stare at people whether they are strangers or acquaintances. If people who have the staring habit could see themselves as others see thm they would be more careful. It is extremely embarrassing to people when they find staring eyes fixed upon them. It makes them uncomfortable. The stare suggests that some article of wearing apparel is disordered, that the hair or hat is tumbling down, or that another more serious mishap is their lot. Even people who are fond of attracting special attention become fidgety under a stare.

A person who is in the habit of staring at people in the street car, church, or other public place, will do the same over the dinner table, cards, or a cup of tea. Wherever they go they make people uncomfortable. Any habit that adversely affects others should be avoided. It is not only improper to stare at friends, but it is also impudent. You should always accord the stranger the same consideration that you would offer to a friend. The stranger of today may be the friend of tomorrow.

There are also other reasons why such a practice should be avoided. The stare mars the appearance of the whole face. The stern, set expression that accompanies it is the enemy of beauty. Notice the face of the person who is staring and all you will see is the stare. Even though the eyes are beautiful in color and size, they lose every attraction by that steadfast gaze. The whole face seems to resolve itself into a stare. The mind behind it appears to wither until it becomes a blank.

Unfortunately the person who acquires the habit of staring upon persons and material things, soon begins to stare upon imaginary figures that are created by the mind and which do not actually appear before the eye. This cultivates a blank expression that takes all life and beauty out of the face. It suggests absent mindedness. There is nothing desirable that can be acquired through the stare.

It is right to give every speaker the proper attention through the eye, but the attentive eye is not the staring eye. Attention will be properly measured as long as the mind dwells upon the subject discussed. As soon as the mind wanders from that subject the eye naturally fails to exhibit interest and staring is liable to begin. This is possibly the most disconcerting form of staring.

The eye is a wonderful organ. It is also a weapon. It clearly mirrors what is back of it, if permitted to do so. It can also be made to mar or increase the beauty of the face. It can add to the comfort or discomfort of those upon whom it falls. See that the glance of wonder or surprise is not liable to become an impudent stare.

Lillian Russell's Beauty Secrets.

R. R.: An oily skin with enlarged pores often results from indiscretions in diet or from careless bathing. Sometimes too many sweets and food too rich are at the root of the trouble. Another more frequent cause is the indifferent manner in which women attend to their ablutions. Many women do not mean to be neglectful, but for one reason or another rush through, omitting the essential care and consideration which are positively necessary when cleanliness is to be assured. Soap and water alone will not thoroughly cleanse the skin. A good cold cream must be used. Never use coarse or harsh towels on the complexion. This has a tendency to coarsen and thicken the skin. The skin on the face is more sensitive and delicate than on any other part of the body and should naturally be treated with respectful care. If you will write me again, inclosing a stamped addressed envelope, I shall be glad to send you the green soap treatment for blackheads and formula for an excellent cold cream, also the astringent lotion formula for closing enlarged pores.

BLONDY: Once a week is too often to wash the hair. Massage your scalp each night. This will make it more flexible and cause the oil to become more evenly distributed through the hair. Send me a stamped addressed envelope and I will send you a formula for tonic and a shampoo for oily hair.

B. K.: The teeth should be thoroughly cleansed in the morning with a good tooth brush, not too stiff, and a good tooth powder or paste. After each meal they should be brushed with clear water, and before retiring should be thoroughly cleansed. To bleach the teeth, brush them once a week with peroxide. If there is tartar on your teeth, go to a good dentist and have it removed. The teeth should be examined every six months to keep them in good condition. Nothing adds to one's beauty like pretty teeth, but is there anything worse than to see a pretty face with two rows of uneven, decayed teeth? Every one should have well cared for teeth; there is no excuse for not having them.

E. G. T.: Sallow skins may be made pink and white by perfect exercise and diet—just a couple of miles of walking and a milk and egg diet. Oatmeal is also good. There is seldom a real excuse for a sallow complexion if one has the desire to cure the defect. Do not eat sweet foods and do not drink tea or coffee. Raw carrots eaten with salt are good; they may also be cooked if desired. Eat plenty of green vegetables, but do not eat rich, greasy meats. It is best to leave meat entirely alone. My rules for health and beauty are: Eat just enough, drink only water, walk two or three miles a day, and sleep eight hours.

INTERESTED: The milk diet is for reducing flesh. The diet consists of three quarts of skim milk daily, one in the morning, one at noon, and one at night, taken with three quarts of mineral water, taking it hot. Walk at least five miles a day. Keey this up for thirty days. At the end of this time your complexion will be clear and you will have reduced several pounds.

A READER: Puffiness under the eyes may be caused from some internal trouble, but may also be caused from lack of sleep or eye strain. The cause of the trouble must be found and remedied before the condition can be cured. For temporary treatment, bathe the eyes with cold water, rubbing gently underneath them wtih the tips of the fingers. Be careful not to press the eyeball. Bathe the eyes each morning with a good eye wash. To increase the growth of the eyelashes apply melted vaseline each night. Be careful that you do not get it into the eyes, for oil irritates them. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelop I shall be glad to send you the formula for French eyebrow tonic.

MRS. ANNA H.: Here are a few hints which I am sure will help you make your chest higher and fill in the hollows of your neck: While taking the breathing exercises, stand on the balls of the feet and keep the knees straight. This gives greater power for inhaling. Hold the chin up and breathe in slowly. Sit erect when reading, writing, or working, with the shoulders well thrown back, and massage with olive or cocoanut oil morning and evening. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I shall send you instructions for deep breathing.

MRS. W.: Milk is the most digestible of foods if consumed in a reasonable way. A glass of milk should never be taken in one swallow. If it is it will form into a solid clot in the stomach. It should be sipped slowly and bread or crackers taken with it will greatly aid its digestion. It takes about two hours for a glass of milk to digest. If lime water is taken with the milk it is less liable to form the clots. Boiled milk is more digestible than raw milk. Eggs are almost as nutritious as meat. They are easily digested when soft boiled or poached. Toast eaten with soft boiled eggs makes them more easily digested. Chicken, fresh beef, and lamb are the most easily digested meats. Veal and pork are both difficult to digest. Steak should be broiled, as fried meats are hard to digest. Vegetables and fruits are more digestible when cooked. Butter supplies to most people the largest amount of fat they take. It is easily digested. Tea, coffee, and cocoa all retard gastric digestion, though cocoa is the most nutritious. Coffee should never be taken more than twice a day, and the amount should be limited to one cup at breakfast and one at dinner. Drinking it to excess seriously interferes with digestion, and its continuous use may lead to chronic dyspepsia and insomnia.

QUESTIONER: Of all forms of exercise for health and beauty none can supersede walking. When dressing for the walk you must remember that a skirt should be worn that gives plenty of freedom to the limbs; also a comfortable pair of high shoes, laced, with low, flat heels should be worn. The question of how long a walk should be must be left to yourself to decide. Do not walk until you are too tired to take another step. As you become more accustomed to walking you can lengthen the walking distance. Start with a half hour's walk, then increase it. From thirty to forty-five minutes regular walking every day is sufficient for most women. One important point, however, to bear in mind is that during the walk the carriage should be erect, the shoulders held back, and the head up.

MISS K. H.: The best possible remedy for a poor circulation is exercise. Get out into the open air and interested in outdoor games. Golf is splendid, so is walking. Each morning before breakfast, if you can, walk a mile or so. Walk briskly and you will come in doors with an appetite and you will feel fine after it. At night before retiring is also a good time to walk. Salt rubs are also good for a poor circulation. After bathing, take handfuls of salt and rub all over the body until the skin glows. Rinse the body with warm water, then dry, rubbing with a rough bath towel.

C. D.: Dark circles under the eyes are usually caused from some internal trouble, and, like everything else, the trouble must be found and remedied before the dark circles will go away permanently. Sometimes they are caused from lack of sleep or eye strain, sometimes from anemia, indigestion, etc. If caused from lack of sleep, that can easily be remedied. If you have some internal trouble, consult a physician in regard to it. For local treatment, bathe the eyes with a good eye wash daily. At night before retiring, fill the hollows with a good skin food, rubbing gently into the skin, but be careful you do not get any of it into your eyes. In the morning rub gently under the eyes with cold water. Send me a stamped addressed envelope and I shall send you a formula for eye wash.

HOW I REDUCED MY FLESH.

For over three years I have been giving instructions on how to reduce flesh to the women of America through the columns of The Tribune. I have recommended various exercises, dietaries and baths. Now, I want my women readers to write to me and to tell me just what they have accomplished in the way of flesh reducing. I want to know what instructions of mine you followed, how many pounds you succeeded in losing and the time it took to rid yourself of the superfluous weight. I also want to hear from women who have succeeded in reducing their flesh by measures other than those I have recommended.

Letters containing references to proprietary medicines or apparatus will not be considered.

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published. Address Lillian Russell, Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

JANE BARTON The Home Dressmaker

I AM going to tell you how to make a coat at home, the kind of coat I saw in a smart shop, which you could make for $10 or even far less. The price, of course, is determined by the material you select.

As the chief reason for making a coat is to get a better grade of cloth, do not invest in too cheap a material. The Scotch tweeds, various wool mixtures, or diagonals can be had in a nice quality from $1.50 to $2 a yard, fifty-two inches wide, and three yards should make a three-quarter top coat for a medium sized person.

Thus choosing the most expensive cloth it will cost you $6. Three yards of satin or silk at $1 a yard for lining and the other dollar for sewing silk, buttons, and a pattern will give you a handsome coat for $10. Often, too, one can get remnants of cloth and lining silk cheaper.

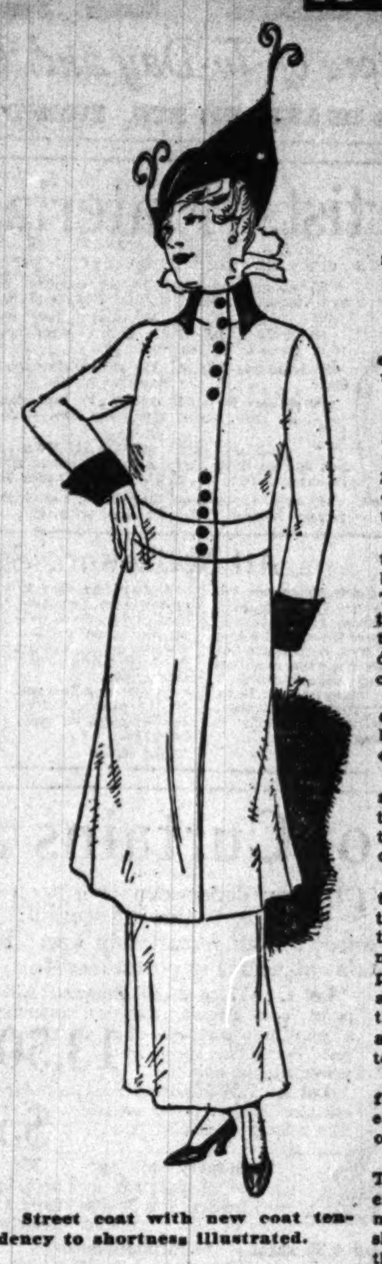
Be sure to have your cloth sponged and shrunken. This is better done in the stores, as the luster is not destroyed and will not cost you more than 25 or 30 cents; sometimes it is done for 5 cents a yard. If you wish to do your own sponging you must have a large table, an ironing blanket, and a strip of heavy unbleached muslin a yard wide and several yards long.

Put your cloth face down on the blanket, which is pinned in place to be without a wrinkle. Clip the selvedges at intervals. Wring out the strip of muslin in hot water, lay on the material, and press with a hot iron several times, then remove the muslin and press the goods itself until dry. Sponge only a small portion at a time and work carefully. Double width material should be kept folded the right side in while being sponged. For a heavy cloth it may be necessary to turn to the other side—of the fold, not inside out—and repeat.

It is well to experiment on a small piece of your material, as occasionally it changes color or shrinks badly. This should not be the case with an all wool grade.

Hold your pattern to you and note any alterations that must be made. If there are many you may have bought the wrong size and it is economy to get another pattern. If rather a novice make up the pattern cheaply in an unbleached muslin or calico; it can later be used for dusters or covering cloths.

The next step is to fit your pattern into the cloth, being sure that the nap or pile, especially in adjoining sections, runs in the same direction; otherwise by the variation in shading your coat will look as if made of two different materials. In woolen cloths the nap should run toward the bottom of the garment.



Street coat with new coat tendency to shortness illustrated.

If your coat is of a striped or plaid material the cutting is more difficult. A good plan is to fold the material and pin through both thicknesses as for a seam, then turn over on the right and note the effect. By this method it is easy to tell which stripe or figure or plaid it is better to use for the center of the front or back.

Be careful in turning not to lose the original position. In the circular tail piece of the top coat described special pains must be taken about matching any stripe, also at the shoulder seams. For this reason I should advise the amateur to select an inconspicuous mixture or a plain goods.

An exceedingly stylish coat on the latest flared lines may be made even without a pattern if it is first developed in muslin. It is one of the long waist lines that does not curve in, a deep belt, and a flaring skirt.

This coat buttons tight to the throat with a collar that may be turned up or can rool back to form revers. It is fastened with two buttons at the belt and two at the top, one being in the lap of the collar, the other in what is the rever part when turned back. The one piece coat sleeve is set in without fullness, is faced at the bottom, and trimmed on the outside with a stitched band of the cloth trimmed with two buttons on the overlap.

Only the upper part of the coat is lined, the seams of the skirt being bound with binding ribbon or bias folds of the lining. The inch or inch and a quarter hem at the bottom of the skirt is turned up with the raw edge first bound, and is hemmed down by hand or can be stitched by machine, as preferred.

As the edges of collar, fronts, skirt of coat, both sides of belt, and of the cuff band are stitched an inch from the outer edge for a finish.

Buttonholes are worked on the right side of the belt, inside the stitching, on the right rever, on the extension tab of the collar, and in the two tabs on the cuff band.

The upper part of the coat measures twenty inches from the shoulder seam to the top of the belt, allowing an inch for the seam. These two fronts which have no darts are cut on the principle of the plain tailored shirtwaist. Two tucks an inch wide are laid in each front at the shoulder seam. They are an inch and a half apart, seven inches long, and taper to nothing at the bottom.

The right front overlaps slightly to form a diagonal line, the top being slanted down about three inches from the base of the throat to form a slight angle.

The shoulder seams are six inches long. The back is entirely plain without gathers or fullness at the waist line. It should measure about fifteen inches across the shoulders and about eighteen inches from the neck to the top of the belt in the center back. These measurements will naturally be altered somewhat according to each figure.

Baste the shoulder and under arm seams, fit, taking in where necessary, but remember not to make a curved-in line at the waist.

A belt seven inches wide, finished with a half inch turned under on each side, and forty-nine inches around, is basted on top of the coat from edge to edge. The skirt of the coat is attached to the lower edge of the belt and when evenly adjusted stitch all around on the machine, first on the outer edge and again an inch within.

The fronts are faced back with cloth to the depth of five and one-half inches. This is placed right side to right side, sewed in narrow seam, turned, basted with edges even, and stitched an inch from the edge beginning at the base of the throat, following the slant of the top, then turning sharply and brought to the belt. Press all seams hard under a damp cloth.

Cut the collar six and a half inches deep in the center back. Round the front edges and fasten with an extension tab two and a half inches deep, for the button and buttonhole. When the collar is turned up this brings the rounded fronts just together in the center front. Join to the coat in a narrow seam. The collar is cut double of the cloth, turned and stitched, or it may have the inner side of fur which when it is rolled over comes on the outside. I should advise the fur being separate and sewed on by hand, as it can be removed for spring.

Notch the seam of the sleeve so it does not draw. Turn up the end about an inch. Cut the lining like the outside. Put it in wrong side to wrong side, tacking the seams here and there to keep in place. Turn in a seam on the end of the lining and hem to the turned up end of the cloth about a quarter of an inch from the edge. Leave lining and sleeve loose at the top. Baste the sleeve in place, see that it does not draw anywhere, and stitch in a narrow seam. Hem down the silk over the coat lining.

The band for trimming the end of the sleeve is four inches deep, stitched an inch in from each edge, cut in two scallops on the lapped end with a button and buttonhole on each.

The skirt of this coat, which is sewed to the lower edge of the seven inch belt, is cut to flare decidedly at the bottom. It is in three pieces, the back measuring twenty-eight inches from belt to bottom in the middle of the back and is sloped on the side seams to measure twenty-two and one-half inches across at belt and fifty-two inches at the bottom.

The two fronts, which hang in a straight line without being cut away, are twenty-five inches long, thirteen and one-half inches at the belt, and twenty-two inches at the bottom. The slope of the lower edge is gradual from front to back. In cutting allow an inch and three-quarters to sew into a seam at the top and to turn about an inch hem all around the bottom. This is bound with silk binding, as are the side seams. Allow an inch on the front to bind and turn back and a half inch on the sloped edges for seams.

Jane Barton's Answers to Sewing Queries.

MRS. J. Y. B.: There are many kinds of seams used in the making of tailored suits. In the plain seams of a material that dos not fray the seam may be stitched, pressed open with a hot iron, and the edges notched or pinked; for a ravelly material use a binding ribbon. This seam is most often used when trimming is to be applied over it. It should be finished first. Where there is a lining turn in both edges and run, notching on the curved lines, or bind both edges together with a binding ribbon. The next easiest seam is what is known as the plain tailored. This is nothing more than the plain seam pressed with both edges together turned to one side, and a row of stitching run along the one side of the seam from the right side of the garment. The tuck seam is like the plain tailored seam, save that the stitching is run through the three thicknesses of cloth from a quarter to three-eighths of an inch from the seam. The undesirable thickness on the under side is then cut away close to the stitching. For a welt seam stitch a plain one with one edge of the material narrow, then turn back the fold and baste along the narrower seam edge. Stitch parallel to this line of bastings, keeping the seam flat. A double welt has an additional row of stitching set in one-quarter of an inch or less from the edge.

ANXIOUS: Scalloping is not hard to do, but the stitches must be kept close together and the upper edge should be kept regular. A straight scallop is most easily padded by working over a loose cord or five or six strands of darning cotton; this is fastened at the left side, held under the left thumb, and the buttonhole stitch made over it, working from left to right. A group scallop should be padded with chain stitch, or some people use a line of chain stitch on the lower edge and run the upper. When working on linens that must be laundered always do it before cutting out the scallop. If you will go to the extra trouble of buttonholing through the purl after cutting out, the scallop will wear much better.

RUTH P. S.: A blind loop is used instead of an eye. To make it, mark the position opposite the eye, then with buttonhole twist or heavy sewing silk or cotton knotted or fastened on the under side with three or four stitches bring the thread up through the material and make a bar stitch by taking three or four stitches, one over the other. Working from left to right, hold the thread down under the left thumb and insert the needle under the bar and over the thread. Draw up, letting the purl come to the lower edge of the loop. Cover the entire bar with close stitches and fasten securely on the wrong side. It facilitates the work to push the eye of the needle through instead of the point.

MARY JANE: Making over is surely important this year of hard times. Turn your pretty summer lace frock into a smart dancing gown by means of a satin redingote. Leave your skirt with the double flounce just as it is, but cut out the neck round or in a broad V to make a becoming décolleté. Make the redingote of pink satin, cutting the tail part circular and almost to the bottom of the skirt at the back and sloped to half way to the knees in front. The front edges should be at least four inches apart to show the lace skirt. The top can be a shirred basque with big armholes cut nearly to the waist line and a wide V. The width on the shoulder should not be more than an inch and a half. Cover the joining with a sash of the satin that falls in two ends and a knot at center back.

MRS. ESTHER D.: The pretty striped challis is not enough for an entire frock for your daughter, but make it into a long straight front and back of a dress that is cut in one almost like an apron, save that the front and back seam is made with an inverted plait to the hip line. This frock may be made of plain challis to match the broad brown stripe, or if tans are becoming it can match the tan line. Cut the back and front in a straight line from each shoulder seam, starting about an inch beyond the top of the sleeve, and continue to the hip and square across. This opening is faced or hemmed back and the space is filled in with the striped material. Cut the neck of this stripe in a tiny V, ending just below the base of the throat, and use white turnover collars basted in. The dress buttons down the centers of the back, the striped material being fastened with plain bone buttons the color of the dress. To break the long line have a fancy belt of the plain challis three inches wide stitched on both edges. This may be carried straight around the waist, but worn loose with a belt buckle of hammered metal, or the ends may cross in front at the bust line and be drooped to the center of the back at normal waist line, where it fastens with three buttons.

MISS DELLA D.: Wearing gloves at the fingers is a trying habit with which I can sympathize. Why not make long gloves from your old tops by joining new gloves to them? Sometimes I find buttonholing both edges and catching them together makes the neatest joint. Again, if the short gloves have a long wrist I cut them in a point, also pointing the lower edge of the top, and sew in a narrow seam on the wrong side, or buttonhole together. This is less noticeable than the straight around line. I always use cotton rather than sewing silk to darn gloves, as it shows less.

BERTHA K. R.: You will find it far easier to couch on that heavy round braid on your cloth dress. Have any simple design stamped, first making sure that there are no sharp corners which make braiding difficult. There are transfer patterns which you can use yourself more cheaply than stamping can be done. To couch, hold the braid or cord in the left hand between the thumb and first finger along the line of the design. Start thread on the under side of the material, bring the needle out below the braid, take a stitch over it, inserting the needle directly above the under one if the couching is to be at right angles, and bring the needle out below the braid the desired distance to the front, working from right to left. Make the overstitch to hold the braid and repeat, always advancing at equal distances. At a sharp turn or curve it may be necessay to hold the braid with a few stitches on the under side with thread or sewing silk.

CLUMSY: Knotting is a horrid thing to contend with. Use shorter threads. Save for tacking your thread should never be more than eighteen or twenty inches long. Thread your needle with the end near the spool. The other end is apt to split and unravel when twisted from left to right, as is usually done for threading the needle. Always cut your thread, as breaking weakens it. When the knot is formed do not jerk on it suddenly, but, taking it in your hand, pull lightly on one thread and it will often come out.

YOUNG MOTHER: I think you must mean the Oliver Twist model developed for the small girl. This made such a hit with the little boy that a similar effect was achieved for girls. For your 8 year old daughter you can make several smart school dresses on these lines, using as material the two summer dresses that you dislike. Make a straight skirt with a deep inverted plait on each side for fullness and a large patch pocket on each side of the front. Have a belt two and a half inches wide with two buttonholes on either side of the center front, on either side of the center back, and at the side. Put big pearl buttons to correspond on a short waisted blouse with set-in sleeves. This buttons down the front with two or three pearl buttons to match, but in a smaller size. Make turnover cuffs and a shallow rounding turndown collar. Have one dress with skirt, cuffs, and collars from your pink gingham with the waist of the pink and white stripe. Use the rest of the striped dress for a skirt and collars and cuffs, with a blouse of white batiste. This is effective with pink buttons. Your dull blue, with a rose stripe, will look well with a blouse of the plain pink or with white with blue buttons and a bit of pink embroidery on the collars and cuffs.

HILDA: It is possible to buy patterns of the deep girdles in basque effects which are excellent in remodeling an old lace or crêpe de chine dancing frock. About a yard and three-eighths of white or colored satin, preferably the last, will quite transform your dotted net dress. With one of these patterns, which show various forms, you also can make the new sleeveless basque by extending the tops to meet at the shoulders and cutting away under the arm to make a deep armhole. The neck part can be cut any becoming shape, though it should be broad enough to let the net of your frock show in the opening.

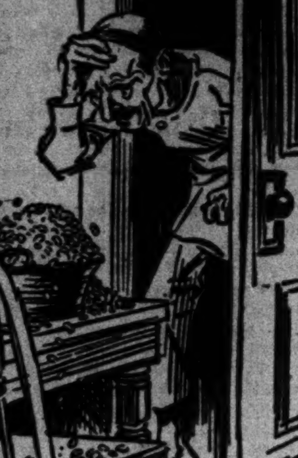
My Funniest Cooking Experience.

All Swelled Up.

As a cook when a bride of three weeks I tried to get up a meal of kidney beans. My neighbor said her husband just loved them, so of course I thought my husband would love them also. Not knowing just what amount to get, I bought two quarts and set them to soak over night.



During the small hours of the early morning my husband and I were awakened by a peculiar noise. We both listened for a while, and finally he ventured out very slowly into the kitchen, and found that the beans had swollen up so fast that they literally covered up the stove, the table, which was close by, and a corner of the floor. We had a good laugh, and the next time I bought beans for two I got a pint and gave them room enough to swell. MRS. G. W. G.

Short on Soup.

My husband is in the habit of bringing home guests to dinner unexpectedly. One evening he brought a friend. Our family numbers three, and this particular evening we had soup enough for three only. I instructed the maid to serve me with a plate of hot tea with noodles, which was a perfect match of the real article; so perfect, in fact, that she served it to our guest. E. W. R.

Cooking a Steak.

The first day after our honeymoon was my first chance to cook. Early in the morning, as soon as "hubby" left for work, I did my shopping for our evening meal. Of the many things I purchased one was a generous slice of steak. Having never cooked before, not even watched others, I really did not know how to begin. I put the steak on as soon as I returned from marketing with plenty of water and butter. As soon as it boiled down I would heap more butter on it and additional supplies of water. In the evening, when I set the steak before my husband, he explained that he had had "stew" for luncheon, too. MRS. G. H.

Buried Her Bread.

A friend of mine, when a bride, had extremely bad luck learning to make bread. She became discouraged and ashamed to have her husband know of her repeated failures, so one day when the sponge refused to rise she dug a hole in the garden and buried it, thinking he would never know. Next morning he called her out in the garden, and there she was amazed to see a small patch of dirt supported by the risen dough. The warmth of Mother Earth had accomplished what all her care and attention could not. MRS. R. J. K.

Peeled the Beans.

When I married I knew little of the art of cooking. One day I decided that bean soup would be good. Accordingly I procured my cook book and found the desired recipe. It read as follows: "Parboil the beans in a little soda water, as they will skin more easily." I parboiled the beans and then proceeded to peel them. It was a tedious process, but I succeeded in preparing a sufficient quantity for two dishes of soup. The soup is more easily imagined than described. My husband struggled heroically with the mess for a time, then he said: "I do not know what is the difficulty, but this is the funniest soup I ever tasted."

Used the Hair Curlers.

Soon after his marriage a friend of mine took me to his home for dinner. It happened that the bride was wholly untrained in any department of domestic science. Proudly the new husband led me through a cozy flat to the kitchen, where we surprised the bride, with very red face and badly flustered manner, broiling lamb chops and turning them with her curling iron. W. H.

A Layer of Tin.

I taught school one winter in the mountains of Colorado, sixty-five miles from a railroad. Women were more or less scarce, and the cowpunchers and ranchers were much interested in the "school ma'am." But when they found that I could not cook or do housework their astonishment knew no bounds.

I heard so much of the subject that at a dance one night I announced that I would furnish a cake of my own construction for the next dance supper.

I was proud of the cake I took. When the time came to cut it the crowd gathered around much interested. The knife slid easily through the first layer, but no power could drive it on through. At last it had to be torn apart, and behold! I had forgotten to take off the detachable bottom of the cake pan, but had iced it in.

I think what matrimonial chances I might have had vanished at that minute. MRS. S. B. T.

"Knocking" the Neighbors.

My funniest cooking experience occurred two or three weeks after our return from our honeymoon trip, when we were settled in our apartment, with about thirty-five or forty other families. City life was new to me, and I was writing to a girl friend after putting a large quantity of rice on to boil. I was telling her about apartment life as I was seeing it, and had just written, "We have thirty-five or forty families, and I can always smell the cooking over my transom. All morning people have seemed to be burning something. First I smelled vegetables burning, then a cake burning, and a short time ago I could smell potatoes boiling dry. Now I can smell bread burning, and it has been burning for ten or fifteen minutes. It must be in a nearby apartment, for it is very strong, and I am going to close my transom at once." As I started to carry this out I remembered my rice and flew to the kitchen to find it filled with smoke, and I also discovered in this the source of the burned bread. MRS. B. N. W.

Momentum versus Inertia

If a scientist were asked to analyze the difference between advertisers and nonadvertisers he might sum up his conclusions with the above phrase.

The advertiser acquires momentum from his continued publicity. It holds him continually in the public mind and makes it the natural, matter-of-course thing to patronize him. It enables him to keep people buying his products at standardized prices, even in dull times.

His advertising is an impetus which maintains the even progress of his business.

The nonadvertiser has, on the contrary, a considerable amount of inertia to overcome. It is a scientific fact that it takes far more power to start anything moving than to keep it going. The extra effort is needed to "overcome inertia."

As a general rule the business of the advertiser has momentum. The business of the nonadvertiser is inert.

The greatest enemy of inertia in Chicago and the greatest stimulus to the momentum of business are to be found in the use of the advertising columns of Choose chairs that invite you to linger. —From the Studio Year Book.

FURNISHING of the small apartment is no longer a matter of interest to brides only, a fact which real estate agents in all big American cities can attest. Just about 80 per cent of the small apartments in town are rented to young people recently married and beginning housekeeping. The majority are taken by men and women past the bloom of youth, who desire the comfort of home life and privacy at the least possibly expenditure of personal effort. Many women have come to the realization that there are more intelligent and profitable occupations in the world than domestic work.

The old fashioned theory was that the woman's part of the business of married life was to do the manual labor of housekeeping and so be saving, or even if she could afford a maid to do the "heavy work," that her duty then lay in overseeing, keeping accounts straight, and "saving" a little out of the housekeeping allowance. When she did her own work she "saved" the maid's hire.

That word "saved." What a delusion! Suddenly she knew that its real definition was earned and earned hard—earned at the price of many a backache and permanently disfigured hands and mind.

Now women know that there are easier ways of earning money than that so-called saving system. The cry is, "I would rather do more agreeable work and hire a maid. Out of what I can earn at some laudible endeavor I can pay a maid to do the housework which I dislike and have something left besides."

Then the first thing they do is to look for a small apartment and move out of the house or larger quarters into it. It is so small that the work is reduced to a minimum. A maid is hired, the barnacles of old fashioned prejudice against women working are cast off, and they launch forth on the quest of a fuller life.

Small apartments have made this change in the lives of city women possible, and the practical furnishing of them is momentous indeed. Whether the furnishing is being done by adepts or amateurs, the tendency is to overcrowd. If you are moving from larger quarters, be advised for your own comfort to store, sell, or give away rather than take everything with you and jam it all in. In buying anew keep in mind, too, that it is better to have too little than too much. The feeling of being huddled up is most uncomfortable.

Builders catering to the demand for small flats are advertising four, three two, and even one room apartments. Curiosity prompted me to visit one of these one room apartments lately, and I found it a marvel of ingeniousness. It was so compact that it reminded me of nothing more than a can of sardines. Gas stove, ice box, and pantry shelves were in one; there was a combination book shelf, folding bed, and sideboard; everything was combined—everything but the shower bath and the kitchen sink.

Many of the new small apartments are attractive and habitable. Much, to be sure, depends upon the manner in which they are finished and furnished. A few simple bits of advice may be followed to advantage. If possible select the apartment before buying the furniture. Take full count of the built-in pieces and figure on building in a few if you have a lease long enough to warrant any extra expense.

A plain deal shelf fastened with hinges to the wall, so that it lets down flat with the wall when not in use, is more convenient and economical of space in the kitchen than a kitchen table and costs less. An excellent dressing table for the bedroom is made by adjusting a rather wide shelf to the window sill, covering it with cretonne, arranging a cretonne valence to it, and then suspending a mirror above it from the center of the window sash. A sash curtain hung behind the mirror insures privacy, and if you hang a drop light directly above this improvised table you will have a perfectly good light night and day by which to perform your toilet.

The sash curtain should be made of such intransparent material as casement curtaining. The window shade may then be raised to any height, but need never be drawn lower than the top of the lower sash. It is a wonder that builders of built-in furniture have never thought of building in dressing tables. So much drawer space could be utilized that is wasted below the window sills.

If the radiators are low benches may be built over them and painted to match the woodwork. The pier glass should be built into your bedroom door. If it is not, have one at all hazards. The invariably well dressed woman always contrives, through the arrangement of her mirrors, to see herself from every point, while dressing. A dressing table, mirror, bed, chest of drawers, chair, and small rug are sufficient furniture for the combined dressing room and bedroom.

The essential pieces for a living room are a large rug, a good sized table, a lounge (preferably one that has space for accommodating clothes, and that can be used as a bed for the convenience of a chance guest), an easy chair (upholstered), several other chairs (wicker, Windsor, or rush bottom, are all good), a bookcase, and whatever musical instrument you may have.

Curtains should be of muslin, with or without overdrapes, according to the amount of light available. In this day of sun parlors we have learned not to exclude the good sunlight. A small wheeled tea table is a pleasant addition, though not as necessary an extra as a good reading lamp.

Every one knows the discomfort of occasionally using a box lounge as a bed. The trouble is that the bedclothes always slip off. If the box lounge is to be used for sleeping purposes, even occasionally, have a thin mattress made and upholstered to match the lounge. The bedclothes may be tucked in under this and your chance guest made comfortable. For ordinary day use, the bedding is put away and the upholstered mattress left on the lounge.

The box lounge is cited as the least expensive of the many day beds, suitable for living rooms, that are on the market. Of all the pieces of built-in furniture the built-in beds are the least desirable—more than that, most of them are downright objectionable. Ventilation is the lungs of good health.

The little dining room is often used as a library. In that case the built-in china cabinet is used as a bookcase. When this is done all china, silver, and table accessories should be kept in the kitchen pantry, so as not to spoil the character of the room.

More money should be lavished on the dining room chairs than on the table. Tables with highly polished surfaces are inartistic, as they gather too many reflections. And day tablecloths—not white—add to the color possibilities of the room. All that is necessary then, since the table may as well be covered any way, is that it should be structurally strong, it need not be ornate.

Whatever the other furnishings of the dining room may be, see that the chairs are comfortable. Sitting bolt upright with tense muscles in stiff straight chairs while dining is not conducive to good digestion. Don't have chairs that make you unwelcome and hurry you away from your own table, but choose the kind that invite you to linger, and so guard you against the dyspepsia that is prevalent in this country because of the habit of rushing through meals.

If the dining room chairs are sightly, as well as easy, those that are not in actual use daily in the dining room may be scattered through the apartment as extra chairs. When they are assembled then on special occasions they will be uniform in height, which extra chairs, chosen at random, probably would not be.

As to the wall decoration, avoid extreme effects. If the agent will "decorate to suit," keep to one light neutral color for the whole suite, and have the woodwork painted, either white or in some color to correspond to the paper. This will "drag it together," as the decorator expresses it. Color schemes are impossible in small quarters. While self-color throughout gives an effect of space and breathing room, different colors in a group of small rooms are suffocating and patchy. Color enough will be supplied in the furnishings without having it on the walls.

The Queerest Man I Ever Worked For.

Many business girls have had queer employers at some time or other during their business careers and some of these men have the most unexpected eccentricities. Those of us who have been in business life for many years probably know a number of such queer characters. "The Sunday Tribune" will pay $1 for each letter published on the subject of "The Queerest Man I Ever Worked For." Address letters to Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

In a Music Studio.

One year, when I was just trying my wings, I was engaged by a voice teacher, a pale, small featured man with an air of being czar of all musicdom. The pronoun "I" was a favorite with him and soon I gathered that not only should he have been in grand opera but without a doubt he was one of the bravest of hunters and a most sought after individual.

The names of society leaders were tossed from his lips carelessly. His engagement list was a source of great annoyance to him, as so many wealthy people vied with each other in entertaining him. Not only his poor accompanist but his pupils as well had to listen to these tales. While talking he invariably paced the floor in a Richard Mantell pose of deep thought, his voice rising and falling with all the inflection of an orator.

Pupils, however, as I soon saw, were a scarcity and when a prospective one appeared in the reception room he was all excitement. The same scene was enacted with the pupil-to-be.

He would step to his writing desk, take out a mirror, smile to his reflection, apply a little rouge to his cheek bones and powder carefully. "Is she well dressed?" he would question, changing his everyday collar for the high, imposing theatrical one he always kept on hand, and "Shall I put on this lavender or this black tie? Both were gifts from Farrar to me."

After he had satisfactorily completed his toilet he would step to the door and usher in the visitor with "You must excuse me, but I was finishing a little work on my oratorio which I give in Toledo next week."

If he "landed" a pupil his joy was boundless and for weeks after he would boast of his personal bravery and magnetism.

As bravery was his long stunt, I was naturally surprised when fire broke out in the building next to ours to see him seize a plaster paris bust of Wagner and rush frantically from the building. When the fire was out he returned, weeping, to the studio. Between sobs he told me how sad he felt because the firemen would not let him assist in putting out the fire. The elevator man that night confided to me that "That loony music teacher you work for cried like a baby because I refused to let him ride down in the elevator. He said we'd all be burned and asked me to save him."

A Coin Collector.

He used to send me out to make purchases for him. He always gave me a little purse and told me to bring back the very same change that I received. If he wanted me to make two or more purchases, he always gave me coin or currency for each separate purchase, even if the change from one purchase would have paid for the other. When he got the change he would look at the date on each coin and those of a certain date he would put in a tin box he kept in his safe. Often I have seen him put in dollars and many smaller coins. He never told me what date or dates he saved, or what he did with them, and I didn't think it my place to ask.

Detective System a Failure.

Not long ago I was employed in a store in a small town, being in the waist department. The owner was in the store about half his time and employed three other girls and two men. One day he called me to his office and told me that as he could not always be in the store, he wished I would keep watch of one of the girls, Miss B.; said he thought she was honest, but wanted to make sure.

Some days after that one of the men told me the boss must be suspicious of one of the clerks, that he had asked him to look after the sales checks of the other young man. We talked it over and finally asked the others and found that he had asked every one of us to watch another, hoping to find out if any of us was dishonest. We were furious at first, and then saw the funny side of it and decided to say nothing to him about it.

About a week after that I reported to him that there was a waist gone from my department which I did not sell, but which was taken out while he was out of town. I told him I thought I knew who had it, but I would not tell him. During the day every clerk reported to him that he thought it was the clerk they had been told to watch, so by night the boss was in a worse muddle than ever, as every one had reported the other a thief.

Next morning he came to me and said, "Why didn't you tell me that it was my wife who took that waist out?"

Then we told him about finding out his smart scheme and he was in a perfect rage, but finally apologized to us and there has been no "watching" in that store since the waist episode.

Had Enough to Live On.

The queerest man I ever worked for was in the real estate business. He was a Socialist. He was the owner of a number of stores, and rented them out to merchants in many lines. When times were bad the merchants would receive a letter from my employer stating that they would have to pay no rent until times were better. He had no trouble keeping his stores rented. Many times they would take advantage of his generosity and pay no rent, even at the busiest times, but my employer never minded this, as he always said that he had enough to live on, so why not let others have enough.

Played Cards All the Time.

My first boss was the homeliest man I ever knew. He paid me a small salary and told me I could have all the extra work I could get to add to my weekly stipend. On the fourth day of my stay he asked me suddenly if I could play cards and when I answered that I could he asked if I would play a game of hickey with him. I agreed. He said, "Ten cents a hickey and fifteen cents a game," and I, thinking it was a joke, said "Sure." When he paid me the first week, however, I discovered that it was not a joke, for he kept out of my week's salary what I had lost in the game. After that I played more carefully and whenever he lost he always paid me. I worked for him two months, during which time I wrote, for him, just four letters, and how many games of hickey we played I don't know. I mentioned at home that I had won more than my salary in one week and my mother, horrified when I told her how we had played cards so much in the office, insisted that I resign at once.

Of course all mathematicians, as well as such as have a natural bent towards the principles of geometry, appreciate the perfection of the form of the circle as compared with all other shapes. The nearer an oblong, square, or polygon approaches the form of a circle the greater will be the surface in proportion to the length of line required to inclose it. This proposition is well illustrated in the following problem which is given to show that the length of fence required to inclose a field gives no indication of the acreage.

It appears that two farmers who knew nothing about an acre of land containing 43,560 square feet, had been figuring out on the barn door a smart dicker which they concluded with Farmer Sykes' boy, who was fresh from college. They traded one large field for another, and believed that they got the best of the bargain because it took more rails to inclose the new field. Their old lot had 140 rails on one side by 150 on the other, which would make 580 rails on the four sides. The field for which they traded has 110 rails by 190, which would make 600 rails on the four sides. The dimensions of the two fields are correctly shown on the barn doors and illustrate a valuable lesson in geometry pertaining to form and dimensions. To present our problem in tangible form, let the proposition be: Supposing that 840 squashes are raised to the acre, how many squashes will these smart Alecs lose on the year's crop by trading fields, or, in other words, how much does Farmer Sykes' boy's knowledge of elementary geometry profit him per year in this one transaction, to say nothing of the thousands of opportunities which will occur during the year for him to turn his practical knowledge of mathematics to account?

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

EDITED BY JANE EDDINGTON

Jane Eddington's articles are printed every day in "The Daily Tribune."

THE requests for Thousand Islands dressing sent to the editor of this column have multipled of late to such an extent that it seems wise to reprint this recipe and some others related to it.

Fundamentally there are really but four salad dressings, although a great number of variations of these have been worked out. There is the French dressing, the mayonnaise, the cooked dressing with almost as many variations in quantities as there are variations by additions to the mayonnaise, and the sour cream dressing.

Many housekeepers have not yet learned that mayonnaise is a simple and easy thing to make, if they will go about it right, and inexpensive if they will use an American oil. The mayonnaise making outfits are generally clumsy and not at all a requirement. A half cup of mayonnaise, as one correspondent some time since was glad to be convinced, can be made easily in five minutes. Unsophisticated eaters are likely to imagine that they do not like the flavor of olive oil, and even sophisticated eaters who like its flavor will like a mayonnaise made with American oil, at about 30 cents a quart, as well as one made from an olive oil costing three or four times as much.

The experienced cook varies mayonnaise in a score or more of ways by thinning or by additions. It is thinned and made whiter with cream for fruit salads, with chili sauce alone, or with other additions for the Thousand Islands dressing. Years ago such mixtures were called Portugaise. Chopped pickles, capers, olives, parsley, chives, and perhaps other things are added to it to make the sauce tartare, and it is varied in many other ways. Lately raspberry has been added to it to make a raspberry mayonnaise. Half and half of mayonnaise mixed thoroughly and any whipped up jelly, which is good with game, is a pleasant thing for a change to serve with cold turkey or any cold meat.

Some of the cooked dressings may be modified as much as mayonnaise by additions, not half of which have been mentioned. A great many cooking and eating writers have written at length of mayonnaise, and one of them says: "Mayonnaise is the planet around which numerous satellites gravitate, the highway from which many paths run off."

Quick Mayonnaise.

Put a pinch of salt in a soup late with a tablespoon of vinegar (if a vegetarian you will use lemon juice instead of vinegar and many not vegetarian prefer it), a little while pepper (a mayonnaise in which spots of pepper show is not as handsome as when they do not), and a pinch of mustard, with the yolk of one egg. Use small egg whisk to blend these, then add to them one-half cup of oil falls directly in the path of the whisking all the time. The whole can be poured in, after the first, in five minutes if it falls drectly in the path of the whisk covers. If at the last the mayonnaise should split a little, whisk in a tablespoon of boiling water to blend it. This makes the dressing a little whiter and smooths it if it has become thick.

If a larger quantity must be made and it must be thinned from time to time while beating it, a few drops of cold water may generally be preferred to lemon juice used for the same purpose. Instead of two egg yolks for a cup of oil some people use a whole egg, but it is not quite as easy to make a handsome mayonnaise. Skill in using the whisk for any purpose has a good deal to do with the final appearance of the dressing.

Thousand Islands Dressing (1).

Plain mayonnaise is not a good dressing for lettuce, and all the green salads related to lettuce, but mayonnaise more highly seasoned and thinned with some tomato mixture is quite generally liked. The simplest so-called Thousand Islands dressing is a mixture of mayonnaise and chili sauce, the coarser pieces being chopped fine. But if one has not the chili sauce some cooked tomato, boiled down and sifted, makes a handsome and well flavored dressing, or some raw tomato chopped with a bit of onion and perhaps some green pepper and dressed with salt and vinegar or with a French dressing may be added, enough to thin the mayonnaise acceptably, and this depends on how thick the latter is. Mayonnaise keeps well, but at some temperatures it thickens and in others grows thin. In the ordinary icebox it does not change much if any.

Roquefort Dressing.

One of the most popular additions to French dressing at present is Roquefort cheese. This is mashed and the dressing well worked into it, and then the whole may be thinned with cream.

Thousand Islands Dressing (2).

In the little book compiled by Mrs. Helen Ruggles there is the elaborate recipe for the Thousand Islands dressing as made at the College inn. In most places where it is served it is not of so elaborately seasoned a mixture. Here is the recipe: Mix two tablespoons each of finely cut green peppers and pimento, one tablespoon of minced onion (wrung out of cheesecloth after rinsing in cold water) or the same amount of pearl onion, and one chopped hard cooked egg, with a teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce, a tablespoon of catsup, two tablespoons of chili sauce, and seasoning of salt and paprika. Blend thoroughly with three-fourths of a cup of whipped cream and add gently to the same amount of mayonnaise dressing.

French Dressing.

The mixture of a little salt, pepper, and vinegar with three times the measure of oil mixed in a bowl rubbed with garlic or not is commonly called French dressing, but it has other names, according to what it is used with. In order to make a thick dressing some people put the whole in a bottle and shake it, and as it keeps well any that is left over can be used another time. Perhaps a better way to make it is to put a half teaspoon of salt and some pepper with the requisite amount of vinegar in a shallow bowl and then whip the oil into it, just as in making mayonnaise. This will make a thick, creamy dressing, which should be used as soon as whipped, as it will quickly separate.

The French call this dressing both a vinaigrette and a marinade. It is called a vinaigrette dressing when it is used with cold boiled meats, sliced, and allowed to rest in it until seasoned. It is called a marinade when pieces of raw meat or fish are dipped in it, or, preferably, allowed to lie in it an hour before broiling. Nearly all fish steaks are improved by this treatment, some slices of onion or some onion juice being added to heighten the seasoning. Like mayonnaise, additions of various sorts are made to the French dressing.

Cooked Salad Dressing.

Nearly all the cooked salad dressings, sometimes called cooked mayonnaise, consist of the same ingredients, but in different proportions. The following is one of the simple and satisfactory ones which will keep well: One egg, two tablespoons of vinegar, four tablespoons of milk, two teaspoons of oil or butter, one-half teaspoon of salt, one-half teaspoon of mustard, a pinch of pepper. If butter is used instead of oil it is put in just before taking from the fire. If oil is used mix it thoroughly with the dry ingredients, then add the egg, and beat for several minutes, three or four, then beat in the vinegar for a minute. Add the milk and put the whole in a double boiler, cooking until thick and stirring all the time. It will take nearly ten minutes for it to cook. It can be bottled and kept in a cool place for a week or more.

Real Cream Dressing.

Sweet or sour cream can be used for this dressing. Perahps it is made best of sweet cream, unless the sour cream has just been turned. Whip up the cream with an egg beater, and to a cup add a tablespoon of vinegar or of lemon juice or a little more, if needed. Most people will prefer the vinegar, and about twice as much is used with sweet as with sour cream. A little sugar brings out the flavor and a little salt is added. Other additions are made according to taste. Celery salt is one of them. It is an excellent dressing for cabbage salad, and particularly for the Chinese cabbage salads.

What Housewife Should Know.

IF a little ammonia is added to the water in which silver or glass ware is washed, it makes a difference, brightening it wonderfully. Ammonia is good for removing grease from dishes, too.

Potato water is excellent for cleaning spoons and knives and forks. Apply it with a soft cloth. All stains will disappear immediately. Polish well with a chamois leather after this treatment.

Fruit stains on linen should be smeared with glycerin and left for about an hour. Then wash the stains in warm soapy water. Repeat the process if necessary.

Muslin and cotton goods can be rendered fireproof by putting an ounce of alum in the last rinsing water, or by putting it in the starch. This is a wise plan for children's clothing, for even if their clothes do catch fire, which is not at all improbable, they will burn without any flame.

If Japanese lanterns have a little silver sand put in the bottom to give weight, there will be little danger of the whole thing catching fire, as the candle is held firmly in position.

By pouring boiling water over the cooking apples they are much easier to peel. This is a considerable saving of time when there is a morning's cooking to do.

A novel stand can be made in the following way: Procure an old piece of drain pipe and some broken ornaments, vases, etc., of various colors. Break the broken articles into small pieces. Give the drain pipe a coat of white lead and putty mixed, then stick the pieces of china and glass all over it, arranging them to form an artistic design. When quite dry and hard give it a coat of varnish, which gives a polish and enables it to be easily cleaned.

When cutting new bread dip the knife in warm water. This will keep the bread from crumbling and will facilitate matters considerably.

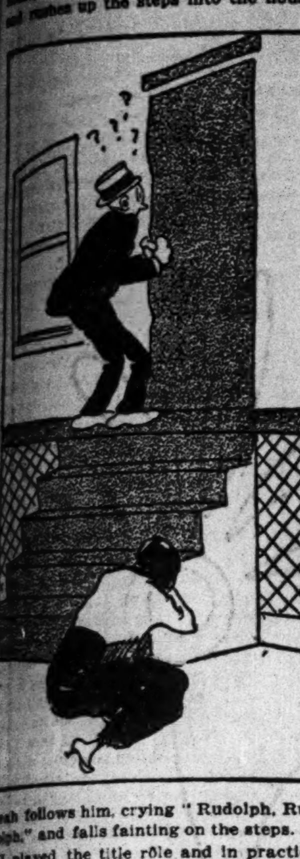
My Most Embarrassing Moment.

Couldn't Forsake Her.

When I graduated from high school our class gave a play, "Leah, the Forsaken." The climax occurs when the lover, Rudolph, who believes Leah false, renounces her in front of his father's house, throws a bag of gold at her feet, and rushes up the steps into the house.



Leah follows him, crying "Rudolph, Rudolph," and falls fainting on the steps.

I played the title rôle and in practice had swooned until I was black and blue. The eventful night came and the melodramatic moment arrived. Rudolph flew to the door, I sank on the steps, my head buried in my arms, and the curtain began slowly to descend, when I heard a titter in the audience, then a ripple of amusement, and at last a shout of laughter.

What had I done? Would that curtain never come down? After an eternity I saw its heavy pole out of the corner of my eye, looked up quickly, and burst out laughing myself.

There was Rudolph, frantically shaking the canvas door. Some one had hooked it on the inside and he couldn't get in.

Shook Hands with Mother.

I was giving a 12 o'clock breakfast for eight girls. It was my first affair and I had worked for days over the details. Unfortunately, I was not quite ready to greet my friends when they arrived and went down to find them assembled in the parlor. In much confusion I rushed over and squeezing the hand of one of the party fervently welcomed her only to be greeted with subdued laughter from the assemblage. I was shaking hands with mother.

"Repairing Quickly Done."

The most embarrassing moment of my life was when I met on the street a young man with his fiancée, to whom his engagement had just been announced. Six weeks before he had left broken hearted for the west because I had refused him.

It Cured Them.

At one time I was living in a household where I was desirous of making a favorable impression. So one night at about midnight I was called to the bedside of the mother of the family, who was suffering from an attack of acute indigestion. She asked me if I could do anything to relieve her suffering. She was subject to the attacks, and in every instance had found it necessary to call a physician. I urged her not to do so, as I had some medicine with me. I gave her several doses and even gave her husband some of the mixture, as he had been awakened suddenly and overcome by faintness.

At about 3 I retired, congratulating myself on my success, as both patients were asleep.

Imagine my embarrassment next morning when I took up the bottle of medicine to put it away and saw that I had used a face lotion labeled "for external use only."

The Minister Laughed.

I attended a picnic of our Sunday school class and as was the custom we had invited the minister and his wife. At supper I happened to be seated at the opposite end of the table from the minister who without my noticing it was saying a long winded grace. One of the girls had started to pour the coffee into our cups as we held them out to her and just as the minister was in the midst of the blessing I called out to the girl filling my cup: "That's enough, that's enough." The minister stopped and then had to laugh. It certainly sounded as if I had had enough of the blessing.

Why He Couldn't Hear It.

My brother, who is a very prominent physician in Chicago, was called to see a man who had an ear affection, and it was thought for a time he would lose his hearing. My brother took his watch from his pocket and held it at a certain distance from the man's ear and asked: "Can you hear the watch tick?" The man said he could not. The watch was held closer, but still he could not hear. Finally it was put to the man's ear, but he said he could hear nothing. My brother was quite puzzled, but upon further investigation found his watch had stopped.

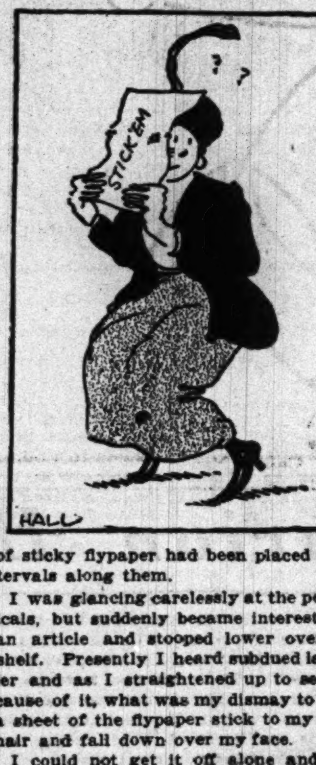
A Fly Paper Mask.

About two years ago I spent much of my spare time at the reading room of the public library and one of the most embarrassing incidents I ever experienced occurred there one hot summer evening.

One side of the room is composed almost entirely of windows and about six inches below the window sills is a shelf on which are kept the weekly papers and magazines. The flies were troublesome and as the window sills are broad, sheets of sticky flypaper had been placed at intervals along them.



I was glancing carelessly at the periodicals, but suddenly became interested in an article and stooped lower over the shelf. Presently I heard subdued laughter and as I straightened up to see the cause of it, what was my dismay to have a sheet of the flypaper stick to my front hair and fall down over my face.

I could not get it off alone and was compelled to face the roomful of laughing people and make my way as best I could to another room, where the librarian helped me remove it.

Inexpensive Gifts.

WITH the chill of November weather comes the realization that you have only a short time in which to make your Christmas gifts, and if you are not going to be hurried into doing bad work it is indeed time to begin at least to think about them.

It is easy enough to buy Christmas gifts at the last minute if you haven't time to finish making them, but the woman who is in the habit of giving her friends the dainty products of her skill and ingenuity will mightily disappoint them if she sends them store goods. I, for one, would be apt to think her love for me had dwindled if, instead of the usual labor of love, I should receive from my friend some manufactured article, no matter how costly.

There are such a multitude of useful and pretty things that can be made at little expense that it seems almost wrong to buy less attractive articles when you have skillful fingers.

For a small and useful gift nothing could be more artistic than a pen made of a quill. The quill used must be a strong, white one, so that it can be dyed a brilliant and cheerful color. The dyeing should be done with a tube of oil paint and a pint of gasoline. Attractive effects in old blue or cerise may be obtained in this manner. After the dyed quill is dry insert the end of it in a brass pen holder and it is ready for use. It is a surprisingly picturesque addition to the writing table, and a novelty only high class shops are showing.

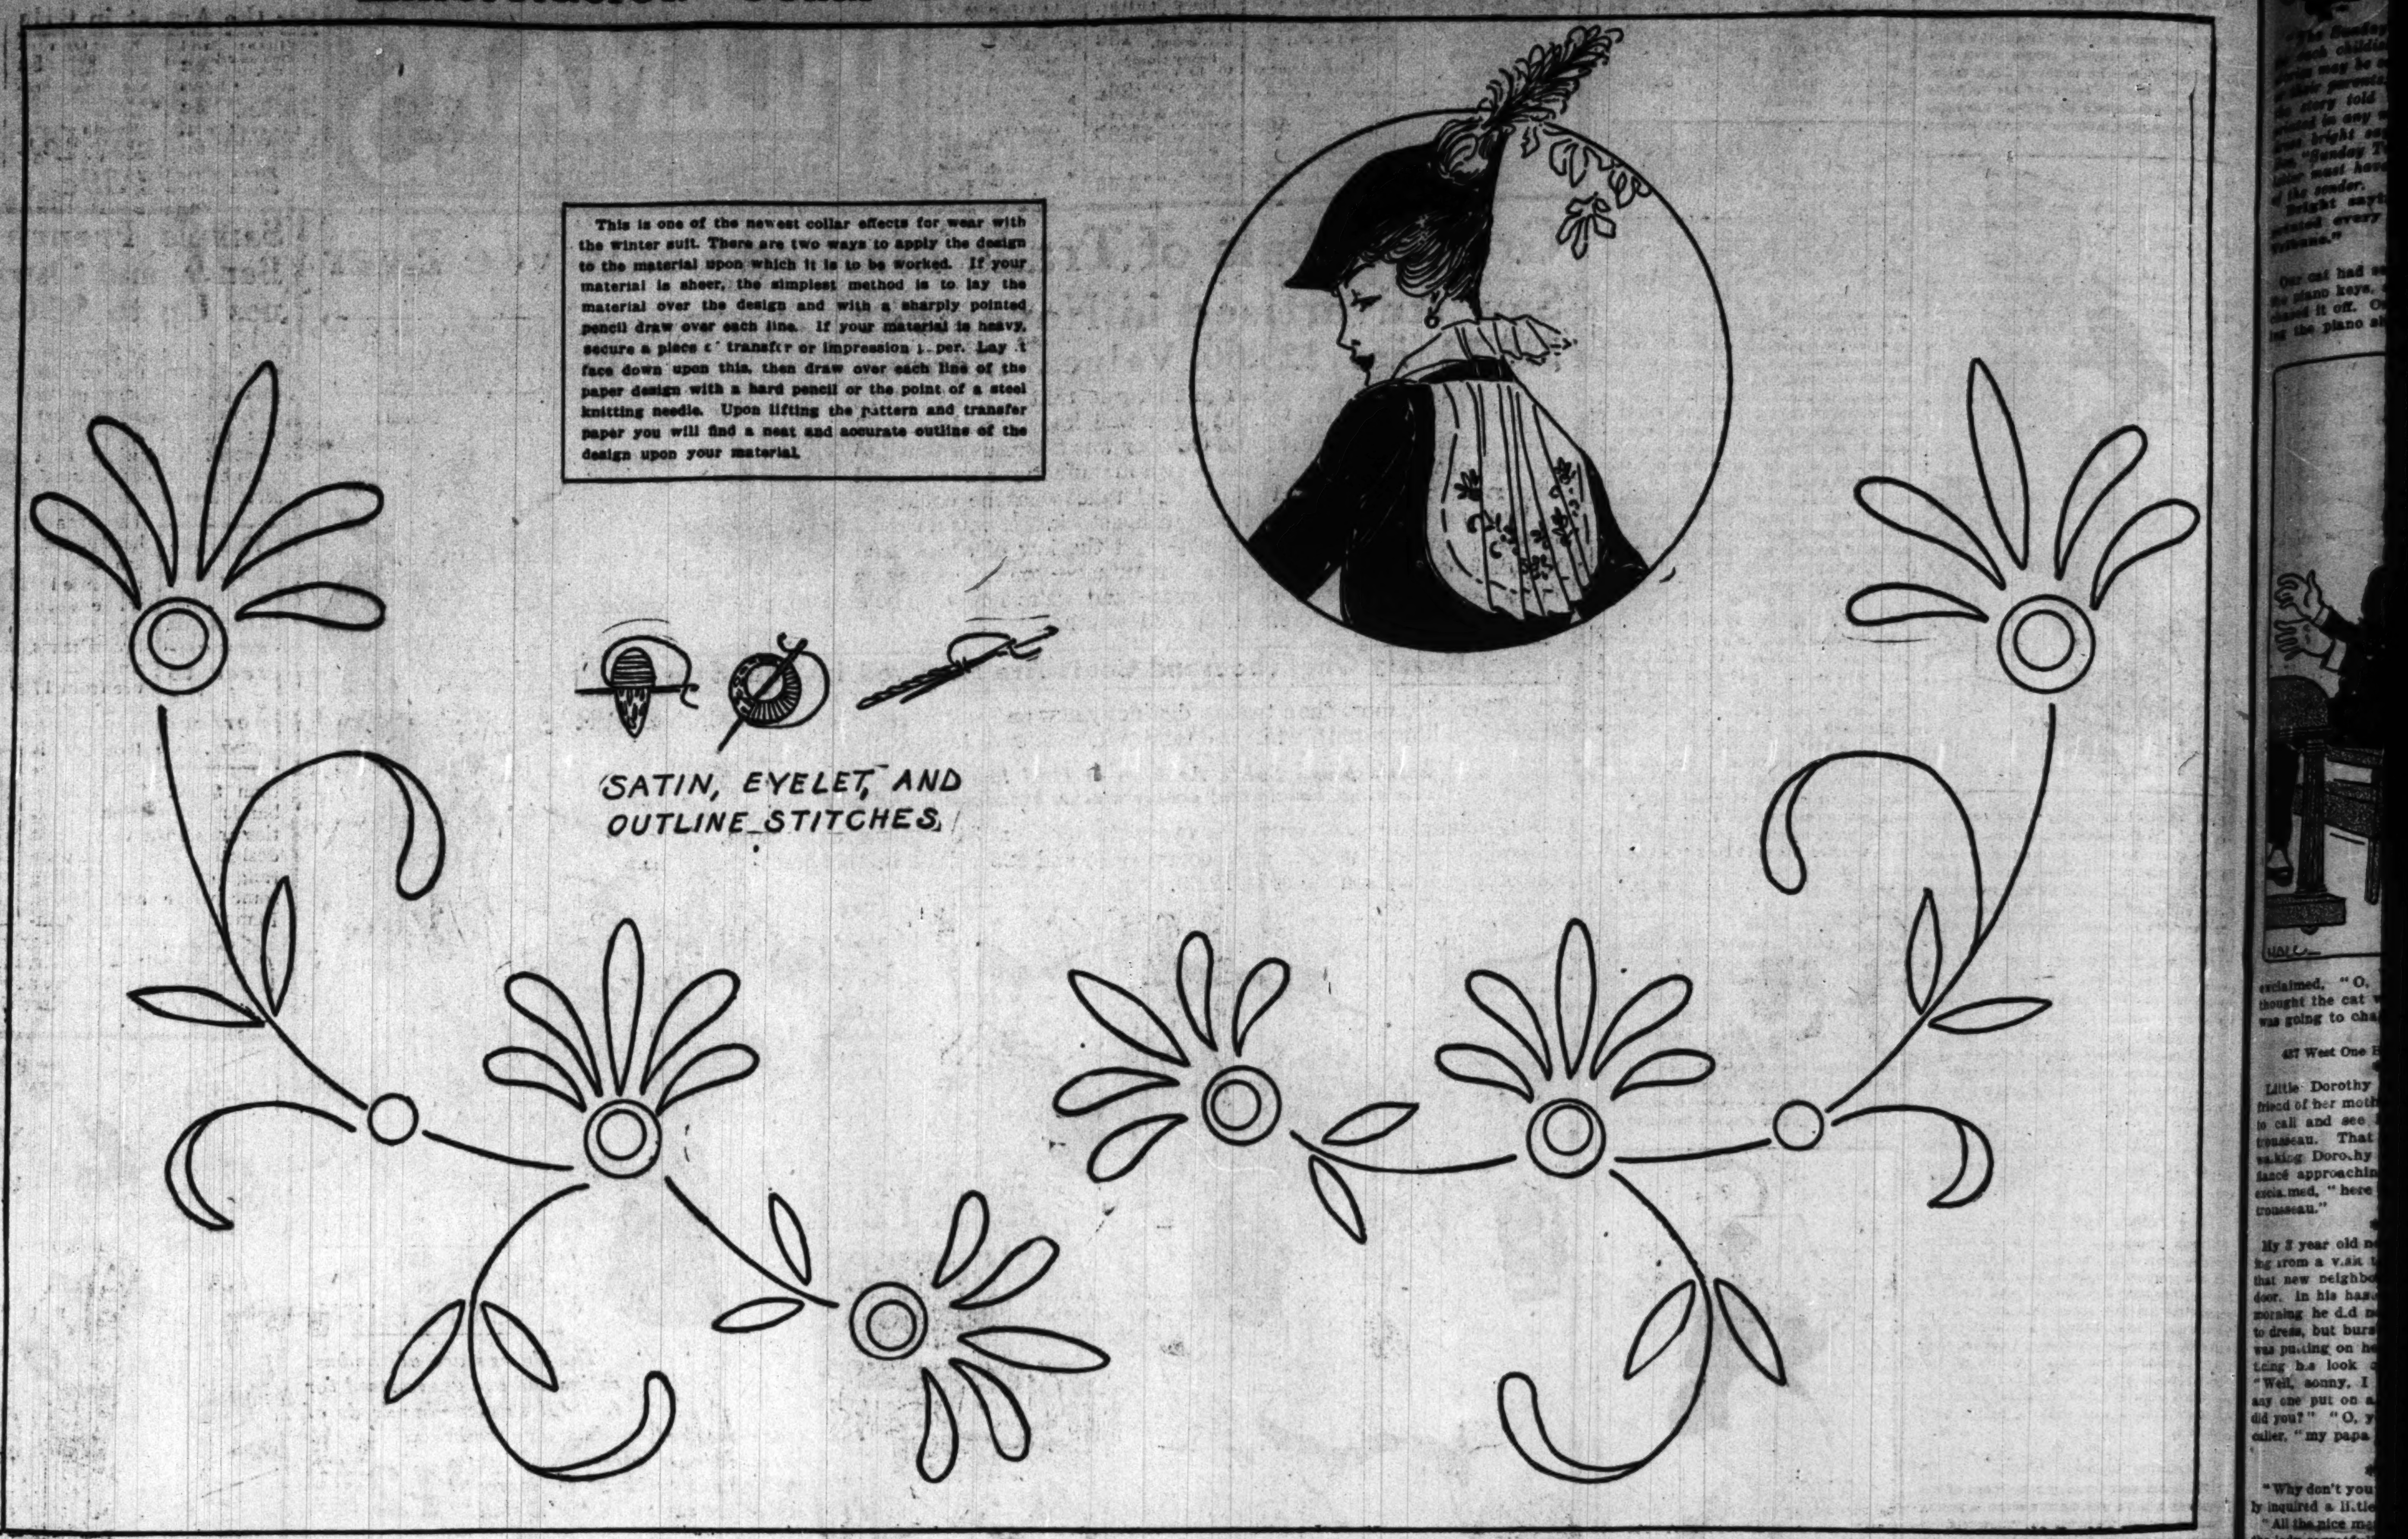
In this day of rapid transit there could be no more desirable gift than the week end bag, so convenient an article to drop into the suitcase when one goes to spend Sunday in the country home of a friend. They can be made envelope shape, of cretonne or Dresden silk, and lined with rubber and sewed into several compartments. The bag itself should be about six inches square. One little pocket must be filled with a small tube of toothpaste, one with a cake of toilet soap, guest size, and one with a small tube of cold cream and a tiny tin box of talcum powder. One pocket can be left empty for the use of whatever the owner wishes, or filled with a small size powder puff. A clasp to hold the flap of the bag to the main body of it should be securely sewed on the under side.

A dainty addition to the guest room which makes a rather elaborate gift is a nightgown portfolio to be placed at the foot of the bed. This holder is made of silk padded with cotton on a cardboard foundation. It is an oval, folded portfolio fashion, so that when finished it is the shape of half the oval. It is edged with an inch cord or bound with satin ribbon. A flat bow of ribbon of a self shade decorates the top prettily. One elaborate one that I saw was hand painted. It was made of pale blue satin, and the decoration was wild roses in the most delicate shade of pink. A flat pink bow adorned the back of it, and a few loops of the bow were wired into a standing position.

Another holder was made of pale pink satin with a slip of white embroidered batiste that tied along the edge with tiny pink bows. One pink ribbon rose added a touch of daintiness to the top.

Still another could be covered in filet lace with a bow of pink or blue taffeta at the back.

Embroidered Collar Effect for Wear with Winter Suit.



SATIN, EYELET, AND OUTLINE STITCHES.

This is one of the newest collar effects for wear with the winter suit. There are two ways to apply the design to the material upon which it is to be worked. If your material is sheer, the simplest method is to lay the material over the design and with a sharply pointed pencil draw over each line. If your material is heavy, secure a piece of transfer or impression paper. Lay it face down upon this, then draw over each line of the paper design with a hard pencil or the point of a steel knitting needle. Upon lifting the pattern and transfer paper you will find a neat and accurate outline of the design upon your material.

Marion Harland's Helping Hand. - - By Marion Harland.

Marion Harland's Helping Hand Corner appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"WILL you please tell me the words of 'God Save the King'? This is a time when we are thinking of all sorts of national things and I have a great curiosity to know the words of the British anthem. Can any one give them to me? I. K. A."

Who can answer this inquiry? I am sorry to say that I cannot. Some fragments of the song I know, like—

"Send him victorious, Long to reign over us," and my reading of Dickens acquainted me with the lines—

"Confound their politics,
Frustrate their knavish tricks,
On him our hopes we fix,
God save the king!"

but I am not sure if these are the genuine words or a parody. Can some one tell us the real words? I think most of us would be interested to know them.

Bible for the Blind.

"In reply to the inquiry of Mrs. J. J. K. as to a Bible for the blind in raised letters, I have written out the information she wishes, thinking it may be of value to others as well as to her. Since these raised letters are large and can be printed on one side of the paper only, it takes a good many large volumes to complete the Bible, something over thirty, as I remember. In the Chicago public library and undoubtedly in the city libraries of other states there is a department containing books for the blind, in all kinds of raised print; these are for free loan as other books are in public libraries. In Illinois books for the blind will be loaned to any resident of the state free if they will pay the express charges both ways to this from the state school for the blind, which is in Jacksonville in Illinois. I think every blind school will do this same thing, and each state has its state school. Any one not knowing where the blind school is in their state can easily find out by writing to their state capital, addressing the state superintendent of public instruction or any other official with office in the capitol. Mrs. H. K. D."

Thank you very much for this reply. I know that in many of the large libraries in our principal cities there are rooms for the blind and books in type they can read. I hope these details may tell Mrs. J. J. K. what she wants to know and may be of service to others besides.

Embroidery Page Wanted.

"If my plans had turned out as I had hoped I would be offering the Cornerites some seeds from a fine hybrid casabba 'created' by my grandfather. The seeds were set out in the sun to dry, and some animal—there are rabbits around here—or some bird ate them, leaving only the hulls. The casabbas are fine, growing large, with flesh four inches thick. You can imagine my disappointment. Is there any one in your Corner who does not care particularly for the embroidery patterns in newspapers and would send me the Corner and the embroidery page each week? I would, of course, pay the postage. I do not see the page regularly, but am always most interested in the Corner. R. T."

I hope some one may be able to gratify this request. I trust also that some one may enlighten me as to what a casabba really is. It sounds interesting, and I am quite ashamed to confess my ignorance as to whether it is a fruit or a flower. I know the cassava or manioc, but I do not think that and the casabba are one and the same.

Mrs. Whitney's Books.

"Will you prefer a request for me through the Corner? I have a perhaps sentimental wish to own a number of the books of Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, which were favorites of my girlhood. It seems they are not to be bought now. If any one, in cleaning out old library shelves (as we all do sometimes), comes across copies of Mrs. Whitney's books for which she has no further use I would be happy to receive them. I also want copies of St. Nicholas for July, 1884, and March, 1885, the only missing numbers in nine years of the magazine, which I wish to have bound for my own little folk. "E. M. K."

Your wish to have Mrs. Whitney's books does not seem at all sentimental or foolish to me, for I must own to taking down some of her volumes from the shelves every now and then and rereading them with great enjoyment. They are clean, sweet, charming stories, and I regret for the sake of the girls of today that they are out of print. I trust some one may find story copies of them for you and write to me for your address. You may not know that it is impossible for us to offer for sale or to attempt to buy articles of any sort through the Corner, but there are almost invariably kind friends who are glad to be of service to other Cornerites and give the possessions asked for. I hope this may prove to be the case for you, both with the books and the magazines.

Offers Vocal Lessons.

"I am a young vocal teacher with some experience, I desire to give lessons to some refined young woman who has talent for this work but cannot afford to pay for lessons. If you will print this offer perhaps some one will be made glad. "N. R. J."

There is little doubt that some one will be rejoiced, and I only hope several may not be disappointed because of their inability to avail themselves of the generous offer. I will send the addresses of applicants writing for it and inclosing stamp for reply.

Sunday Afternoon Suggestions.

"I have noticed your call for Sunday afternoon suggestions and I write mine with the wish that some one may profit by them. In our home Sunday is looked forward to by two boys, aged 4 and 8, from one week to the other. First of all, as much cooking as possible is attended to on Saturday. A cake is baked; all vegetables are made ready so that there may be no culinary work on Sunday which can be avoided. Steak or something to broil or fry is the meat. We live an hour from church, so while the father takes the boys to Sunday school the mother 'straightens up' and packs a box of lunch and joins the others at church. After that we go to some of the wooded parks, eat our lunch, then walk all through the parks and climb the hills. Sometimes we come home to lunch, don our older clothes, and start out in the hills, and how the boys and all of us love it! They will tramp five or six miles and thoroughly enjoy it. My boys would rather play ball any time than sit down to quiet games, but ball fades into insignificance beside a 'hike.' And how easy in these circumstances to teach them that God gave us the hills and the woods and flowers to enjoy, on the Sabbath especially! We have tramped through all the parks, taken every car line that ends up where there are hills and valleys, and loved every bit of it. 'Too much trouble' some one may say. Try it once and see. When we reach home we have our good steak and other food, and when two tired and happy boys go to bed I hear, 'Gee, mother, didn't we have a dandy time? Where'll we go next Sunday?' You will generally find that when the question 'Where shall we go on Sunday?' comes up the boys have already planned for the place. Here is a hint which may be of use: Keep a roll of the crêpe toilet paper on your shelves and you will find it a great convenience in greasing pans or in wiping out dirty dishes. I also have a few square blocks to set hot or blackened dishes on to save my table and my soapstone sink. They spare me lots of hard scrubbing, and I have one on the floor to set the teakettle on when the stove is crowded. "Mrs. W. H. T."

A practical and helpful letter throughout. Such Sundays as those boys have will live in their memory always and will be a potent aid in keeping them free from temptations to Sabbath breaking of the grosser sort. The day which begins with church and Sunday school is hallowed and the joys of the hills and the woods are all the sweeter and more wonderful because the children are taught to whom they must give thanks for these delights. Thank you for writing as you have done about this, as well as for the sensible and practical suggestions for lightening labor in the kitchen. Undoubtedly this correspondent looks well to all the ways of her household.

Camp Fire Girls.

"In the Corner I saw recently an inquiry with regard to the Camp Fire girls. I should be glad to give any information desired on this topic if definite questions are asked, but there are a great many Camp Fires in existence. If any one wishes to know more about it and will tell me where she lives I shall be happy to give any help I can. We are always glad to interest and assist persons who are in earnest in their inquiries. "S. S. R."

The especial correspondent who asked about the Camp Fire girls has received the details she wished, but I am sure there are others who would like to know how to start these organizations and how to conduct them. On this account I am glad to put on file the name of this correspondent and will send it to those who wish it and are, as she says, in earnest about it. There is no doubt of the good the Camp Fire girls win and give.

Reading Clubs in Small Towns.

"We have some magazines I would like to pass on, but I have hesitated to offer them, as I cannot afford to pay postage charges on more than a few. We live in a small town, where there is no reading room or library. Would it not be a good plan for those of us who are thus situated to arrange through the coöperation of some merchant or business man in a central place for a box or table to be used as a receptacle for magazines and other reading matter to be passed on? There are people in every locality who want such things, but yet would not like to ask for them. We might request the editor of the county or town paper to print a notice to his readers about the magazines. Then let every one respond and we would watch for results. Can you publish this suggestion in the Corner? MRS. T."

An idea of this kind was printed in the Corner recently and it strikes me as significant that the same notion should come at the same time to two persons in different places. From such beginnings as this libraries and reading rooms are started. The woman who writes this letter lives in a small town and I see no reason why her suggestions should not be put into effect. In many small towns there are book and magazine clubs. Several persons subscribe to different magazines and these are passed from one to the other of the club until all of the periodicals have gone the rounds. The same plan is followed with books. Why do not you who live in small towns see if something of this kind is not feasible? When magazines are offered to you by some of those who have plenty to spare join together and pay for the transportation of the books and circulate them between yourselves, giving the magazines later to those who cannot afford to pay and yet long for reading matter. The one thing that is needed is an enthusiastic, practical person to go ahead and get the scheme started. After it is under way there is a possibility of securing one of the traveling libraries which have done so much for small towns with no libraries of their own. If any one wishes to communicate with Mrs. T. on this matter I will gladly give her address or supply any information in my power to help along the project.

Use "Gets-It," Corns Shrivel, Vanish!

It's the New Way, and You'll Forget You Ever Had Corns.

"Two drops put on in two seconds, corn shrivels, comes clean off!" That's the marvelous story of "GETS-IT," the new-plan corn cure. Nothing can be simpler for the cure of corns—and it never fails.

No Corns to Bump; No Pain, If You Use "GETS-IT."

That's why millions of people are using "GETS-IT" today and throwing away their fussy plasters, sticky-tape, toe-eating salves and "wrapping outfits" that make a bundle around the toe and choke it into pain by pressing either on or around the corn. There is nothing to stick to your stockings, nothing to cause inflammation or rawness, nothing to press on or around the corn. You apply it in two seconds. No more knives, razors, scissors or files, with their blood-poison dangers. Try "GETS-IT" for that corn, callous, wart or bunion.

"GETS-IT" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.

A Little Light
On the Lamp-Shade Business

To pay off a $250 debt, save a little, and in the meantime practically support three—all this within a year—on the lamp-shade business would seem an impossibility for a Home Worker, but the energetic woman who has accomplished all this seems to have enjoyed her labors immensely.

Skill, reasonable prices and advertising in the Home Workers' Blue List have formed the magic combination. To quote her own words: "But the greatest of these has been the advertising, because if there hadn't been a department like this I should never have had the inspiration to try."

If you wish to know the details of this story, or the advertising rates in this department, address or call Room 534 Tribune Building, The Home Workers' Blue List.

Our cat had several times walked over the piano keys, and my little niece had chased it off. One day while I was playing the piano she came running in and exclaimed, "O, uncle, is it you? I thought the cat was on the piano, and I was going to chase it off."

Little Dorothy was present when a friend of her mother's called to invite her to call and see her daughter Frances' trousseau. That afternoon while out walking Dorothy saw Frances and her fiancé approaching. "O, mother," she exclaimed, "here comes Frances and her trousseau." M. A. R. K.

My 3 year old nephew Richard, returning from a visit to a distant city, found that new neighbors had moved in next door. In his haste to call on them next morning he did not allow the lady time to dress, but burst in upon her while she was putting on her skirt, feet first. Noticing his look of surprise, she said, "Well, sonny, I guess you never saw any one put on a skirt like this before, did you?" "O, yes, I have," replied her caller, "my papa always does." H. C. P.

"Why don't you get married?" abruptly inquired a little girl of a maiden lady. "All the nice men are taken," answered the lady regretfully. "Just look at your papa," she went on, "how nice he is. Now if you would let me marry your papa I would get married right off."

The little girl looked thoughtful, then—reluctantly, "I'm sorry, but we couldn't spare our husband." L. V. H. B.

Little George was sent by his mamma to a neighbor's to get a recipe for making buttermilk pie. But he could not remember the word recipe, so he asked Miss S. for her buttermilk pattern. S. F.

Albert was visiting two of his aunts in the country. He is fond of fish, and is just as fond of soup. Now, it happened that one aunt had soup for dinner that day, while the other aunt had fish. Albert wanted both. His mother said, "Where do you want to eat your dinner today, at Aunt Mary's or at Aunt Katie's?" Albert said, "You mean where are we going to eat first." F. H.

John asked his father for a quarter.

"My! My! What are you going to do with so much money?"

John replied, in a very important way, "Buy some flowers for Miss ——."

"Why do you buy flowers for her?" his father inquired.

"Because she is ill," replied John.

"But no one ever buys flowers for me when I am ill," said his father.

"Well, never mind about that, papa, just wait till you're dead and they will send lots of flowers." J. F.

Curtis, aged 4, is not the sort to be tricked by the statements of his elders. The other evening in Saugatuck, where the family is summering, his auntie came out on the porch and, looking up, exclaimed, "O see the beautiful new moon!" "New moon!" said the little critic, a world of scorn in his tone, "that ain't a new moon. It's years an' years old. We always have it in Chicago." L. M. B.

A small boy was away from home for the first time on a visit to his aunt. She asked, "Aren't you afraid of getting homesick?" "I won't get homesick," he replied. "I don't have to be afraid to ask for something to eat, do I, Aunt Mary?"

One day when my sister's little boy, age 3 years, was swinging in his swing on the porch, holding his kitty in his arms, my sister was frightened to hear a fall, and, looking out the window, said, "What is the matter, Chester—did you hurt yourself?" He was frightened and said, "No, I didn't, but that's the time the cat got white in the face."

MRS. A. W. FARRINGER,

Billy had broken his arm, and to take his mind from the accident we decided to give him a day at the circus.

"I'm sorry you can't go," I remarked to his sister, aged 5, "but this is to a party for hurt ones, only."

"O, I dess we'll get along without her," Billy remarked cheerfully.

"Well, I guess I can go. You've just hurt my feelings awfully, Billy." E. D. M. C.

Elmer, aged 3, having been out walking with his father, grew tired and asked to be carried. When his father picked him up to carry him he kissed him on the cheek, biting him somewhat. Mary, aged 5, was riding with her father, who is a physician, out into the Charley, aged 5, got into a fight with his small neighbor, ruining a white suit by running out in the rain to punish the offender. His mother, after putting the small boy to bed, said: "Charles, where was your self-control?" Promptly came the answer, between sobs: "Oh, I had plenty of it, but I didn't want to waste it on Archie." E. C. B.

Lois' father was away most of the time. Her mamma was always at home and always busy. Lois lover her papa as much as she did her mamma and longed to have him at home. One morning she said to her aunt: "I don't think its very hard being a father."

Binnie, aged 4, could never remember that two geese were not two gooses, or that a goose was never a geese, so his big brother determined to teach him. Later

While Weigle took Moving Pictures

by Joseph Medill Patterson

S. S. ADRIATIC,
Oct. 17, 1914.

CONFESSION is good for the soul.

I intend to state as briefly and as honestly as I may, how being in a battle affected my psychological processes, concealing neither the great fear that I felt in the firing zone nor my great joy on emerging from it, nor the morbid, inexplicable curiosity that I have since sometimes experienced to know how it would feel to return, briefly, to that zone.

Occasionally it seems to me, even now, that the whole world is divided into two equal parts, the firing zone and the non-firing zone; and as if a normal life should consist of brief excursions from the non-firing zone into the firing zone and back again.

The first time I heard shots in anger was one sunny afternoon in late September, near Lierre, which is near Antwerp. Mr. Weigle, the cinema photographer, and I, were returning in an automobile from a visit to the Belgian outposts when we heard rifle firing and saw half a dozen Belgian soldiers running across a field in open order. We at once jumped out and ran with them.

They seemed to be so victorious, these half dozen. They were running in the direction of the enemy, eagerly, ardently. We would not hesitate to join them because it was so clear that they were bound to conquer; so we ran along with what we supposed was the extreme advanced skirmish line to attack the Germans, having in our hands our cameras.

It happened so quickly that there was no chance to think at all. We simply joined these skirmishers because we had confidence in them. We saw that they were terribly eager to fight and shoot and kill. Their confidence bred confidence in us.

It turned out soon that they were shooting at a German aeroplane about three miles off. They had as much chance to hit it with their bullets as I had to hit it with a rock.

However, it went to show me something of what morale means to a recruit. If he thinks he is on the winning side he is worth several times what he is if he thinks he is on the losing side.

Two or three days later we found the battle we had traveled so far to find. The afternoon before it began a strange premonition passed over Antwerp. It wasn't that Antwerp knew there was to be fighting within a few hours; the secret was too well kept by the Belgian staff for that; but Antwerp sensed it. I went to the beautiful Cathedral of Our Lady that afternoon, and it was crowded with solemn, passionate people begging God for mercy and victory. War was in the air laden with hope and hatred and fear.

Greatly to my surprise, I slept well that night. I wasn't surprised at Weigle's doing so. He is just ten years younger than I and imperturbable. And it is well known in war that the younger man with more years and life to lose is more willing to lose them.

In the morning we took the customary road to Termonde, over the long pontoon bridge across the Scheldt, past numerous road patrols who stopped us for the word. The word that day was "France," and it was whispered to each patrol, who said "Bon," and the auto shot ahead.

After an hour we heard distant firing. It gave us all a shock. The car passed. We looked at each other, listened for the directions, then we went in that direction. We were all rather silent.

The firing was then about five miles off, I think. As we traversed that five miles it seemed to me that gradually everything was being stripped from me. My possessions, my education, my friends, my family successively departed from me and all that was left in the world was myself. Weigle, who sat beside me, grew far off, the pictures he might or might not take of slight consequence, the story I might write of little importance, and the stories I might tell to friends afterwards, if there was to be an afterwards, of no importance at all. All that was left on earth was myself and that accumulating noise of firing.

When I left America to see if I could see something of the war I meant firmly not to get in range of bullets. I meant to stand on a convenient hill with a pair of powerful field glasses, to one side and in the rear of the officers of the staff, and see the battle unroll before me as one would see a sublimated football game.

But in that part of Belgium there are no hills; the country is flat and cut up by many rows of high trees. There was no place to go with field glasses. Then we came to the staff officers of the Third division sitting in wicker chairs around a table. Near by was a covered wagon full of clicking telegraph instruments. The shooting was still far off; and if we stayed there we would be almost surely safe, but we would see nothing whatever. Yet I had agreed with myself to go no further than staff officers' headquarters.

My mind seemed to clog and work very slowly and stiffly. Should I tell Weigle I would get out here and that he might go on and take as many pictures as he wanted, wherever he wanted—or should I——?

The question was settled for me. While slowly debating it, the chauffeur gave the word to the patrol, and the car moved on, toward the firing. That seemed to be the turning point in my psychological processes. Previous to that, as I said, myself seemed all there was left in the world. But now when we left the staff officers and passed beyond them into that supremely mysterious region where death was playing tag, myself as I know myself and as every one ordinarily knows himself, changed.

It seemed to become a bluish, smoky flame about eighteen inches high, not clear and not steady and not very strong. It was eighteen inches tall, perhaps a foot across, but without thickness, like a flame from an old fashioned gas fixture.

I think it was because I am growing fat and past 35 that the flame was not stronger, clearer, whiter, and more beautiful. Age and fat seemed to clog it, it did not leap, it guttered. It was a sluggish flame.

And as the firing got always louder and the soldiers whom we passed were ever in an attitude of greater readiness, all there was in the whole universe was this sluggish flame and one particular bullet. And the only question in the whole universe was whether that bullet would meet that flame and extinguish it. I tried to force myself to think appropriate thoughts—what would become of my family and that probably in the long run they wouldn't be much if any worse off, but to mix a metaphor terribly, I could think such thoughts only with my lips. Inside I couldn't think at all. I could only wonder, wonder with a depth of emotion I didn't believe any human capable of, whether the bullet and the flame would meet.

My will was paralyzed—I couldn't turn to Weigle and say, "Look here, I never intended to go on the actual firing line and that's where we are going as fast as this car will take us. I leave you here." For some reason—shame, I suppose—I couldn't say that. I simply sat in the car helpless and silent and listened to the ever increasing roar.

It was a mad and hideous world, and for some reason I didn't know why, the other two people in the car were taking my flame to the very edge of blackness, and for some reason I didn't know why it was altogether beyond my power to ask them not to do it.

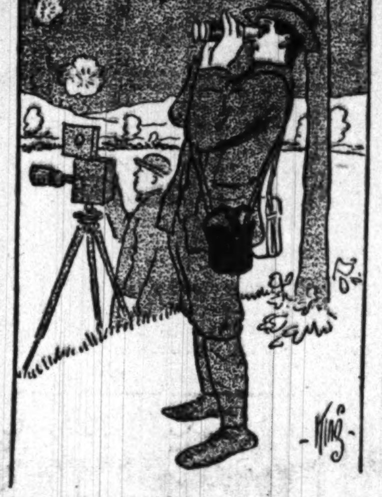
Suddenly the car made a turn behind a small brick railroad station. It hadn't actually stopped when five freshly wounded Belgian soldiers seemed to fall or be shoved into it and we were shoved out. I don't know how it happened. I remember taking the leg of one of the wounded men to lift him into the car and he screamed. I had taken the wounded leg. Several people frowned at me; one struck me, I think. The car was filled with wounded and then drove off. We didn't see it again for two hours.



"I meant to stand on a convenient hill."

The noise now was continuous. The horrible shrapnel screamed and wailed over head, and the rifles never ceased. It was not volley firing but "at will."

In different directions could be heard the rattling of machine guns, which sounded like automatic riveters at work on the skeletons of skyscrapers. The rattling would last about two seconds, then pause two seconds, then rattle two seconds, and so on for perhaps a minute at a time.

The Belgian soldiers were passing back over the road we had come, and finally the last of them passed the railroad station. Weigle meanwhile was arranging his cinema camera. How I hated it, the Frankenstein, for it weighs fifty pounds and the bag of impedimenta that goes with it weighs forty pounds, and I had agreed to carry that.

How could a miserable flame like mine be burdened with forty pounds more?

I said that the last of the Belgian soldiers passed us going back. I didn't know it at first, but finally realized it when a Belgian armored automobile carrying a machine gun took position in the road directly opposite to us to cover the retreat. From them I learned that they were the last of the Belgian forces. The next field was where the fighting had been until within fifteen minutes and where the wounded men had come from and taken our automobile away from us and left us afoot between the lines.

Now the armored automobile backed up a quarter of a mile and we were in a position that even now, a good many days afterwards, I can see was not particularly safe.

A few slight vestiges of my mentality returned to me. "Weigle," said I, "do you know that one of the first principles of warfare is to follow up a retreat vigorously? Well, if the Germans follow up this retreat vigorously the first people they'll reach will be you and me, and you look like an English soldier in that filthy khaki."

He made some idiotic remark about taking pictures, and then every oath I had ever heard in my life gushed from my lips. Then we both retreated in good order. That is, we didn't run; we couldn't, carrying the cinema camera and its bag of impedimenta.

At one point I proposed to Weigle that he throw his camera in the ditch. I promised to buy him another later out of my own money if he would. He smiled at me. I believe it would be easier to separate him from his hands than his hands from the cinema camera. So we trudged along that half mile of exposed road, he carrying his fifty pound camera and I carrying the forty pound bag of impedimenta. As soon as we got well started on retreat my mind left me again. It was the flame and the bullet as before, except that the flame was lower and more turgid, and whenever a shrapnel shell screamed by the flame seemed to be blown over to the oblique. A shrapnel case holds 252 bullets and the case itself also breaks up. A shrapnel bursting thirty feet above ground is supposed to kill everything within twenty yards forward and ten yards sidewise.

Whenever one burst pretty near me—within 200 or 300 yards—the flame seemed to blow over until it was quite flat and horizontal. Almost to my surprise then it would right itself again and several times I had strength enough to say viciously to Weigle, "You said you wanted to hear shrapnel burst near you. Well, you heard that one, didn't you?"

If the German artillery had had the range on that road filled with the retreating Belgian column they could have done enormous damage. But they were "searching." I suppose they thought the Belgians were deployed in the fields on each side of the road, for it seemed to me that the shells were bursting in the fields bordering the road, but not in the road itself. At least I didn't know of any that burst on the road, yet a few minutes afterwards I saw a number of branches from roadside trees that had been cut off by bullets and dropped leafy and green on the granite paving blocks. I can do nothing but estimate, of course, but I don't think that thirty consecutive seconds went by when a shrapnel wasn't exploding somewhere within half a mile.

My emotional possibilities by this time were nearly exhausted. It seemed as if I had been walking for all eternity carrying a square black suitcase weighing forty pounds, and that so I would walk for all eternity. A shrapnel explosion, if not too near, now hardly caused my flame to flicker. Myself said dully to my flame at each explosion, "Well, that one didn't get you anyway"—but the flame didn't seem to care very much. It was exhausted and low and even more than ever sluggish.

The half mile walk was over. I came to where the road turned and saw that at the turn were masked Belgian trenches, equipped also with machine guns. If the Germans came up that road they would be drenched with lead. I followed the turn in the road to a little village. There the Belgian troops were resting.

Where had I lost Weigle? I don't know. Simply he wasn't with me any longer. The suitcase weighed beyond the weight of Pelion and Ossa now. I got a drink of water from a peasant. All I know of him is that his house was number 26. I left the suitcase there—and I was safe almost.

I only had twenty-eight miles to walk to Antwerp and ten dozen patrols to pass, but what were such minor difficulties? I was free and I was safe.

Then it seemed that all the heavy burdens of all humanity descended slowly to crush me, as if all the woes of all the ages were accumulating themselves upon my sick and weary spirit. For—where was Weigle? "What do I care where he is?" I asked fiercely of myself. "Why hasn't he walked? He has two legs as well as I."

But the answer wouldn't do, try as I would to make it. Ages of conventionality in me spoke and said that I could not go away and leave him. I wanted to—I tried to—but as everything that had happened to me in the last hour had come from below the plane of reason, so this mandate also came from below the plane of reason, and it was imperative.

I must find Weigle. I must return into that hell zone of fire and find Weigle because he had been base and criminal enough to remain there.

I took up the labor of Sisyphus once more; my poor sluggish flame took the place of me, and with slow, short, uncertain steps I passed back along that road. The fire had slackened and seemed farther off. If it had not been for that I could not have gone back to find Weigle or my eternal salvation; for the effort that I made took all I had to the last milligram.

Weigle was about a quarter of a mile from the bend in the road, taking cover behind an empty château, doing something to his camera.

"Weigle," said I, "your bag is in No. 26 around that bend in the road. Of course, you know that you're still between the lines?"

"Yes," said he, "but this is a good place for pictures."

Then Weigle appeared to me as a huge, hideous, and devouring ogre and I hated him with a hatred inexpressible. Why should I have anything to do with an insensate clod like that? Why had I ever seen him?

"A good place for pictures." It was impossible even to attempt to reply to words so abominable, so callous, vile, and monstrous. I veered and tacked uncertainly about looking for cover. O where should I go if the uhlans or a German mitrailleuse came up the road? Where could I possibly go that they wouldn't see me? Was there any place in the world that they couldn't see me? I didn't believe there was.

Then happened the miracle—the Belgians returned. They passed us—the whole entire brigade were taking the firing line beyond us. I sat in the grass by the roadside sweating, panting, and gasping, no longer a bluish guttering flame, but once more a human being.

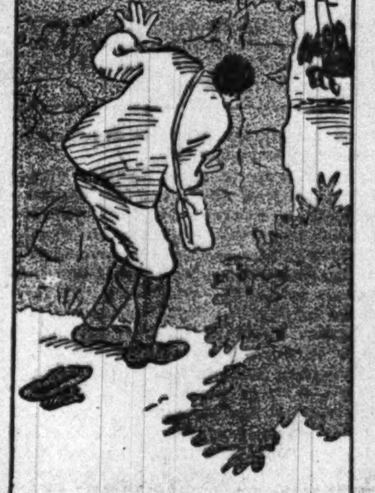
As I afterward learned the Germans were struck on their left by a flanking force almost at the instant their fire had prevailed over the Belgians in front of them whom I was with. This accounted for their not following up vigorously and for the gradual diminution of their artillery fire.

But a novice on the firing line knows nothing of such things as flank movements miles away. He knows only his own side and the enemy (who is almost always invisible nowadays) shooting at each other as fast as possible. But whether the enemy be visible or not, the battle depends today precisely as it always has, on which side will give and take the most killing.



"I stayed exactly where I was."

The automobile came back. The driver of it whom I didn't like, nor ever shall, had pluck. He would go anywhere to pick up one of his wounded countrymen. A fog—gray, thick—indeed a regular ordinary looking fog—seems to cover up what happened for the next half hour. I don't remember much but flashes here and there when the fog briefly blew away, the troops deploying across the field, the lancers cantering in single file, silhouetted against the setting sun. They evidently expected fire to come from the bit of woods they were approaching. I wasn't approaching it. I stayed exactly where I was—all but one eye behind a wall and that eye behind it, too, twenty-nine seconds out of the thirty.

Half a mile away, probably farther, the soldiers disappeared into the wood and the cavalry had disappeared somewhere into the sunset. The Germans weren't in the edge of the woods, after all.

Then another interval, while I wandered slowly in a vast and hostile void. I think I would walk back a distance and then retrace my steps, as if drawn by two great cables, first in one direction, then in the other.

The automobile reappeared, coming for more wounded. One or two they got into it while I stood vacantly by. The noise of firing was still almost continuous, but I no longer heard shrapnel bursting and whining near me.

Then they seemed to have difficulty with one of the wounded. A terrific and startling revelation burst over me, something amazingly new and original. Why not help them get that wounded man in the car?

I ran out through the heavy field, but I ran, as ever, sluggishly. There was the evidence of shrapnel. Four dead in utter and horrible disfigurement and three wounded. Seemingly it all came from one burst, the men were huddled so closely together.

I took one handle of the stretcher. The wounded man's face was gray, his fingers were plucking at the brass buttons of his blouse, just as they say dying fingers pluck at the counterpane when people die in bed.

The Red Cross youth said it was no use to bother with this one, so we laid him down behind a hedge to die and took in his place on the stretcher another who might live.

But this little activity, this little doing something, seemed to revive me. The fog had lifted again and I could see the world I knew, because I had been doing something besides think of myself. The idle rich, the idle poor, and the idle scared all get the worst of it.

I have since been told by officers that except for people of unusual and singular coolness of temperament, which I have not, it is only the activity and passion of combat, the lust to conquer the enemy, that makes it possible for men to endure battle. I don't know whether this is true or not, but it seems probable. To be in a battle with no chance to kill in return for your chance of being killed is like staking all your earthly possessions against nothing on the turn of a card; like going into a prize ring handcuffed against the champion.

The automobile disappeared again, the fog descended, and after a time I found myself again beside the inexplicable Weigle. He had been taking pictures of a Belgian battery in action. It seemed so hopeless to see with my own eyes and know with my own heart that there were such people in the world as Weigle. Why should any one wish to take pictures of a Belgian battery in action?

It grew dusk. The explosions from the Belgian cannon looked like long red pencils. I have used this figure of speech before, but I can't help it. All that those explosions will ever remind me of in this world will be long red pencils.

Then another blur; then we were giving cigarets to the gunners, who had just ceased firing. I remember how black their hands were.

Then the order came for them to limber up and retreat.

I think that was the lowest moment of the day for me. It seemed that wherever I went the Belgians retreated and left me behind. Besides, they had horses to go with and I was afoot.

At that moment I saw the whole design of my existence, like a piece of embroidery. Ever since the moon was nebulous it had been ordained that I, Joseph Medill Patterson, at the age of 35, should be buried in a potato field near Antwerp.

The guns rumbled away from me on the canter. It was a battery of four guns, with limbers and caissons. I walked slowly over the potato field that was to be my bed that night and all nights. The illusion of being a flame eighteen inches by twelve had departed, and the fog had vanished, too.

I was, in a way, normal, but very tired and discouraged. The potato field was soggy with rain, and I sank in an inch or two at each step. So closely are our spirits—the spirits of some of us—intertwined with our bodies that my fate seemed additionally miserable because the potato field was wet. I should have preferred to lie in it dry.

Then another miracle, completely unbelievable. Here were the automobile, the chauffeur, Weigle, and I, all in the same place at the same time in the darkness, with no wounded to carry off our places. Apparently I wasn't to die—I who had counted myself dead already. We drove rapidly back to Antwerp.

The following day we were in the firing zone again, in and out of it all day long. Again we heard the shrapnel break and shriek near us; we saw it knock tiles from roofs in Alost within fifty yards, and again I was much afraid.

But I was not on the second day reduced to the same state of pulp as the day before.

In spite of the hideous wounds in the dead and dying, of which we saw many, at times I could almost make myself think that, as far as concerned me at least, all this firing was a bluff. I had heard the same noises yesterday and nothing had happened to me. Why should any more harm come to me out of the same noises today?

This wasn't my usual state of mind; as a rule I was afraid, but also I had my moments when I entertained the soldier's superstition that the bullet wasn't molded which could touch me.

But my fears on this second day were ordinary, recognizable human fears and terrors; at no time did I turn into a blue flame nor wander aimless in a fog. Once some rifle bullets went by overhead. They sounded like the brief hum of mosquitoes. I am told that when you hear a rifle bullet say "zing" it must be within fifty or sixty feet—and the longer the "zing" sounds the farther off it is. If it says "zing" very short and sharp it is within a few feet. All the "zings" I heard were fairly well drawn out.

However, I can only say that compared to the distant throbbing roar, followed by the burst and the whine of shrapnel, the tiny "zing" of the rifle bullet, though actually more dangerous, doesn't inspire the same awful respect. Again I notice the connection between spirit and body. The paralyzing noise of shrapnel pounds and stuns one's auditory nerves with physical assault; the slight "zing" of the rifle does not.

Shrapnel, when it kills, maims horribly; rifle bullets usually do not. And though you may see two soldiers side by side before you equally dead, both of whom from the nature of their wounds must have died instantly, yet death seems to have come in an infinitely more dreadful way to the poor fellow whose head, face, and shoulder had been pulled to pieces by a fragment of shrapnel case than to the other who had only a clean little hole in his heart.

Comment by Mme. X.

By Mme. X.

THERE is great danger that the society women of Chicago, sheltering themselves behind the hue and cry of hard times and of the need to give to the needy and suffering at home and abroad, are making unjustifiable retrenchments. It must not be forgotten that even better than out and out charity is the giving of employment to labor—the helping a man or woman to help himself or herself.

When a well known dressmaker says that, on account of a falling off of custom, she has to lay off sixteen sewing girls and it is reported that one of the large shops has had to let go 1,600 of its clerks and other employés, while another establishment is said to be giving its employés five days' work a week instead of six, it means great hardship to many more than the number indicated.

Fewer salespeople means fewer sales made, which means smaller orders to the manufacturer, which means fewer people employed and less material used by them, hence fewer sales by the purveyors of raw materials. So the whole structure is affected by a woman who economizes needlessly.

Of course there are many households whose financial resources are seriously affected by the present unfortunate times, but we Americans are prone to do things in chorus. If the standard of living is high and extravagant, as it has been up to recently, no one mentions poverty or not being able to afford a thing as a reason for a certain course of action. But when the cry of hard times goes in the land every one takes it up and makes it an excuse for tightening the purse strings. This is no time for hoarding, any more than it would be good policy to be extravagant and spend for display.

Local charities are complaining of unusual shortage this year in their money supply. Many of their regular contributors are really feeling poor. Others are dividing their customary donations to benevolent purposes between local and foreign needy. The Chicago Lying-In hospital, which has no endowment fund at all, but relies on voluntary contributions, had last month only $77 to meet its expenses. A year ago its monthly reports showed, I think, $300 received for that month.

Mrs. Fairbank and her board are planning an entertainment in December to raise a goodly sum for this excellent charity. The Russian dancers, with Pavlowa as chief attraction, and the Aborn opera troupe in "Pagliacci" will be presented at the Auditorium. The promoters of this undertaking hope to raise enough to run the hospital and to go on with their fine new building. Their record in successful births is unmatched the world over.

The tea dance being organized for next Wednesday afternoon at the Midway gardens by Mrs. William Prescott Hunt, Miss Mary Waller, Mrs. James Morrison, Mrs. John Borden and others promises to be the first real general social function of the season. To overcome the disadvantage of distance for the north side contingent and to add to the sum to be raised for the object of the enterprise, the United Charities, every one who has a motor is going to fill it full of those going to the tea dance and charge each person 50 cents a round trip for transportation.

Sometimes Chicago—our own dear old Chicago—seems to be a shabby, one horse sort of place. Think of how well equipped with motor buses were Paris and London before the war, and New York is today. Yet Russell Tyson, that intrepid and not to be daunted explorer and organizer, ransacked the city from cellar to garret before he found a motor bus.

This sole representative of metropolitan transportation is used in summer to convey members of the Chicago Yacht club across the uncharted wastes of Grant park to the corner of Jackson boulevard and Michigan avenue. On Wednesday it will leave the University club at 4 and again at 5 o'clock, stopping at the Chicago club, and will convey the select crowd of citizens who are clamoring to go to the Midway gardens that afternoon to dance, or play bridge, or to watch what will be a gay and charming affair. The bus will return at 7, and the round trip will be 50 cents.

The bridge tables have been nearly all engaged, although if the demand for them grows excessive more can be put up in the corridors adjacent to the card room.

Mrs. Watson Blair is in charge of the "tea" committee, and the tea service will have the especially chic and Parisian "cachet" she gives to all that she undertakes. Her shop in the historic "Streets of Paris" bazaar was a triumph of smart elegance.

One of the wise, beneficent charities in which Chicago is so rich—and which, alas! in spite of her prosperity she needs so much—is the Chicago Half Orphan asylum. This enterprise began, like so many others, in a small way over half a century ago. In 1860 Mrs. Samuel Howe, Mrs. Catherine West, and Miss Elizabeth A. Blaikie became interested in a family of six half orphans, children of once well to do parents. To give these children a home and the common comforts of life these three charitable women placed them with a poor but capable woman, living on "the sands," as the district near the lake south of Chicago avenue was called. This proved to be the beginning of what has grown into a great and notable institution.

The object of the asylum is "to give to such children of the worthy poor as are deprived by death, or other cause, of the protection and support of either parent, a temporary, comfortable home with educational advantages according to their age, in a home kindergarten or in a public school." Except in destitute cases the surviving parent pays a small weekly fee and the child ultimately returns to his or her parent.

A new building is in course of construction on North Foster avenue. The finance committee was raising money toward this structure when came hard times and war, and everything was at a standstill for the endeavor toward a new home for the half orphans. Then came the generous gift, already chronicled in the daily papers, of $70,000 from Mrs. Charles A. Chapin and her children to be devoted to the new building. This sum came from a legacy of $200,000 left by the late Charles A. Chapin to be distributed to charity by his family.

A recent wedding of interest was that of Miss Alice Nichols Tyler, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. H. Fay Tyler of 7847 Winneconna avenue, to William De Garmo Turner Jr. Both the bride and bridegroom are well known in the University of Chicago circles, Mr. Turner having graduated from the university within recent years, and Mrs. Turner having been connected with the Harper Memorial library staff for the last four years. Miss Dorothea Schmidt and Miss Marie Park were the bridesmaids at the wedding, and the four small girl attendants were Carol Augur, Winifred Frost, Ruth Stratman, and Mary Hamilton. Mr. and Mrs. Turner will live at 7845 Winneconna avenue.

News of Chicago Society

To old Chicagoans—and there are more of them than you would think in this intensely "to the moment" city—the announcement that Miss Roxana Wentworth Bowen of New York is visiting her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Moses Wentworth, 1240 Lake Shore drive, recalls many memories of days long dead when her grandfather, the late John Wentworth, was a prominent figure here.

He arrived in Chicago in 1836, before we were even an incorporated city. He soon became a conspicuous personage here, his ability, energy, and great height combining to make him so. The latter characteristic earned him the sobriquet of "Long John" Wentworth. He was one of the editors of Chicago's first newspaper, the Chicago Democrat. In 1857 he was elected mayor on the Republican ticket. That was the year that Lincoln ran as Republican candidate for the United States senate against the "little giant," Stephen A. Douglas.

Mr. Wentworth was one of the old type of city official, energetic, public spirited, autocratic, and utterly independent of political ties. He quelled promptly and effectually an incipient riot begun by the volunteer fire department to protest against his installing a paid fire department. On another occasion he ordered the police to apply the torch to the "Patch," a disreputable squatters' colony on the sands east of Michigan avenue at the foot of Twelfth street, the haunt of tramps and other lawless members of society. The denizens of the "Patch" had refused to move and the mayor, tired of futile efforts to dislodge them, took this effective means to rout them. It might not have been entirely legal, but he was sustained in his course by the foremost citizens of Chicago. He belonged to the era of William B. Ogden, J. Young Scammon, Judge Mark Skinner, Isaac N. Arnold, Norman B. Judd, Edward I. Tinkham, Joseph T. Ryerson, and others.

An event of great importance from the point of view of an influential group of Chicagoans is the arrival on last Friday of Mme. Vandervelde, the wife of the Belgian secretary of state, who comes to tell us of the tragic fate of her people. For, though she is English by birth, being a member of the well known banking family, the Speyers, of London and New York, she is a Belgian through and through. Her husband is one of the principal Socialists of Europe. At the same time he is King Albert of Belgium's stanchest admirer and adherent.

Mme. Vandervelde while here is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Millard at their residence at Highland Park, preferring the quiet of the country to the noise and tumult of the city. Carrying as she does in her heart the heavy burden of grief she has asked all those to whom she brought letters to excuse her from any social entertainments. She is not strong and wishes to save all her energies for the task to which she has consecrated herself, the telling of the story of Belgian sorrows.

The committee on arrangements is composed of Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, Mrs. W. J. Chalmers, Mrs. John Sherman, Mrs. Charles Wouters, Mrs. Charles Henrotin, Mrs. James Keeley, Miss Jane Addams, Miss Ellen Starr, Hobart Chatfield-Taylor, Charles Hutchinson, C. C. Curtiss, E. V. Millard, Mitchell Follansbee, Dr. Cyrille Vermeren (Belgian consul), and Charles F. Harding.

Her first opportunity to speak will be at the Sunday Evening club at Orchestra hall tonight. Tuesday night she will address a meeting at Schoenhofen hall in Milwaukee avenue. This will be under the auspices of the Belgian society here aided by St. George's society and the St. Andrew brotherhood and the French society. Wednesday morning she is to meet Mrs. C. M. Ely's sewing circle, which gathers once a week at Mrs. Harold McCormick's residence to sew for the Belgians and for the Chicago United Charities. Thursday afternoon Mrs. W. J. Chalmers and others are giving a reception for her in the crystal ballroom at the Blackstone, when she will speak.

It is to be hoped that the profound sympathy Chicago feels for this unfortunate people will be generously expressed in practical, material form.

Apropos of this William J. Chalmers received last Wednesday an eighty word cable from Mr. Hoover, who is leading the Belgian relief in Brussels, which told him that the real fact was that in six days Belgium, if no relief was forthcoming, would be literally starving; that the bread line was over a million souls (and hungry bodies), and that soon there would be no bread. "Don't send clothes," he said, "send food."

It was in a fashionable and well known dressmaking establishment that I heard the following dialogue:

Said the customer: "There, I like that model; but can't you put a military touch to it? I think the military is so pretty and becoming."

"O," said the head designer, "the men dressmakers did so hope that the ladies would not ask for any military modes. This war is too terrible to be reflected in fashions."

Don't forget the thought in that, you women seeking new and striking effects!

Also don't forget to vote on Tuesday. The trustees of the sanitary district, the judges of the Municipal courts, and the tax assessors are all well within the domain of your needs and interests even if you can't help elect Miss Mary McDowell, Miss Harriet Vittum, and Alexander McCormick.

The two women candidates for the county board are to speak tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. James W. Morrison, 719 Rush street, on the issues of the coming election.

NEW YORK SOCIETY—Youth and Jollity Will Have Their Day Despite the War.

By Mme. Y.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Witches and hobgoblins, elves and fairies, flames and fiery tongues, pumpkins and apples, all mystically ushered in Halloween at Gracefield, the beautiful country home at Great Neck, Long Island, of Mrs. William R. Grace. With its rites and observances, not the least among which is the forecasting—nay, the veritable images—of their particular Prince Charmings, the pretty society girls who are to make their formal bows to formal functions kindled the bonfires that are to burn for them the coming season.

War may make its terrible commentary on our twentieth century civilization, fortunes may sink into the melting pot, but youth and jollity will have their day. And Halloween, with its vigils and its prophecies, is a favorite with them.

The only concession that the stirring times demanded was that of paid admission to this, the last bewitching frolic of the country season. With rings on their fingers and bells on their toes, they halted their broomstick parade and emptied their pockets for the benefit of the destitute Belgians. Joan Sawyer danced, a southern orchestra played, young witches and hobgoblins sold souvenirs, and elves and fairies charmed away many a slippery dollar from the guests.

The Joseph P. Graces were not there, for they sailed this week on the Mauretania for a month in London. But the William Russell Graces had returned from their honeymoon. They had intended to be gone on a two years' trip around the world, but the war changed that plan.

Although many of the debutantes make their first appearance at the annual Tuxedo dance, which comes this year on Nov. 9, the first presentation was made Friday evening, when Mr. and Mrs. W. Pierson Hamilton introduced their daughter, Miss Helen Morgan Hamilton, to society. The event was a dinner and dance for over a hundred guests at their country place, Table Rock, in Sterlington, N. Y., not far from Tuxedo. As there are ninety rooms in this country residence, most of the young guests went by special train and remained over Saturday.

The season at Tuxedo is later than usual this year, as many who usually go to the continent are remaining in this country. So a large number of house parties were arranged for the debut of Miss Hamilton, among them one by Mrs. Edward H. Harriman at Arden house.

It will be remembered that Miss Hamilton is the granddaughter of the late J. Pierpont Morgan. She is attractive and popular and is a suitable herald for the debutante pageant which will follow.

Among the debutantes to be presented later is Miss Frances Morgan, who is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan Jr.

One of the most notable presentations to society will be that of Miss Alice Gwynne, who is a namesake and grandniece of Mrs. Vanderbilt. She is the only daughter of the late Edward Erskine Gwynne, and has but recently returned with her mother from France, where they have been living for several years.

Among other debutantes are Miss Dorothy Haight, daughter of Mrs. William Burgoyne Haight, who will be presented at a reception at the Plaza, and Miss Barbara Thaw, who will be presented at an afternoon dance at the Cosmopolitan club by her mother, Mrs. Alexander Blair Thaw. Miss Marian Tiffany, daughter of Mrs. Henry Fletcher Godfrey, will make her debut at a large dance to be given by her mother at Sherry's. This will not be until late in the season, however, as Mrs. Godfrey is now in mourning.

One of the most notable weddings of the week was that of Miss Sallie McCall, who was married on Tuesday to Nicholas Conway of Troy. Mrs. Conway is a niece of Edward C. McCall. The ceremony was performed by Mgr. Lewis in St. Francis de Sales church, and it was followed by a reception at the St. Regis.

Not only has the war hastened some marriages but it has indefinitely postponed others. W. G. Stewart Grant, who was to have been married in the early spring to Miss Elizabeth Klapp, sailed on the Mauretania to join the British forces at the front as a volunteer. Mr. Grant is the son of Capt. and Mrs. W. A. Grant of Westergate house, Sussex, England. Capt. Grant, now retired from active service in the British army, was a captain in the Thirteenth Hussars.

Miss Klapp had been spending some time in Havana, Cuba, with her mother, but came to see Mr. Grant sail.

It is as impossible to get away from "benefits," as it is from war. At the Red Cross bazaar, Miss Anne Morgan was an energetic inciter of knitting. Stitches fly thick and fast. Women in society are mad about knitting for the warriors.

THURSDAY will be gala day for the members of the Arché club, for it will be the occasion of its annual luncheon, which will be held this year at the South Shore Country club at 1 o'clock. Mrs. Charles E. Caldwell, president of the club, will preside.

The subject for discussion will be "Our Present Obligation." The Rev. A. J. McCartney, Edgar Cameron, Benedict Pepol, and Mrs. Frederick A. Dow will present the subject from the viewpoints of life, art, drama, and woman's clubs. Miss [illegible] Jonani, lyric soprano of the Chicago-Philadelphia Opera company, will sing two groups of songs.

This will be the twenty-sixth season of the club, which was formed in 1888. Its members then numbered eighteen and its purpose was the study of art. At the second meeting of this circle of eighteen the name Arché was chosen for the club. The word is Greek and signifies "from the beginning."

At first the club's activities were the study of art through the reading of books and preparing of papers, but in 1898 the club had grown so that it was thought best to have an instructor. The membership roll had reached a total of 600 and the club was forced to move to larger quarters.

Later still classes in art, literature, music, and philanthropy were formed, which were rapidly filled and have been ever since an especially attractive and appreciated feature of the club.

A young woman's auxiliary was added for the mutual enjoyment of the mothers and daughters in the club.

In its seventeenth season the Arché club, having outgrown in succession the University Congregational church, Rosalie hall, and Grand Boulevard hall, finally chose Lincoln center as its meeting place. It has sent delegates to the exhibition committee of the Municipal Art league, the Cook County league, the Public School Art league, the Out of Door Art league, and the Juvenile court, giving them all its financial support.

It has sent from its classes eight traveling libraries—four on art, three on modern literature, and one a special collection of Shakespeare. The art department of this club has perhaps done more than any other one institution to foster and encourage municipal art. The first celebration of the development of art in Chicago was held under its auspices at the Chicago Historical Society building.

Nor has the philanthropy department been idle. From its inception it has contributed generously to the support of the Sarah Hackett Stevenson memorial, formerly known as the Woman's Model Lodging house, to the Jackson Park Sanitarium, and to the vacation school. Besides this it has done a number of other things which though less in the public eye are none the less needed and useful.

The officers of the Arché club are: Mrs. Charles E. Caldwell, president; Mrs. Howard H. Gross, first vice president; Mrs. Joseph M. Steele, second vice president; Mrs. Albert Elwell, recording secretary; Mrs. William Bradley, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Fred Menge, treasurer.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS.

The Chicago Woman's club will hold its regular literary meeting on Wednesday in the Fine Arts theater. The subject for the afternoon is "Vocational Training in Illinois." The speakers are Mrs. Edwin G. Cooley and Mrs. Ella Flagg Young. The Sunday afternoon concerts, under the auspices of the club, are now being held every Sunday in Fullerton hall, Art institute, at 3 and 4:15 o'clock, and a third concert is given in the evening at 8. The home, education, philanthropy, and reform departments will have a joint meeting Wednesday morning in the assembly room. The program is to be given by the philanthropy department on the topic, "The Provision for the Deficient Delinquent." The speaker will be Dr. W. J. WOMEN AND THE WAR.

Women Readers All for Peace but Equally Divided as to Whether the United States Should Have a Greater Army and Navy to Insure It.

WOMEN—WHAT DO YOU THINK OF WAR?

Are you in favor of a larger army and navy?

Which spirit do you think should be fostered in the young American mind—the spirit of war or the spirit of peace?

Will you use your voting power for disarmament or militarism when woman's voice in the government becomes universal?

The Tribune wants to know your views on war. One dollar will be paid for every letter published. Contributions should not exceed 200 words. Address Women's Editor, Sunday Tribune.

IN last Sunday's issue THE TRIBUNE invited its women readers to express their views on war. Mothers, sisters, and daughters of men were asked especially to write their opinions on one of the most vital questions in America today—whether or not the United States should have a larger army and navy.

The streams of letters received in response to the invitation prove that American women are terribly alive to the sacrifice and tragedy of women during times of war. The letters are almost unanimous for peace—but differ in the method of insuring peace.

In half of the letters received the theory of a greater American army and navy is advanced as the best means of forestalling foreign invasion and assuring peace in this country. In other letters it is argued that the moral effect of a large army and navy is to invite military entanglement with foreign power and foster the spirit of bloodshed instead of the spirit of brotherly love.

We want to hear from every woman reader of THE TRIBUNE on this great question. You must have at some time since the war across the water began faced in your mind the probability of your son, your brother, your father, or your sweetheart being ordered to the battlefield. What were your sentiments? Were they of horror and revolt at a system that encourages the shedding of a nation's blood or were they of patriotism that submerged everything else?

Tell us what you think about it.

Some of the letters received follow:

Well, Is She in Favor of a Greater Army and Navy?

The inclosed bold appeal to whatever is selfish in woman, worded to mislead the superficial feminine, impresses your admirers as inconsistent with the general tone of the world's greatest newspaper, whose claim it is not to approve of the commercialization of the baser attributes of human nature. We grant THE TRIBUNE is not in business solely for the uplift of humanity; your paper may be primarily a money making institution, but the section devoted to subjects intended to interest women in particular is in some instances an insult to the intelligence and best principles of good women.

There is not one comment in this column that makes a noble suggestion to the reader; each is a direct appeal to self, nothing more. The intention appears to be to cause the mind of the reader to dwell on the horrors of war and promptly to reply that she does not want it. Shrewd lawyers may successfully place the answer to their question in the mouth of their witness, but why such a procedure here? Why not invite a debate on the present political question of increase of army and navy?

If you want to discuss the horrors of war why speak of them as causing unspeakable suffering to womankind? No intelligent woman imagines her suffering in war any greater than the trifling ordeal of her brother or husband who faces fire at the front. And why not help the unintelligent to see the truth? Tennyson spoke a truth patent to all minds when he wrote, "Woman's cause is man's; they rise or sink together, dwarfed or godlike, bond or free." Then why should a high toned paper, boasting its refusal to print whisky ads, endeavor to increase its income through capitalization of the petty nature of such women as will respond to this direct appeal to selfishness?

Your section for women is far from the standard set forth in your general editorials. There is no better place to stimulate the higher nature and get political results worthy of the effort than in your section for women. More is the pity that instead of using the opportunity to invite intelligent consideration of popular subjects, your space should be so taken up with the opposite result.

Superficial, narrow newspaper work like this is not profitable in the long run, morally or commercially, as the public, even the trailing feminine part of it, appreciates better things. Why not have your section for women so conducted as to appeal to better women and to the better nature of all women, stimulating them to the courage of their convictions? Woman may be used as a power for good if newspapers will take advantage of their opportunity, for the majority of women have the innate wish to excel when the way is pointed out.

MRS. J. W. HAYS.

No Bugle Call.

War is an unspeakable monstrosity, and I believe in time, when women can wield full power, which will be here by right government, she will do much to sustain and prohibit warfare.

Woman's nature rebels at the thought of conquest and bloodshed. We mothers will sacrifice much to keep peace in our lives, homes, and country.

Let brotherly love, Christianity, peace, be the slogan of our patriotism, and not the boast of battle; let there be no bugle call to arms, no countless homes made desolate, but let the thoughts of those millions of women weeping for their dead destroy that passion which inspires one to serve his country by killing his fellowmen.

Our human laws are but phantoms of social justice. There is another way. We must rise above the methods of the brute and walk with reason and self-control.

MINNIE HALEY.

For Defense Only.

I am the mother of four sons. I do not believe in war unless we are attacked and have to fight a defensive one, then I would say, "Go, my sons, and defend the flag," but I do not believe in a war of conquest.

Until there is universal peace the army and navy should be put on a footing that will command the respect of all foreign powers and be strong enough to protect our country from invasion, so that if war is forced upon us our land will not be put to the torch and sword like Belgium.

I think the votes of women, in time, will result in the abolishment of war.

MRS. D. H.

Powerful Force Necessary.

I believe a powerful army and navy to be necessary until such time as, by universal consent, men shall be able to reconcile their differences by peaceful means, such as, for example, an international court of arbitration.

However one may deprecate war, it would seem wise to be prepared for all eventualities just so long as racial and other differences shape the motives and standards of men.

Under present conditions, therefore, I feel that the United States should support cheerfully a large military and naval establishment, not to provoke war, but to be ready for it if it come, and, moreover, to compel the respect of the other great nations so that they'll hesitate a long time before waging war against us.

MRS. J. E. B.

Bigger Force Not Needed.

The United States, with its policy of frankness and publicity in diplomatic matters and its democratic form of government, is not in need of a larger standing army and increased navy, our chances of military entanglement with foreign powers being very remote, the reason being obvious to those who have studied the causes of all great conflicts.

A large standing army breeds discontent and fosters an overbearing disposition among the world powers, slightest of excuses bringing on serious ruptures.

Cannot Afford to Be Weak.

The United States, the greatest nation in the world—cannot afford to be weak and fearful. A larger navy and army does not mean war; it means protection; it inspires courage and faith both individually and industrially. I believe that this glorious country should stand first in peace and last in war, with a strong army and navy as an emblem of the faith and strength of the United States.

MRS. D. H. TABBER.

"This Is Not Utopia."

Because I am heartily opposed to war, I favor the immediate and thorough establishment of competent land and naval forces to protect the United States from the causes of war.

This is not Utopia. Might is too frequently right and it is not impossible that the history of Belgium be repeated on a larger scale with the United States enacting the rôle of the unprepared, peace loving, somnolent nation.

It is essentially the part of wisdom that we be prepared. With an all sufficient navy the United States need dread no invasion. Battleships are most effective arguments for peace. We are not prepared now. We have not been prepared in the past. The war with Spain demonstrated the unfitness of our war equipment. It is high time to arouse ourselves to the fact that our lack of readiness is an invitation to foreign cupidity.

We want our looms to run, our mines to pour out their product, our farms to fill the nation's granaries, our commerce to promote the welfare of the nation. To have these blessings of peace we must be prepared for their defense at any time.

MRS. L. B. G.

No Great Force Wanted.

It is the sad memory of witnessing cannon dragged over pavements, of that heart ache when noting the parting of soldiers from their loved ones; of that recall of thousands of troops mobilizing for war; of those fearful dreadnoughts and torpedo boats gliding by our steamer when anchored in the Thames; all are reminders of the terrors of war, that make me long for the day of power vested in woman that make her rise en masse to stay the authority which would create a great American army and navy.

GERMAN NEMO CORSET FACTORY—CLOSED ON ACCOUNT OF THE WAR

OUR NEMO CORSET FACTORY IN GERMANY (see illustration above) is one of the largest on the Continent. We have supplied this factory with all the materials they used in manufacturing Nemo Corsets—American-made fabrics, steels, etc.—which we shipped to them in vast quantities.

Our German factory was forced to close down at the beginning of the war. This left on our hands large quantities of material we had prepared for shipment to them.

Corset fabrics do not improve with age; so we have made up these surplus German materials into a SPECIAL CORSET to sell at a SPECIAL PRICE, far below value.

Thus, the American public will benefit from the great loss we sustain by sacrificing these special materials below purchase price.

This model is very popular all over Europe, where it is sold at prices equivalent to $3 to $4.00. Medium bust. Long skirt, with Lastikops ventilating bandlets at back.

PLEASE NOTE: This is not a regular Nemo model, but a special lot made specially for this Sale; but now, at the height of the Nemo season, all leading stores are showing full lines of the staple and popular Nemo Corset Specialties and many attractive new models at standard prices—$3.00, $4.00 and $5.00.

Why the Rothschild

Sewing Machine Department Is Different and Better.

We make it easy for every woman to have an up-to-date sewing machine by selling the latest and best machines, on the dollar-a-week basis, at about half the prices charged by agents.

By this plan any woman can pay for a new machine several times over in the money she saves by making her own and her children's garments at home instead of buying them ready made or hiring dressmakers.

We offer nearly a dozen different machines, but our leader is

The Wonderful "King," Latest of All Machines.

The King is the product of the most modern sewing machine plant in America. It embodies all the good features of a dozen other modern machines, with none of their mistakes.

Monday special sale of floor samples, several good makes. $25 down to $12.50. $1 down. $1 week.

A Once=in=Ten=Year Sale of Brass Beds

Brass Beds to Sell at Less Than Factory Prices

We call this a Once-in-Ten-Year occasion because it is not at all likely that a brass bed sale of this kind will be repeated again in a good many years.

Kimball & Chapello—one of the greatest brass bed concerns in the world—made us a two-weeks proposition:

They said: "If you will put your furniture organization and your advertising columns to the selling of brass beds, we will let you sell to the public, for two weeks' time, the finest beds we make at factory wholesale prices."

We jumped at the chance. Kimball & Chapello's brass beds are known all over America. They make the genuine brass beds, not the imitation brass-dipped bed, which is like a nickel ring washed with gold.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY By Mme. Z.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special Correspondence.]—With congress finally adjourned and the Tafts gone, weddings are once more the chief interest of Washington society. The Tafts—or rather Mrs. Taft, for the former president was too busy presiding over the sessions of the American Bar association to accept many social attentions—were the center of considerable rather quiet hospitality during the six days of their stay.

Every day there were luncheons and dinners and informal teas in honor of the former first lady. Some days she had to divide her afternoon between two or more functions given with a view to affording as many as possible of her old friends an opportunity of greeting her. The latter part of her stay she was the house guest of Mrs. Garrison McClintock, and managed to dine with her hostess two or three evenings, Mrs. McClintock asking a few friends in each time.

On the whole, it must have been borne in upon Mrs. Taft that she has a good many warm friends in Washington, even if she no longer dispenses White House hospitality, and it is fervently hoped that she will not keep away from the scenes of her four years of brilliant social activity as religiously here after as she has done since the close of her régime.

Washington feels that it has as good a right as New York to be interested in the engagement, announced the other day, of Julia Calhoun and Baron de Nagell of the legation of the Netherlands. For even if Miss Calhoun is daughter of Col. and Mrs. John C. Calhoun of 667 Madison avenue, New York, didn't she spend practically all of last season here, as guest of Mrs. Hunt Slater and Mrs. Frederick Atherton, and with her brother, Capt. J. Edward Calhoun, at the Shoreham? And wasn't it almost entirely a Washington romance, anyhow?

Even if she is a New York girl, she was decidedly a Washington belle last winter, and, moreover, even if the wedding is to take place in New York on Dec. 8, she will be a Washington bride, in the sense that she will make her first home here. Moreover, as the great-granddaughter of John C. Calhoun, the southern statesman of antebellum days, Washington claims a proprietary interest in the young person.

Baron de Nagell—Baron E. de Nagell, as he figures in the diplomatic list—is the son of Baron W. de Nagell of Bornezelt, Holland. He has been attached to the Netherlands legation here for about two years, and served with his country's legation at Peking for three years before that.

MISS MARGUERITE LE BRETON

On Nov. 9 Miss Marguerite Le Breton, daughter of Mrs. Albert Le Breton, will be married to Ralph Stuart Rainsford of Detroit.

On the other hand, the engagement of Miss Marguerite Le Breton to Ralph Stuart Rainsford of Detroit, also recently announced, has attracted comparatively little attention, although she figures as a Washington girl and the wedding is to take place in Washington. She is the daughter of Albert Le Breton, who died recently, and Mrs. Le Breton, and because the family is in deep mourning the wedding, which is to be on Nov. 9, will be a quiet one.

Miss Le Breton somehow isn't well known to Washington. As granddaughter of Admiral McDougal, U. S. N., and sister of Lieut. David McDougal Le Breton, U. S. N., she is, of course, classified as "a navy girl," but that is about all that any one seems to know about her. The wedding is to be at the Le Breton home in Q street, and the young people will live in Detroit, where Mr. Rainsford is in the automobile business.

Mr. Rainsford, as the son of Dr. William S. Rainsford, rector of St. George's, New York, is well known to a good many Washington people, even though he has never lived here. He graduated from Harvard some ten or twelve years ago, and since then has been out west, in California most of the time as a mining engineer, until he recently went into automobiles and moved to Detroit.

MISS JULIA CALHOUN

Miss Julia Calhoun is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Calhoun of New York. She is well known in Washington and is to be married on Dec. 8 to Baron E. de Nagell of the Netherlands legation at the capital.

The really immediately interesting wedding is that of Louise Hellen and Tom Bowers, which takes place—by the time this gets into print will have taken place—at St. John's church on Saturday. All the essential details of that affair have already been printed in this column. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Taft, the latter until recently Miss Martha Bowers, who were married just two weeks earlier at the same church, returned on Thursday from their wedding trip, cut short that they might return and serve as best man and matron of honor at this wedding.

They are guests of Mrs. Lloyd Bowers, mother of the bride of two weeks and of the bridegroom in this wedding, at her new house in Connecticut avenue. For, as noted two weeks ago, in addition to all the busyness involved in marrying off first her daughter and then her son in such close succession Mrs. Bowers has been in the "throws"—a much more expressive way of spelling it—of moving. Without her children her former residence in Rhode Island avenue was quite too big for her, so she has taken a smaller but attractive house in Connecticut avenue.

Later in the winter Miss Marjorie Edgar of Minneapolis, who was one of the bridesmaids at her daughter's wedding, will spend some time with Mrs. Bowers. Miss Edgar and Miss Julia Thompson of Chicago, two of Martha Bowers' bridesmaids, did not stay on for Tom's wedding, but returned to their home almost immediately after the former ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. "Bob" Taft, being denied by the necessity of being on hand for this later wedding from an extended wedding trip, went down to Asheville, N. C., where they report having run into the Duchess de Chaulnes, formerly Theodora Shonts, and finding her much engrossed in getting up a club to knit articles of wear for the French soldiers.

How glad the young widowed duchess must be that her little son is not old enough to have to be offered up a sacrifice on the altar of patriotism. Her mother, Mrs. Theodore P. Shonts, and her sister, Miss Marguerite, are helping her in her efforts to enroll guests at the hotels and a number of the residents of the towns in her club.

ETIQUETTE

By ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER.

> Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the page only.

"DEAR MISS VAN RENSSELAER: I am a girl 15 years old and go to high school. Now, what is the proper length for my dresses, also a nice way to wear my hair? Is it all right to attend parties where boys are invited? I have a sister 17 who goes with a girl friend 16 years old. Is it all right for me to go with them. SCHOOLGIRL."

The correct length for your dress is just below the tops of your boots. Wear your hair rolled back from your face and done up simply. Do not think of curling your hair. If it does not wave naturally wear it perfectly plain. If your parents approve it is proper for you to attend parties to which boys are invited. Why don't you choose friends of your own age instead of taking older girls for your companions?

"Dear Miss Van Rensselaer: Some time ago I was invited to the wedding of my nephew and sent an acceptance. Was that a proper thing to do. I was told it was not necessary to do so. It has worried me, so decided to write and ask you if it isn't a matter of choice. E. D."

If the invitation to the wedding included a card to the reception—as it undoubtedly did since the groom was your nephew—you would have been guilty of a breach of etiquette if you had not sent your acceptance or regrets.

"Dear Miss Van Rensselaer: Kindly tell me if it is proper to send invitations formal and informal to one who is in mourning for a brother. L. H. M."

You are not expected to send informal invitations to friends in mourning but you may remember them with wedding invitations or cards to a reception.

"Dear Miss Van Rensselaer: Please answer the following questions: How should the wedding procession be formed? I am going to have a matron of honor and a maid of honor and a flower girl. What are the duties of the matron and maid of honor? Which one holds the bride's bouquet during the service? When does the flower girl come in? Does the bride answer to a toast at the wedding breakfast? Does the bridal couple leave the table at their will without making any apologies? Should the attendants of the bride wear hats? The wedding may take place out of doors. Does the matron of honor receive a bouquet, and what is considered suitable for a present to her from the bride? N. C. B."

Since you have no bridesmaids, why don't you have the matron and the maid of honor walk together? The order of the procession which you intend to have would be as follows: Matron and maid of honor, the flower girl—strewing flowers from a basket in the path of the bride or not, as you wish—and finally the bride. It is the matron's place to hold the bride's bouquet—that is, if the bride wishes to dispose of it. Brides usually hold their bouquets throughout the ceremony. The bride merely smiles her acknowledgment of the toast at the wedding breakfast. She does not rise. The bridal couple leaves the table when the bride wishes to. Their going is a signal for others to leave also. The attendants may wear hats or not, as the bride wishes. At a church wedding hats are usually worn. At a home wedding they are not worn. A wedding out of doors would give the young women an opportunity to wear attractive garden hats. The matron and the maid of honor both receive bouquets from the groom. The bride usually presents her attendants with some dainty bit of distinctive jewelry—not an expensive article, but something of lasting charm.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER.

NOVEMBER 1, 191 VIII.

In the New Playbills

Plays That Come and Plays That Go.

VICISSITUDE is one thing at least that the theater holds in common with life, and so we have many changes this week in our dramatic establishments. The dismal French lady of letters who solaced her soul with the device

Tout lasse
Tout casse

must have learnt her little rhyme of desolation in an orchestra chair. Forbes-Robertson departs for other communities on his farewell itinerary, and Miss Grace George will occupy the stage whereon he played, to be followed herself in a fortnight by Miss Maude Adams. "Lady Windermere's Fan," grown dusty with disuse like the gonfalons of Florence the Republic, moldering in the vaults, disappears to be succeeded by "The Little Café," a carnival of tunes and jokes and dances. "The Yellow Ticket," that opulent exposé of Russian official depravity and cruelty to the Jew, fades from view, and in the Favonian advent of Miss Charlotte Walker and "The Better Way" Mr. Powers will have his consolation. The Fine Arts, where Miss Annette Kellermann has been performing her ablutions via the film, rears again the oriflamme of the idea'd drama, and "Consequences," from Manchester, will be played for the benefit of the knowing minority. Miss Barrymore vanishes from the Majestic ere one can say of vaudeville "it lightens," and in place of her fine acting comes the exotic young woman known to the public as Anna Held's daughter.

Miss George has been ill treated by the dramatists since she earned in "Divorçons" the right to be called a star, and nothing since that has happened to her in the way of a successful play. She is recalled as an earnest comedienne of hard and brilliant qualities, skilled in the delineation of amusing felines. It is said that as the congenital fibber in "The Truth" she does much to bring the late Clyde Fitch from the oblivion to which his photographic superficialities sent him. Mr. Fitch was of the opinion that "The Truth" was his best play, and its performance here years ago by Miss Clara Bloodgood corroborated his judgment in many ways.

A Pittsburgh Odyssey.

Fortune and the playwrights have been unkind to Miss Walker, too, though she has a dramatist in her family—Mr. Eugene Walter, her husband, and the author of "The Better Way." A part of the flotsam of the Galveston flood, Miss Walker began her career auspiciously as a leading woman; but stellar aspirations supervening, she found herself on the outskirts, the heroine of mediocre melodrama. She will be tested in "The Better Way." Her patrician features and her melodious drawl must be lost in the impersonation of a Bavarian peasant woman, the wife of a puddler in the steel mills of Pittsburgh. Mr. Walter, in this drama, got his inspiration from Mr. Carnegie's millionaire spawn, taking for his theme the most spectacular of the idylls of that romantic band, and bringing it to a pious terminal.

Mr. Walter's unfit Crœsus foresakes his plain, but otherwise excellent helpmeet, for a theater woman and the fleshpots of New York. The ex-puddler becomes a famous debauché, bestowing jewels and vinous caresses at random upon the unrighteous. His obstinate Griselda, however, pursues him to the headquarters of his infamy, pitting her noble attributes against the voluptuous fascinations of musical comedy. Thrills are suggested by a scene in the divorce court, wherein Miss Walker, alone and friendless upon the witness stand, is accused of being illegally fond of a Lithuanian butler. At bay, she disavows her son's paternity, engendering, thereby, great confusion. Sobered up, finally, the wandering Pittsburgher eschews transgression, and his wife restores him to her red arms. This, according to the title, is the better way, though Mr. Walter in the literature preliminary to the play's presentation, admits that he may be wrong about it.

This Drama Is "Shavian."

Miss Horniman, who operates a stock company in Manchester, is desirous of becoming a factor in London theatricals. So whenever her Manchester ventures look good to her she puts together a special cast to act them in London. That is how "Hindle Wakes" reached that metropolis, and last spring the process was repeated in the case of "Consequences," which is to be shown at the Fine Arts theater on Nov. 5. Both plays won the attention of American importing managers because Miss Horniman's judgment proved good as to London.

"Consequences" and "Hindle Wakes" have nothing in common, however, beyond the process that put them into metropolitan view. The former is a comedy so sheer as a bid for laughter that some of the London critics were inclined to call it a farce. The author, H. F. Rubinstein, avows he is a disciple of George Bernard Shaw—an avowal which may account for the fact that the adjective "Shavian" figured in the reviews printed in all the London and most of the New York newspapers.

The comedy has to do with making fun of the traditional objections to the marriage of Jew and Gentile. Mr. Rubinstein finds that the objections are racial rather than religious or spiritual, and has his fun along that line. His chief characters are a rebellious daughter and a revolutionary son; she the Gentile and he the Jew. They agree to marry not because they have any belief that they are in love, but because marrying will prove that they are "independent of the existent social order." When their respective families, the Collinses and the Lipskis, withdraw all opposition to the marriage the affianced pair manifest their disgust by calling off the wedding.

MISS GRACE GEORGE in "The Truth" Blackstone.

News of Plays and Music.

Among the attractions of "The Little Café" is Miss Texas Guinan, who not so long ago was advertising herself as "God's masterpiece" in her business of selling a reducing nostrum to the adipose.

The notion that "It's a Long Way to Tipperary" is anybody's property for the stage is evidently wrong. The rights in the song appear to belong to Charles Dillingham for "Chin Chin." His claim is so well founded that he was able to stop Bernard Granville from singing it in "Dancing Around."

Part of Sargent Aborn's Tuesday visit to Chicago was devoted to adjusting the terms whereby the Century Opera company and Mlle. Pavlowa and her Russian ballet troupe will combine on Dec. 18 to take the place of the annual charity ball for the benefit of the Lying-In hospital. Mr. Aborn was not keen for an arrangement that should interrupt his opera season of eight weeks, even for a night, when the interruption would mean dividing attention and advertising another attraction. Mr. Rabinoff, too, did not enthuse at the prospect of having the dancer make her first Chicago appearance of the season in conjunction with another attraction. Guy Hardy, associate manager of the Auditorium, served by turn as the representative of the opera company, of the dancer, and of Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, head of the charity ball committee, and managed an adjustment that met with the approval of all concerned. By its terms Mrs. Fairbank buys outright the performance for that evening by the opera company (the arrangement comprehending the rental of the theater, too), and also buys outright the Pavlowa performance, including the services of the dancer's special orchestra of twenty-two players. The officers of the First regiment promptly agreed to a cancellation of her contract for the use of their armory for the ball, which had been planned for that date. The Auditorium programs will open with the Century company's performance of "I Pagliacci," with a selected cast, and will include a two hours' bill of dances by Pavlowa and her associates.

Miss Laurette Taylor, on the occasion of her London première of "Peg o'My Heart," found the audience in conflicting moods. One part wished to laugh at the comic lines, but was restrained by the hissed "Ssssh!" of the other half, made up of persons who were afraid that laughter would drown the players' voices in the ensuing speeches. She mistook the admonitory "Ssssh!" for disapproval and nearly fainted from fright in act I. Called before the curtain and asked to speak after act II., she said: "Those who feel like laughing at the bright lines may do so. There is not the slightest danger that I or anybody else in the cast will speak through a laugh." Her personal success in London has been enormous; but it is not the belief that the play itself will carry through a long run.

Among the new songs and scenes which the Messrs. Burkhardt and Collins have put into their La Salle piece, "One Girl in a Million," is a number called "Moonlight on the Rhine," sung by Miss Eva Fallon and the chorus.

Max Reinhardt is said to be responsible for keeping some of the Berlin theaters open by inducing their managers to keep the actors at work for $25 a month, regardless of their professional standing.

Wilton Lackeye is to be in his original part in a performance of "The Pit" for the movies. The wheat pit scenes, he writes, are to be taken in the Chicago board of trade.

Clifton Crawford, back from London, is to be Miss Emma Trentini's chief associate in an imported operetta called "Polish Blood." The title will, it is expected, will be changed.

Miss Madeline Traverse, the flashing brunette who played the part of the confidence woman in the Chicago cast of "Seven Keys to Baldpate," is to be the Olivia of Miss Neilson-Terry's "Twelfth Night" cast. Eben Plympton is to come once more out of retirement to play Sir Toby Belch.

Mrs. Campbell, having carried Shaw's "Pygmalion" to popular success in one of Broadway's too-far-up-town theaters, is to be transferred to a playhouse in the heart of New York's theatergoing district.

Henry L. Higginson, long known as the chief pecuniary backing of the great Boston Symphony orchestra, has explained that he will provide in his will for a $1,000,000 endowment of the organization. Maj. Higginson has for years been making up a $40,000 annual deficit, and has to date spent about $900,000 on the orchestra.

"Polygamy" is the title of a new play by Miss Harriet Ford and Harvey J. O'Higgins, who wrote "The Dummy," and, with the assistance of Detective Burns, "The Argyle Case." William B. Mack, out of Chicago view since the first engagement of "Within the Law," is to be in "Polygamy." So is Miss Chrystal Herne.

Andreas Dippel's experiment with opera-comique in New York City is evidently successful so far as his first production is concerned, "The Lilac Domino." The reviews, most of which were written by the critics of music rather than by those of the drama, were without exception highly laudatory. Two of his new singers also came into flattering notice in print—Miss Eleanor Painter, who has been singing in grand opera in Germany, and Wilfrid Doughitt, a baritone from England. George Hamlin, the Chicago tenor, was present at the premiere and came back to the city Friday to say that Mr. Doughitt is the best romantic baritone heard on the American stage in a generation. Mr. Dippel, patently, had a catholic attitude toward the stage in making up his company, for the personnel is found to include a Metropolitan opera house singer in Miss Jeanne Maubourg, a jester from the varieties in John E. Hazzard, and a former La Salle opera house comic in Robert O'Connor.

Cleofonte Campanini, director of the Chicago Grand Opera company, has returned to the United States.

Miss Janis is to act for the films. "The Slim Princess" will be her vehicle.

Martin Harvey is, he announces, coming to the United States to act his répertoire, which includes "The Only Way," "Hamlet," and "Pélléas and Melisande." He toured last season in Canada. He visited this country about eleven years ago and was far from successful.

Miss Ina Claire, whose popularity in London is said to have equaled that of Miss Elsie Janis, is back in the United States. As there is so little doing in the way of musical comedy, it is expected that she will find employment in the varieties.

By order of the court George Gibbs Mansfield now receives $500 yearly from his father's estate. He goes to school in New York and lives in New London, Conn., with his mother, Mrs. Susan Hegeman Mansfield.

"Life" Is a New York Imitation of Drury Lane.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Ever since he played an honest plumber in "After Dark" William A. Brady has wanted to do a really big American melodrama in America. At least so we are told. And two years ago, when "The Whip" was brought over from Drury Lane and scored so tremendous a success here, his ambition was revived in force.

This season he has seen it accomplished. Last Saturday night at the Manhattan Opera house Mr. Brady staged a really colossal affair called "Life," in which Thompson Buchanan, a sane youth among playwrights, has frankly attempted to do an American story in the Drury Lane style, and Mr. Brady has as frankly tried to improve upon the pictorial effects that have made the famous English theater known the world over.

The result is to the credit of both. "Life" is a bargain sale in melodramatic materials, but the selection is excellent and most of the articles all the better for having been used before.

There is the college hero, for instance, a curly headed, brown eyed youth with a poor but honorable athletic past, looking forward eagerly to a future filled with action and adventure. Being a remnant cannot harm him so long as he strokes Yale's best crew.

And the bank president's daughter, who is the heroine. Certainly age cannot wither nor custom stale her usefulness to melodrama. When the college hero kisses her between the tallyho and the boathouse, just before the Yale-Harvard boat race, and just after her father's junior partner (a wild but subtle youth) has asked for her hand, does it matter that as a heroine she is a bit frayed at the edges? No. It adds rather to her promised reliability.

The story in which these three figure is also familiarly interesting. When the junior partner sees how thing are going with the hero and the banker's daughter he plots to prevent their marriage and to keep them apart. He has the young man accused of stealing $100,000. When this charge fails to hold he (the villain) shoots the banker and lays the crime at the hero's door. After which he railroads him toward Sing Sing and the chair.

But the hero is not without resource. He escapes from Sing Sing in a motor car that, with the scenery moving rapidly in the other direction, appears to cross the stage at the rate of seventy miles an hour, curls his hair to complete his disguise, and starts for Mexico, arriving in El Paso at, say, 10:45. With three-quarters of an hour to go he fights

Playbills of the Week.

Powers'—"The Better Way," the most recent play by Eugene Walter. This is the drama which for a long time was referred to in print as "A Plain Woman." It is a dramatization of the social phenomena resulting from the interest of wealthy husbands in chorus girls. Miss Charlotte Walker is the actress of the chief part, the discarded wife. This evening.

Blackstone—Miss Grace George in Clyde Fitch's play, called "The Truth," which was written for and for a time engaged the especial talent of the late Clara Bloodgood. Mr. Fitch is said to have regarded the play as his best achievement. Miss George, from all accounts, was definitely successful last season in the part of Becky Garder in the New York City revival. Tomorrow evening.

Illinois—"The Little Café," a musical comedy of Paris, setting by C. M. S. McLellan, who took his plot from a like named farce by Tristan Bernard. The music is the work of Ivan Caryll. John E. Young, a La Salle comedian of the Askin régime, has the chief part—that of a waiter who is compelled to continue in his vocation even after he falls heir to a large fortune. This evening.

Fine Arts—"Consequences," a comedy which treats satirically of the question of marriage between Gentiles and Jews. H. F. Rubenstein wrote it for the Horniman company, which produced it successfully in Manchester and London. Miss Mary Servoss, Miss Fania Marinoff, Horace Braham, Herbert Druce, and Elliott Dexter are to act in it. Thursday evening.

Auditorium — "While the City Sleeps," melodrama written in the primary colors, with an honest patrolman and his equally honest chief as protagonists of the theory that some of the police of a great city—at least of Chicago—are honest. It is being acted to cheering, delighted, "capacity" crowds [for the benefit of the Policemen's Benevolent association] by Miss Jessie Glendinning, Frank Sheridan, Miss Mattie Ferguson, Rodney Ranous, and many others. Second week.

Garrick—"Peg o' My Heart," with Miss Peggy O'Neill as the unwitting heiress. Twentieth week.

MISS IDA ST. LEON in "HELP WANTED" at the NATIONAL

Olympic—"Potash and Perlmutter," made worth while by the acting of Barney Bernard and Alexander Carr. Eleventh week.

Grand Opera house—"Under Cover," with H. B. Warner as a very slick federal officer. Tenth week.

Cort—"A Pair of Sixes," farce of situations, with Frank McIntyre heading the cast. Fourteenth week.

La Salle Opera house—"One Girl in a Million," musical comedy writ for this theater by authors with experience in entertaining its clientèle. A "second edition" brings Miss Ada Lewis into the cast, which is headed by Miss Eva Fallon and Felix Adler. Ninth week.

MISS JEAN JOMELLI SINGING AT THE PALACE PHOTO © MARCEAU

Princess—"Today," showing the finish of an erring wife. Good acting by Arthur Byron, Miss Bertha Mann, and Miss Margaret St. John. Sixth week.

Little—"Sundry Lovers," being a program of three one act plays.

MISS ETHEL JACKSON in "A PAIR OF SIXES" at the CORT

American Music hall—"The Revolt," in which the disheartened wife stops just short of error. Miss Helen Ware plays the lady with skill. Second week.

VAUDEVILLE.

Palace Music hall—Bickel and Watson in their grotesque "turn" as tramp musicians, and Mme. Jeanne Jomelli, a grand opera singer, will head the bill, starting tomorrow. Edwin Stevens and Miss Tina Marshall, in a sketch; Chick Sales, in "A Country School Entertainment"; Carlos and Mrs. Sebastian, the dancers; and Albert Rebla, a juggler from abroad, are others.

Majestic—Tom Lewis, the fat comedian of "Little Johnnie Jones" and "The Yankee Prince," will billtop here in a sketch of baseball interest called "Brother Fans." Miss Liane Carrera, identifiable as the daughter of Anna Held, will be seen and heard with a chorus of girls in a sketch which has music by Irving Berlin. W. C. Fields, the comic juggler; Charles Grapewin and Miss Anna Chance, in a new farce called "Poughkeepsie"; Miss Elsa Ruegger, the 'cellist; the three Leightons, dancers; and the Meyakos sisters, Japanese acrobats and soubrettes, will be in the program.

Great Northern Hippodrome—"The Fair Co-Eds," a "girl act," will be the headline feature of the new program.

MISS VIVIAN MAYO in "DAMAGED GOODS" at THE CROWN

Another "turn" listed is billed as the "Marconi Brothers with their wireless orchestra."

Colonial—Miss Isabel Patricola, who had such great vogue in the heydey of the cabarets, will be at the top of the mixed program for the entire week.

McVicker's—A. C. Anson, the ex-hero of Chicago baseball, in a monologue; Tom Nawn, in his "Pat and the Genii" farce; and a sketch called "Love in a Sanitarium" are named as most important of the new week's features.

American—Fred Duprez leads the bill until Thursday, when James Grady will come in a sketch called "The Toll Bridge."

Willard—Miss Bessie Kaplan, the soprano, will be at the top of the program all week.

Columbia—A troupe called The Dreamlands will provide the program of "burlesque."

ONE WEEK THEATERS.

National—Jack Lait's play, "Help Wanted," one of the marked hits of last season in Chicago. Miss Ida St. Leon has the part of the persecuted stenographer; Lynn Pratt is the actor of Henry Kolker's original part of the sybaritic Scott.

Crown—"Damaged Goods," by a company equal in all respects to that which played at the Blackstone.

Imperial—"One Day."

Victoria—"Excuse Me!"

BURTON HOLMES. —

Orchestra hall—Burton Holmes will give his travelogue called "Germany to Austria" Wednesday and Friday evenings and Saturday afternoon. He will repeat his "Ireland" next Sunday afternoon by request. The series will end next week with "The Allied Powers."

Making Hits in Failures.

THE press agent of "While the City Sleeps" asked Miss Jessie Glendinning the other day for "something for the papers—a list of the plays you've been in and of the parts you've played." She replied:

"The list is very, very long, and, I fear, not a bit interesting. It is not that I don't remember every play and every part; but I think I'm the only being in this wide world who does remember them! I'm never out of an engagement—at least, never for more than a week or so at a time; but I'm forever and forever rehearsing in new plays. I've spent enough money on new clothes for new plays which were taken off after a week or two to finance the losses of the war in Europe!

"At the start of this season, for example, I put together a beautiful special 'wardrobe' for 'The Prodigal Husband,' in which I had the chief feminine part in support of John Drew. When the question of my salary for the 'road' came up Mr. Frohman asked me if I would at all mind stepping out and let the part go to Miss Martha Hedman, who had an unfortunate start of her career as a star through the fact that her play, 'The Heart of a Thief,' ceased to beat after a 'run' of six nights. Mind? Not a bit of it! I had had the part in Broadway and made a hit; and I've been in the theater long enough to have some sympathy for a manager stuck with a playless star on his hands.

"I stepped from my part with Mr. Drew at the last New York performance, last Saturday evening, into a train for Chicago—and, arriving here to rehearse, was told that not a rag of my pretty 'wardrobe' would serve for 'While the City Sleeps,' and that I must find time to go to the dressmaker's, although I had just a week to get up in the new rôle.

"The newspapers credited me with a big personal hit last season in 'A Little Water on the Side,' in which I was William Collier's leading woman. The play lasted a few weeks only. I still glow with pride when I recall the nice things the critics said about me when I acted with Mme. Kalish in Percy Mackaye's 'Sapho and Phaon'—and the play was taken off before the ink was dry on the newspapers carrying the reviews. Then there was 'The Lilac Room,' in which I was with Miss Amelia Bingham. The critics said the play was worth while if only for me—and then the vans backed up to the stage door and took it away to the storehouse!

"Of course, there was 'The Servant in the House'—that was a success; but, then, I didn't get the part of Mary until the public had stopped caring who was in the cast."

Gossip of the Stage.

Eddie Foy figures in the courts as defendant in a suit brought by his sister, Mrs. Mary A. Boyle, for $15,000 for the support of Mr. Foy's daughter by a former marriage, Catherine Fitzgerald aged 20.

Jerome K. Jerome has joined the colony of English dramatists in America. He is here to give readings from his books and his tour will extend to St. Louis.

Chicago, Oct. 23.—[To the Dramatic Editor.]—In your columns recently there appeared a letter from Mr. A. D. Goldberg, stating that Mr. George Broadhurst is not the author of "Today," now playing at the Princess theater. Mr. Goldberg also states that "Abe Shomer" is the author, and that "Mr. Brady refused to produce it unless Broadhurst's name appeared as part author." May I be permitted to state that "Today" was adapted for the English speaking stage by Mr. George Broadhurst from an original Yiddish drama by Mr. Abraham Schomer, and that Mr. Schomer's name and Mr. Broadhurst's appear on the program and elsewhere as joint authors. Also to state that Mr. Brady has no connection whatever with "Today."

Mr. Goldberg's statement that "the play was taken from the first act of "The Spendthrift," with the scene of the third act of "Elevating a Husband," and finished with Jacob Gordon's fourth act of "The Tree of Knowledge," is too ridiculous to require refutation. Yours very truly,

KILBOURN GORDON,
Representing "Today."

Harry Lauder is putting himself on record as opposed to the so-called "imitations" of him, save "when the mimic is a genius at that sort of thing. Cecelia Loftus is a genius. So is Elsie Janis. I may add that if either young woman has imitated me I have never heard her." Mr. Lauder in his resentment refused to avail himself of the philosophical attitude of N. C. Goodwin, who some years ago, after witnessing an alleged imitation of him in a scene from "A Gold Mine" by an aspiring young actor, left his seat with this remark: "Well, if that is an imitation of me, one of us is rotten." This anecdote was repeated to Mr. Lauder by a San Francisco reporter, and evoked this retort from the Scotsman: "Mr. Goodwin, perhaps, was in doubt about himself; I am not. I have seen perhaps twenty of these so-called 'imitations of the great Scotch comedian, Harry Lauder, whom you all know well.' They're always applauded frantically, proving that the applauders have never seen me—and proving also, I fear, that they never will."

Jack Lait's new play, "Thumbs Down," has been tentatively accepted for production by the Liebler company. A condition is that a certain well known player, a star, selected by the author, shall be engaged for the chief man's part.

The Garrick club of Lake Forest college will produce on Friday and Saturday, Nov. 6 and 7, at the Durand Art institute, Lake Forest college, four new English plays—"Come Michaelmas," by Keble Howard; "Made Absolute," by Judge Parey; "The Price of Coal," by Harold Brighouse, and "The Upstroke," by J. F. Newbolt. Three of these have been revised for American setting by members of the club. Prof. John M. Clapp is the director.

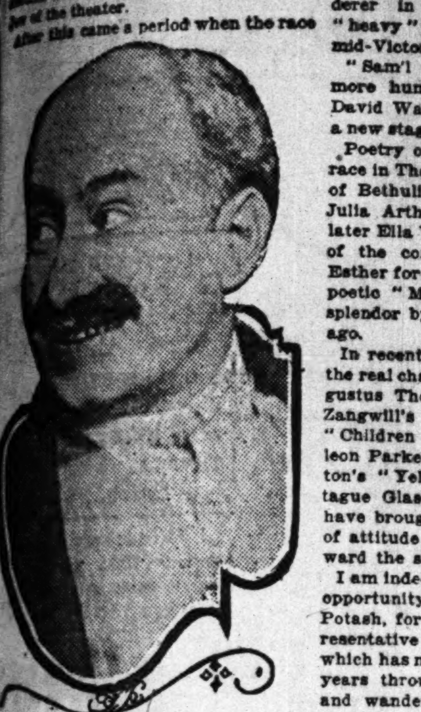
The Rehabilitation of the Stage Jew

By Barney Bernard.



BARNEY BERNARD

TIME was when the Jew brought some of the greatest poetry the world has known on to the stage. Shakespeare's Shylock, although discovering the malevolent attitude of the world toward the Hebrew race, yet gave rise to some of the most beautiful poetry the bard of Avon wrote. Barabas in Kit Marlowe's "Jew of Malta," brought another burst of poetry and dignity to the Jew of the theater.

After this came a period when the race was maligned and buffooned, even Shylock being played as a low comedy rôle with red shock wig and clownish clothes for more than a hundred years, until Charles Macklin restored him to the boards as "the Jew that Shakspeare drew." But his restoration and rehabilitation was short-lived, for after Macklin's brave effort he sunk into the butt of the clowns and harlequins.

For a hundred years or more he hardly appeared upon the stage except in revivals of the older plays.

Then came the day of Scott's "Ivanhoe" with Isaac of York and Rebecca, his daughter, to give again the dignity and nobleness of the race their meed of recognition. Dr. Rosenthal's "Deborah," although it presented the detestable Nathan, gave a beautiful glimpse of the women of the race in the noble but vengeful heroine.

Again there was a lull in the presentation of the Jew on the stage, except in burlesque and extravaganza, where he was kicked about, given exaggerated and unsightly makeup and costume, and represented the lowest type of comedy.

Rising a bit from this came his initiation into the black hearted villains of the stage, Fagan in Dickens' "Oliver Twist," Lazarus in "The Black Flag," the murderer in "The World," and other "heavy" rôles in the melodrama of the mid-Victorian period.

"Sam'l of Posen" made him a little more human, and twenty years later David Warfield's "Auctioneer" created a new stage Hebrew.

Poetry once more gave acclaim to the race in Thomas Bailey Aldrich's "Judith of Bethulia," which the dark beauty of Julia Arthur illumined for a time, and later Ella Wheeler Wilcox made a setting of the contention between Vashti and Esther for the favor of Asheruerus in the poetic "Mizpah," produced with much splendor by Charles Frohman ten years ago.

In recent days there has been more of the real characterization of the race. Augustus Thomas' "As a Man Thinks"; Zangwill's "The Melting Pot" and "Children of the Ghetto"; Louis Napoleon Parker's "Disraeli"; Michael Morton's "Yellow Ticket," and now Montague Glass' "Potash and Perlmutter" have brought about a complete revulsion of attitude on the part of the public toward the stage Jew.

I am indeed very happy to have had the opportunity of creating the part of Abe Potash, for I consider the rôle really representative of the wonderful Jewish race which has maintained its identity for 5,000 years through all sorts of persecutions and wanderings, with seldom a country to call its own, with hatred and oppression its portion in the lands where its people have found shelter.

Mr. Potash is typical of the present day Jew whose mind and ideas have broadened under the genial influence of American liberty after a boyhood spent in the Ghetto of some Russian town, where contumely and abuse have been his early portion. The big heartedness of the man, his love for his own people, and his devotion to his family appeal very strongly to me and make me glad that I am able to project him over the footlights and into the minds and hearts of the public.

I think the day of the ultra-comic Jew on the stage—the Jew with the exaggerated nose and splay feet—is gone, and I hope that my Abe Potash has helped along with this good work of giving the people an idea of the real Hebrew as he lives, breathes, and exists today.

BARNEY BERNARD.

"Life" in New York.

a duel with the pursuing villain on horseback, makes a last stand with the familiar old last round of ammunition in a stockade, and is finally rescued by the detective who convicted him, but became his friend when he learned of the mistake he had made.

The strictly modern note in "Life" is the introduction of the movie as a plot conductor. Between acts, while Mr. Brady and the boys back stage are changing the scenery, moving pictures are thrown on a scene curtain showing how the plot advanced from where it was to where it will be resumed when the curtain is lifted.

Just now it is the fashion to see "Life" and cheer. The villain is properly hissed, the scenery generously applauded by large and, as the saying is, fashionable audiences.

We are still on the subject of life when we consider Mr. Louis N. Parker's dramatization of "David Copperfield," now at Wallack's. "The Highway of Life," he calls this version (in order to have a title he may copyright, since the copyright on the book has run out), and it is presumed to follow, I suppose, the highway of David's life in all its too numerous ramifications. But it really is the customary string of episodes that serve as an excuse for drama in most attempted dramatizations of Dickens.

It catches David after he has been articled to Mr. Spenlow in England and has fallen in love with Dora, though Dora is never seen. He is back in Betsey Trotwood's garden on a visit. He goes to London to meet Steerforth, and takes Steerforth to Yarmouth to meet the Peggotys. After that the Micawbers, the Peggotys, and the hypocrisies of Uriah Heep bear the burden of the drama, and David is rather out of it.

The most dramatic and likewise the most human, moments of the play are those in which Daniel Peggoty learns of Em'ly's flight, and starts his long pilgrimage in search of her, the reuniting of these two when the search is ended, the exposure of Uriah's villainies, and the departure for Australia. Pictorially the scene of the tempest, in which the bodies of Ham and Steerforth are washed ashore, is graphically shown, and the play ends with David's belated discovery of gentle Agnes' love. The Micawbers furnish most of the humor, and the Lieblers, under whose auspices the production has been made, have given the four acts and ten scenes handsome and charmingly atmospheric settings. The Dickens followers should certainly respond the serious question being as to just how many Dickens readers there are these days.

The company is largely English. Lennox Pawle plays Micawber and his wife. Dorothy Parker, the daughter of the author, is the Little Em'ly. Emmett Corrigan plays Dan'l, Eva Vincent Betsey, and Maggie Fisher Mrs. Micawber, so the American player is pretty well represented.

PASQUALE TALLARICO

Miss Amy Emerson Neill, a young Chicago girl, is to give a violin recital this afternoon at the Fine Arts theater. She has also been engaged as soloist with the Amateur Musical club for its most pretentious program to be given a week from tomorrow afternoon at Orchestra hall. Pasquale Tallarico is the American trained pianist who won the Charles G. Dawes $200 prize in Glenn Dillard Gunn's recent competition. He will play tomorrow at the American concert directed by Mr. Gunn. Chris Anderson, baritone, also American trained, will be the other soloist at the same concert.

Gounod's "Faust" Opens First Opera Evening at Fullerton Hall.

By Ronald Webster.

MRS. JEAN SHERWOOD sends an announcement of the second season of so-called opera evenings at Fullerton hall, the Art institute. Last year's season probably won't be remembered at all by hardened Sunday concertgoers. In general, I suppose, it is not desirable that they should remember. They might go.

The first of the operas is to be given tonight at 8 o'clock. Gounod's "Faust" has been chosen. An orchestra of four provides the accompaniment, and four singers of merit do the parts of Marguerite, Martha, Faust, and Mephistopheles.

The prelude, chorus, and Valentine's farewell, Calf of Gold, Kirmess, Siebel's love song, cavatina, jewel song, garden scene, duet romanza, soldiers' chorus serenade, and the trio finale, are listed on the program. Next week "Der Kuhriegen" is to be given.

Well hidden and in small type on the program is the phrase "under the auspices of the Chicago Woman's club." It seems absurd to comment about something which made such a success as this series did last year.

The four instrumentalists are Henrietta Weber, piano; Carl Klammsteiner, cello; Fritz Itte, violin, and Carl Hillman, viola. The singers are Lucille Stevenson, soprano, as Marguerite; Louise Harrison Slade, contralto, as Martha; Grant Kimbell, tenor, as Faust, and Marion Green, basso-cantante, as Mephistopheles.

For those who live at a distance supper is served in the basement of the Art institute from 4 to 8 o'clock.

Mme. Margarete Matzenauer, who makes her first appearance in Chicago today at the Blackstone theater, has telegraphed her manager, F. Wight Neumann, that she will have the assistance of her husband, Sig. Ferrari-Fontana, tenor of the Metropolitan opera. The other concert of today is that of Miss Amy Emerson Neill, violinist. Miss Neill has been hailed in Chicago as a genius. She will play at the Fine Arts theater.

With Reinald Werrenrath declaring boldly to the world that if there's more money in vaudeville than in giving recitals he will take to it, and Paul Althouse stepping on pebbles and sand burrs every morning, what is to become of art?

Cut This Out.

The Ware-Edwards recital, which was to have been held at the Studebaker theater on Nov. 8, will be given instead at the Blackstone theater.

Edgar A. Nelson will present the organ program at the meeting of the Sunday Evening club to be held at Orchestra hall today. The numbers will include "Hosanna," "Benedictione Nuptiale," and "Laus Deo," by Dubois, and the "Triumphal March," by Mansfield. Mrs. Mabel Sharp Herdien and the choir of 100 will sing the anthem, "Omnipotence," by Schubert, and the quartet and choir will present "Souls of the Righteous," by Noble. The anthem by Handel, "Hear Jacob's God," will be sung by the choir.

Josef Hofmann, the pianist, will be the soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra at its concerts to be given at Orchestra hall next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. It will be recalled that in advance announcements Ferruccio Busoni was placed upon this program as soloist, but the uncertainty of the date of Mr. Busoni's arrival in this country made it advisable to secure another soloist, and the place will be occupied by Mr. Hofmann. To his performance of the Schumann concerto in A minor the entire second half of the program will be devoted. The first half of the program will consist of Handel's Concerto Grosso in F major and Mahler's Symphony No. 1 in D major.

One of the London papers prints a story about the frugality of Brahms. Erich Wolff, the German song composer, submitted one of his first works to Brahms. At the close of the interview Brahms offered Wolff a cigaret with a gold mouthpiece. Wolff put it in his pocket.

"Why did you put it away?" asked the older man.

"I shall take great care of it. It is not every day that one gets a cigaret from Johannes Brahms."

Mr. Brahms opened his cigaret case. "Then just give me back the good cigaret, will you? For your purpose this one will do just as well." He gave him a domestic cigaret instead.

The third annual concert of the Alumni association of Northwestern University School of Music will be given on Nov. 24 at the First Congregational church of Evanston. Oscar Seagle, baritone, has been engaged. The proceeds of the concert go to the loan fund for seniors in the school.

Charles W. Clark, who is one of the city's best known baritones, with Miss Amy Emerson Neill, violinist, will give the program at the annual artists' recital of the Amateur Musical club, which is to be given at 2:30 o'clock on Monday afternoon, Nov. 9, in Orchestra hall. The annual recital is one of the chief events of the club's year, and as its proceeds go to the extension fund, by means of which many of the young musicians are enabled to continue their musical educations, the recital is one of more than average importance in the general musical circles of the city.

It is a pleasure to announce the American concert to be given tomorrow evening by the Symphony orchestra, with Glenn Dillard Gunn conducting. Mr. Gunn is a champion of American music, not in speech but in action. He is risking more than his reputaton (any person does that in every concert). Of the two soloists, Pasquale Tallerico, pianist, and Christ Anderson, baritone, the first receives nothing at all and the second a nominal fee only. Mr. Gunn receives nothing. Everything is sacrificed to the hope of getting Amercan music before Americans. If you champion American music and hate so-called worship of foreign music you may save yourself from the charge that you are a talker and not a doer by going and lending your support.

Why They Laugh in Vaudeville.

PALACE.

Jack Wilson and Franklyn Batie.

Batie—Look at those musicians in that orchestra. Isn't their's the easy life. When they should be working they're playing.

Batie—I'm just full of music.

Wilson—O! Are you?

Batie—Yes, I get hundreds of letters from girls asking me to send them "notes."

Wilson—Did you see those beautiful lips that women had?

Batie—Yah! but I don't think much of those lips.

Wilson—Why, you poor boob, you'll never see "such lips" as those again.

Batie—Maybe, but I'll put my two little red lips up against hers any old day.

Wilson—But I want to know why you're always hanging around that bank down on the corner?

Batie—Why, man, all the money I've saved in twenty-five years is in that bank—seventy-five dollars.

Wilson—Well that isn't any reason why you should hang around that bank; your money is perfectly safe; the cashier won't run off with it.

Batie—It ain't no reason? Every time I go into that bank that chap behind the window is always counting money and looking at a railroad time table. Now I want to say to you, that might not be no reason, but he ain't going nowhere on my life savings. So, sir-ree.

Wilson—What do you know about the war?

Batie—What do I know about the war? Ain't I been married four times. I know all about the war, sleeping in ditches, dodging things—I know all about the war.

Wilson—That's so, you know something about it, but what else do you know about war?

Batie—Ain't I been doing a one act and ain't I for two years sung about it every time I done it, prophesied about it, and——

Wilson—Well, come on, what did you sing about it?

Batie—Didn't I sing all last year that "England lost her dignity, so did France and Germany"—then you ask me what I know about the war. Why, man, I knew that song would cause war.

Batie—Well, colonel, I must be going.

Wilson—Don't call me colonel. I don't belong to the army.

Batie—When I call you colonel I ain't thinking about the army. I am thinking about the inside of a nut.

Wilson—This is Blue Island, look it over.

Batie—You mean this is Blue Island, overlook it.

Wilson (catching hold of Batie's coat)—Sure, I know your Aunt Mary.

Batie—Well, you don't have to do that "triple alliance" stuff just because you know my Aunt Mary. I lost my watch the other day just like that.

Wilson—What! you accuse me of stealing your watch?

Batie—No, I ain't accusing nobody of taking my watch, but, I tell you, don't try any of that triple alliance stuff on me. If you knew my Uncle Bill I wouldn't have nothing on at all.

Wilson—Why man, you are all worked up. What's the matter?

Batie—I just had an argument with my mother-in-law.

Wilson (clapping his hands in Batie's face)—You have no right to argue with your mother-in-law.

Batie—I know I haven't, but when you speak of my mother-in-law don't applaud. That ain't nothing to applaud about.

Wilson—Why are you always making fun of Henry Ford? He's a great man.

Batie—He certainly is a great man, all right; he's made walking a pleasure.

Women to Win in Four States. —Jane Addams.

By Marion Walters Lovett.

MISS JANE ADDAMS.
[Copyright by Moffett.]

“W have a right to ex-ect victories in four f the seven states ampaigning for uffrage,” Miss Jane Addams first vice resident of the Na ional American Voman's Suffrage association, said on eturning to Chicago from a speaking tour in four tates.

Miss Addams, who has taken part in numerous campaigns for the women, spent three days in Nevada, Nebraska, Missouri, and South Dakota. These are the states in which she thinks the men will vote to give the women the ballot.

In Missouri Miss Addams found the brewery interests arrayed in a powerful organization against the enfranchisement of women. Back of the liquor interests were the vice forces, allied with a liberal element that is perhaps a bit peculiar to Missouri.

In the other states the same interests were active in opposing the women. Large funds have been raised in these states to fight the possibility of the women getting the vote, and in most instances the opposition's funds are much larger than the meager campaign funds of the women's organizations.

Miss Addams declared that she was surprised at the wonderful organizations which the women of the states which she visited had formed, and the unity of action and uniqueness of methods they have used and are using in convincing the men that they should let the women in on the voting.

The other three states which are voting on women's suffrage that Miss Addams did not visit are North Dakota, Montana, and Ohio.

“I was particularly impressed with the thoroughness with which the women had perfected their organizations,” Miss Addams continued. “Each state had worked out an efficient system of reaching its voters; in Nevada, where the women form only a small percentage of the population and where the voters are scattered, suffrage literature has been utilized to convert the men; in Nebraska, the women have organized automobile tours and have visited practically every village and hamlet in the state.”

“Will Nevada be one of the four states to win the franchise?” Miss Addams was asked.

“Nevada ought to be won for suffrage,” replied Miss Addams. “It should logically fall into line with the other progressive western states that have given the vote to women. The victory will not be an easy one, however. Only 20,000 of the 40,000 men in the state are entitled to the vote.

“The miners form a roaming population. There are only 18,000 women in the state. Many of the men who work in the mines do not bring their wives and families into the state. The liquor interests are battling fiercely against giving women the vote in this state. Reno is looked upon as a playground for the men. The cities in the states surrounding Nevada have been ‘cleaned up’ by the women. And some of the men are afraid women's blue laws would change the color of Reno.

“In Nebraska it had been arranged for my train to stop at the depot of some town for twenty minutes at noon. An automobile whisked me off to the public square or some convenient speaking place, where I talked to the crowd that gathered round to hear of suffrage. At other times during the day the train was held five minutes and I talked to the crowd at the station from the tail end of the car.

“I visited only the western end of South Dakota. Much enthusiasm had been aroused in Deadwood and Lead. The women of this state have an easier task than have the suffragists of North Dakota. They have merely to get a majority of the votes cast for suffrage, while the North Dakota women must get a majority of the total vote cast.

“The women of Missouri are working desperately hard to win this, their first campaign. The Ozark region is enthusiastic. A splendid group of women in St. Louis are campaigning in that locality. I found the interest aroused at Cape Girardeau and at other town where meetings had been arranged. Suffragists all through the state are hopeful of winning their first campaign for the vote.”

Underselling Uncle Sam

Is it cheaper to advertise than to circularize?

Well, for instance:

To send a letter to each of the more than half a million people who bought last Sunday's Tribune would cost upwards of $10,000 for postage alone. This expense is quite exclusive of printing, folding, sealing, stamping and similar expenses on the half million letters.

Yet, for $10,000 The Tribune would print a full page advertisement and distribute it to each of those hundreds of thousands of people every Sunday for 13 weeks.

Since Tribune readers study Tribune advertising, rely on it, and are guided by it in their expenditures, it is apparent why merchants and manufacturers who utilize such a powerful and economical medium profit by it.

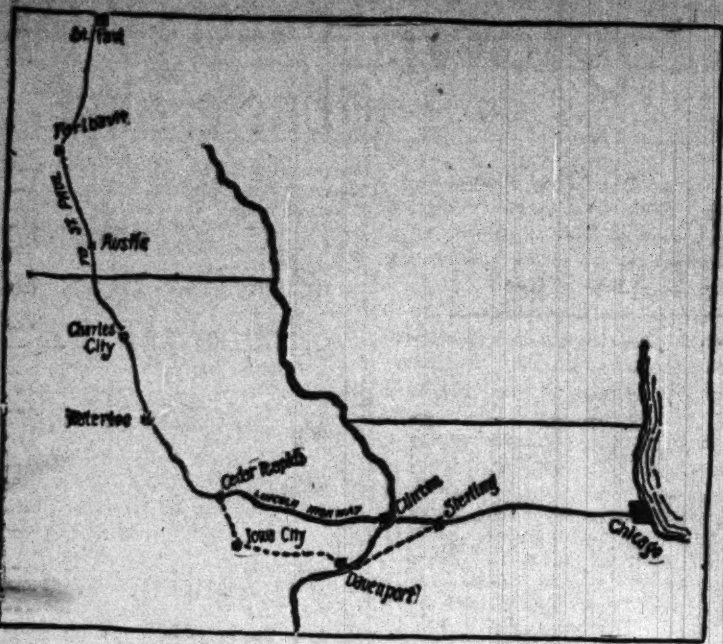
For Motorist and Motorcyclist



Two routes from Chicago to St. Paul.

By High

Inquiries concerning motorists, motorcyclists, etc., will be answered. Address letters to "High Speed," care of "The Chicago Sunday Tribune."

IT is the usual practice among motorists to disconnect during the hot weather the hot air tube from the exhaust pipe to the carbureter and shut off the hot water that circulates around the carbureter, because these aids in making gas out of raw gasoline are not so badly needed when the temperature is high as when it is low. At this time of the year, however, at least one is needed and both will serve better, making for easier starting if the motor has been running and more readily turning the raw gasoline into a vapor, proving economical in the matter of fuel used and providing a better running motor, which at the same time will keep cleaner.

If a motor is not provided with a carbureter with hot water jacket then by all means the hot air intake pipe should be attached, connecting the intake pipe of the carbureter with the exterior of the exhaust pipe. By this means hot air will be drawn into the carbureter and this will materially aid in breaking the heavy gasoline into a vapor. With hot water circulating around the carbureter the gasoline is kept fairly warm and more ready to volatilize. Even where a carbureter is not made for this attachment a metallic flexible tube may be procured and the exhaust pipe end purchased so that anybody can rig up a makeshift scheme to have the carbureter receive a warm charge of initial air.

The interest that is being taken in the good roads proposition throughout the west may be judged by the loyalty the different sections of Iowa have built up. Iowans have worked for many years on their roads and have done more to mark the different highways than the people of any other state; furthermore, all Iowa roads are dragged immediately after a rain and are kept in good condition. All this is, to large extent, in anticipation of the heavy transcontinental traffic that is expected to pass through Iowa next year on the way to the Panama-Pacific exposition.

Great rivalry has sprung up between different sections of Iowa as to what is the best route across the state, one faction contending for the Great White Way and another for the Lincoln highway, which is farther to the north. In support of the latter route A. R. Pardington, vice president and general manager of the Lincoln Highway association, writes THE TRIBUNE as follows and supports his argument with a map of the highway to show that this route is the shorter one between Chicago and St. Paul:

I have read "The Sunday Tribune" with a lot of interest. I am inclosing herewith a sketch which refers to the communication from Mr. Carson. Without seeming for one moment to detract from the wonderful work Mr. Carson has done, I cannot help taking exception to him and to his advice to tourists as submitted to you if they seek to go from Chicago to St. Paul. According to Mr. Carson tourists would go from Chicago to Sterling, Ill.; Sterling to Davenport, west to Iowa City, and pass north through Cedar Rapids on to St. Paul, Minn. Why all this circumlocution when by going directly west from Sterling to Clinton, crossing the Mississippi at that point, and then due west to Cedar Rapids, you strike the same road Mr. Carson suggests from Iowa City?

The question often has been asked why the Lincoln highway was routed over the old transcontinental trail. The eastern half of Iowa is to all intents and purposes uniformly level. After passing the western part of the state on those roads south of the old transcontinental now known as the Lincoln highway the tourist encounters a continuous succession of hills, all of which tend to slow up and make travel more hazardous. The Lincoln highway runs directly west to Denison, at which point it bears southwest, following the same level as the eastern part of the state.

If you will look at one of the United States maps you will note a large number of streams, all running in a generally southwesterly direction, emptying into the Missouri river, having their origin along the line of or in, some instances south and in other instances north of the Lincoln highway. Generally speaking the Lincoln highway is north of the sources of these streams, so that the number encountered is minimized. Before routing the Lincoln highway as it is all three of the trans-state Iowa roads were carefully studied and compared. I have been told by tourists who have covered all three of the roads that under normal touring conditions, although the distance is greater, the Missouri river at Council Bluffs can be more quickly reached from the Mississippi river by traveling over the Lincoln highway than over either one of the two other roads. All three of these routes pass through a wealthy, populous, interesting section of the country.

It is true the Lincoln highway itself does not pass through Des Moines, which is approximately forty-two miles south, the point of detour being at Ames.

Queries and Answers.

"I am thinking of making an automobile trip from Chicago to New York and will thank you if you will publish in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE the route that is shortest and most direct; also full details. Are there guide marks along the roads? Are there any spots where there are possibilities of getting off the route? How are the roads and will the hills of New York state bother me? I intend using my new 1914 little four passenger 32 horsepower Hupmobile. It is in fine shape and can stand a grueling grind. I suppose I would require the latest edition of some road guide, and will you please suggest which is the most reliable, authentic, and latest book?

N. G. R., Chicago."

Follow the road through South Bend, Archbold, Napoleon, Liberty Center, Bowling Green, Pembertonville, Woodville, Freemont, Clyde, Norwalk, and Elyria to Cleveland. Then keep along the shore of Lake Erie through Ashtabula, Conneaut, Girard, and Erie to Buffalo. From this point follow the New York Central line through Rochester, Syracuse, and Utica to Albany and then down the east side of the Hudson river to New York. There are always possibilities of missing the road, but it is an easy route to follow, particularly after Lake Erie is reached. The road is good all the way, except between Laporte and South Bend and a few other spots. There should be no trouble for the car to carry four over any hills that will be met, even if some are pretty heavy. Secure a Blue Book at any automobile supply house and do not go without a guide, for it will save its price many times over. With a good guide book you will have no trouble.

"What do you think of a calcium chloride solution for an anti-freezing mixture for cold weather? Please let me know in next Sunday's TRIBUNE.

"J. G. MACHAMER, Freeport, Ill."

Calcium chloride serves the purpose well and in some ways is superior to denatured alcohol. Naturally it will not evaporate so readily, but the chief objection to it is that wherever it touches iron or steel it rusts easily; it is destructive to paint or varnish, as is alcohol also; it must be mixed; alcohol will not injure clothing, whereas calcium chloride will. Because of the cleanliness of denatured alcohol and the fact that it costs only about 55 cents a gallon wholesale, it is recommended.

"I wish to call attention to your answer in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE of Oct. 11 to B. F. Lasher, Elgin, Ill., who asks the best route from Chicago to Marquette, Mich., and in which you state that 'from Iron Mountain to Marquette the roads are none too good.' This road was rebuilt three years ago. Automobiles make the seventy-eight miles in three hours and it is done every day in four hours, which is more than can be said of any other seventy-eight miles from Chicago to Marquette. I hope you will make a correction of the statement to Mr. Lasher through your columns.

G. V. CARPENTER,
"County Highway Commissioner,
"Iron Mountain, Mich."

"Referring to the clipping from THE TRIBUNE of Oct. 11, I wish to correct the statement that the roads from Iron Mountain to Marquette are none too good. This road is in excellent condition.

"W. H. VAN INDERSTINE,
"President Marquette Motor club,
"Marquette, Mich."

"Please give the best automobile route between Sterling, Ill., and Madison, Wis., as well as the mileage.

"L. W., Sterling, Ill."

From Sterling go east on the Lincoln highway to Rochelle, forty miles; from Rochelle go directly north to Rockford, twenty-six miles; from Rockford follow the river road through Beloit, Janesville, and Stoughton direct to Madison, seventy-six miles, a total of 142 miles.

"Please give me the best direct automobile route from Chicago to Dayton, O.

"C. E. RICH, South Chicago, Ill."

Take the well known road to Indianapolis through Hammond, Crown Point, Thayer, Rensselaer, Remington, Wolcott, Lafayette, Frankfort, and Kirklin. This is 205 miles. Then go directly east to Greenfield, 21 miles from Indianapolis; Cambridge City, 53 miles; Richmond, 84 miles, to Dayton, 108 miles, making the total distance 328 miles.

"At the present time do not advise motorists to go out Archer road. There is a large sign at Forty-eighth avenue, 'Road closed,' but the road is open and teams traveling it. No work being done on it as far as one can see. They are working it further down and you have to turn around and go south about two miles to Sixty-third street, thence north into Summit. Poor roads. Cut out Joliet, La Grange, and Riverside. The roads are 'fierce' to each of them. The best route west is to leave Madison street south through Maywood direct to Hinsdale. A fine road. At Hinsdale you get the Starved Rock trail. Part of the Starved Rock trail is marked 'Cannonball route.' It would be more appropriate to call it the Cannon bump. There are some parts of the route that are good, and when you get up speed you also get the bump; sometimes your hind wheels will kick you in the ear. The route to Morris is six miles further by Aurora and Yorkville than through Joliet, but is an hour quicker. From Yorkville to Morris is a fine, straight road; it is graveled most of the way; but don't let that trouble you; drive in the ditches. The road officials ought to blush to think the ditches are better than the roads they build. From Morris to Ottawa there is a straight road twenty-four miles. It is some road. Part graveled and all dragged and in fine shape. There is little travel on it and you can use all the speed you have. This road cuts out Marseilles. Road officials wait until the ground is dry and hard and then throw one inch stone in the holes with nothing to bind the stones. They should wait until the holes are full of water to put the stone on, and they should not use stone larger than one-quarter inch mixed with screenings. This they are doing at Hinsdale. An iron wheel wears away the stone, hence large stone was necessary; but now the rubber tire is more used, which does not grind away and crush in the stone, but kicks it out, so that the stone must be fine and well bonded in. There is no use in repairing roads without the stone is bonded in, and it should be kept wet until it has set. Therefore repair after a heavy rain. We are using the automobile tax to build roads for wagons, not thinking an automobile does not want to go wagon speed and wants a different kind of road.

"R. P. B., Chicago."

"What is the best way to get into the racing game? Is it necessary for one to be a factory man in order to become a mechanic in an automobile race?

"READER, Chicago."

The mechanic usually comes from a factory, due to his experience as a tester, his acquaintance with a particular machine, and his knowledge of what to do when some difficulty arises. But mechanics have been developed from ordinary drivers, chauffeurs, etc. The mechanic must know his car and this can be learned only by experience.

Chance for United States Auto Makers to Profit by the War.

By Reed L. Parker.

IN 1913 France led the world in the exportation of automobiles. The United States ranked second and Germany third. Great Britain was fourth. It is an ill wind that blows nobody good and it is within the bounds of commercial honor for our country to profit by the war, which will prevent England and France increasing their foreign business at least and will prevent Germany exporting a single machine or part. The United States has more than an equal chance to seize a great majority of Germany's business in foreign lands.

Germany last year exported 7,849 chassis, valued at $17,755,582. In 1912 7,953 chassis were exported. Their value was $15,808,608. It will be noticed that while the number of chassis exported in 1912 was greater than the number exported in 1913, their value was more than a million dollars less. The average value of a chassis in 1912 was $2,178.02. In 1913 the value had advanced to $2,196.72.

Russia was the chief buyer from Germany, the land of the czar taking 24 per cent of Germany's total exports. Several American manufacturers have realized for some time the value of the Russian field and already have begun exporting there. Our trade with Russia, however, has been in the comparatively low and medium priced cars. We have in no way compared with Germany in the quality of our exportation to that country. It would seem that there is a vast field for high priced cars in the empire.

Although at present any trade with Russia is at an almost complete standstill, it would be well if American manufacturers laid the foundation for the opening of trade when the war is over. Missionary work, it is believed, would be profitable.

Austria and Hungary form the second great market for Germany. The dual monarchy took 10 per cent of the German production. Of course, immediate exportation to the two countries is impossible, and it is certain Germany will not suffer when the demand for cars begins after the war is over. However, France and England will hardly offer acceptable markets to the Austrians after the war, while America as a neutral country should be in good favor. In Austria-Hungary, therefore, lies the opportunity of securing a big part of the trade heretofore enjoyed by the manufacturers of England and France.

Germany's percentage of exports to other countries has been correspondingly lower. A list showing the percentages and their value follows:

Country.	Per cent of total exports.	Value.
Russia	24	$ 4,139,563
Austria-Hungary	9.8	1,689,912
Argentina	7.6	1,330,544
Great Britain	7	1,084,640
Brazil	5.5	948,420
Holland	5	862,220
Denmark	4.5	775,960
Italy	4.2	724,248
Belgium	4.1	707,004
Sweden and Norway	3.9	672,516
France	3.7	638,028
Switzerland	2.1	363,124
Spain	[illegible]	[illegible]
Finland	[illegible]	[illegible]
Dutch East Indies	[illegible]	[illegible]
Portugal	[illegible]	[illegible]
Roumania	[illegible]	[illegible]
South Africa	[illegible]	[illegible]
Uruguay	[illegible]	[illegible]
Australasia	[illegible]	[illegible]
Chile	[illegible]	[illegible]
Other countries	[illegible]	[illegible]
Totals	[illegible]	[illegible]

While the trade with any one of the above mentioned countries is not important, the aggregate is well worth trying for. Germany's trade is sadly embarrassed now and will continue to be in straitened circumstance for several years even should the war end within the period of six months.

So far as what may be termed the overseas trade that of South America is of most interest. Notwithstanding the slump in trade in the South American republics of the last two years, especially in Argentina and Brazil, it still is responsible for 15 per cent of the German shipments.

The LOVE AFFAIRS of PEGGY

[Copyright: 1914: By The Tribune Company.]

Instead of proving the joy she expected it to, Peggy's engagement insists—having once started—on assuming the aspect of a nightmare. Predicament follows predicament. Our screen Peggy will have to be versatile, to say the least. Marguerite Courtot is the last to enter the ranks.

Peggy—who art thou?

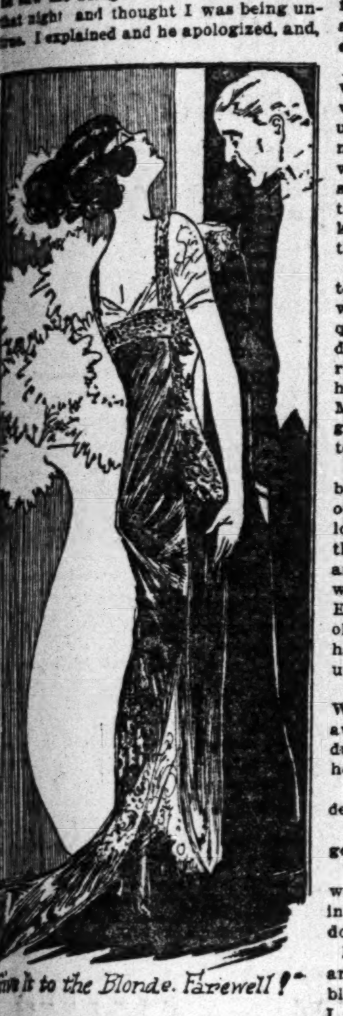
Any more suggestions as to who shall be our "Peggy of the Films"?

SOCRATES, or whoever the old croaker was who remarked that troubles travel in bunches, or words to that effect, knew what he was talking about, journal! My engagement ring is off again, and it's going to stay off! What's more, it's all done up in its little box, wrapped, addressed, and stamped. All ready to go back to that perfidious man I thought I loved.

Elliott Holt! How could you!

[Yes, that splash is a tear, journal; but it's not a sad tear. It's a mad one! And even you, you poor old inanimate, should realize the difference between the brands.]

You see it was this way: Elliott and I had a perfectly grand making up after he saw me being kissed congratulatorily that night and thought I was being untrue. I explained and he apologized, and,



Give It to the Blonde. Farewell!

O, everything was just hunky dory! I forgave him entirely and told him so, adding that I supposed it was the nature of man to be unreasonable.

"Why, Elliott," I said, "do you think anything in the world could make me doubt you? Nothing! Unless you told me with your own lips you had ceased to love me I would believe nothing I either heard or saw against you."

To which the man whispered, "Angel! What did I ever do to deserve such a little wonder!"

O, as I said, everything was hunky dory until—

Yesterday, you know, was such a beastly day! Elliott and I were to have gone riding in the afternoon, but the streets were, of course, sloppy, and consequently skiddy, and if there's anything I am afraid of it's a skidding car. So I told him I wouldn't go. He said then he guessed he'd better work that afternoon, and that he'd see me in the evening. I, being perfectly reasonable and as agreeable as I know how, said I thought he was showing good sense. Anyhow, I had a perfectly grand book I was dying to read, and it was just the kind of an afternoon for a cozy time to oneself.

Well, I went up to my room and read for hours. When I finished the book I looked at the clock and discovered it was only 5 o'clock. An hour before dinner would be ready. I felt sort of stuffy and cobwebby—you know how you get when you've been reading in one position for a long time? Well, that's the way I was. It flashed through my mind that my favorite beauty specialist had said that there was nothing so good for the complexion as to put it out in the rain.

"I'll just stick on a lot of duds I don't care what happens to," I said to myself, "and go for a walk."

I suited the action to the word, and a few minutes later found a rain coated, be-rubbered being emerging from our door, that was me—myself—not looking in the least like myself, but feeling like a duck!

Trudge, trudge! Splash, splash! O-oo-oo, how good the rain felt. I breathed in great gulps of the sweet, wet air, and was having the time of my life, when——

I saw an automobile coming toward me. Thinks I: "Why, that looks like Elliott's!"

It came on. Sezzi right out loud: "It is!" And I was just about to wave when I discovered—journal, can you guess the awful truth? Well, here it is—right in plain black ink on white paper:

Elliott had a girl with him. A blonde! And she didn't look a bit mussed or rainy-day-ey. Her hair was as smooth and her coat looked as tailored and on the front of it she had a big bunch of violets—and they're not particularly in season yet, either. And expensive! Don't I know?

Elliott didn't see me, and he probably wouldn't have recognized me if he had, I was such a different sight from what I usually am. As they went by I turned my head and affected a limp so he wouldn't possibly know me. Then as soon as they had passed I turned in my tracks and beat it for home. Of course I know that's slang—but it's what I did all the same.

Aha! So that was the way he meant to work, was it? That was the reason why he suggested I stay and read—I'm quite sure he was the one who said rainy days were read-y ones! That was the reason. I was his skiddy girl, but he had a nonskid to fall back on. All right Mr. Elliott, I thought, I'll cook your goose for you and it's going to be done, too!

So I dressed to kill. She might be a blonde. But she couldn't put anything over on me when I made up my mind to look my prettiest. Being straight, clear through mad gave me a gorgeous color and altogether I was quite well satisfied when I had finished my toilet. I'd show Elliott what he had lost! I took off his old ring and tied it in the corner of my handkerchief. At the psychological minute I would spring it on him.

Elliott came. I greeted him sweetly. We played cards with dad and mother for awhile. Then they remembered pressing duties they had in some other part of the house and left us to ourselves.

"What did you do this afternoon dear?" the false man wanted to know.

"Read," I said. "Just as I said I was going to. What did you do?"

"Worked!" he exclaimed. "I never worked harder in my life!" And he went into details explaining just what he had done.

I listened, but I didn't hear him say anything about any little job of taking a blonde out to ride. When he had finished I gave him another chance to own up—I am reasonable, if nothing else. I said:

"I went out walking."

"In the rain?" he asked. "Why, skiddymerinks! Didn't um det wet?"

"Naturally um did," I replied icily, "the rain coming down in torrents. And if you please, Mr. Holt, I don't want you to call me by that ridiculous name, or any other, again. Here, Mr. Holt, is your ring. Give it to the blonde. Farewell!"

While I talked I had been trying to get the ring out of the handkerchief. Failing, I tossed the handkerchief across the table to him and, with my head in the air, marched upstairs. Five minutes later mother knocked and begged me to come down again, that Elliott was acting like a crazy man.

"I've gone to bed," I said.

In five minutes more up came dad. "Peggy," he said severely, "Elliott wants to explain. Be reasonable!"

"I am in bed," I replied icily. "Dad, it is over. I refuse to be explained to. I saw what I saw."

"Well," dad said, "Elliott says he saw what he saw the other night, but that he let you explain. He demands the same courtesy."

"I've no objection to his demanding," I replied and relapsed into a clamlike silence.

[Evidently he didn't know the ring was tied up in the handkerchief, for I found it this morning just where I left it last night. That's how I happen to have it here, all tied up for delivery.]

All morning long the man has been making the air hideous with telephone calls. But when I'm through I'm through.

Journal, what do you suppose he'll say when at last I give in? How will he account for the blonde? Not, of course, that it makes the slightest difference to me.

I'm merely curious.

The Voice of the Movie Fan.

Dear Miss Tinee: Let me take up the cudgels for the Keystone comedies: I must be the antithesis of Mr. Travers, for I can't enjoy a movie show any more unless there is a Keystone on the program. Surely it is better to have a sense of humor that appreciates the clever characterizations of Charles Chaplan and Mabel Normand (some peach) than the sort of dramatic or literary taste that enjoys the drivel of the ordinary "movie drama," with its hackneyed plot and exaggerated portrayal of unnatural motions which one has to sit through to see good comedy later.

KEYSTONE FAN.

Dear Miss Tinee: So many of us think you are getting so disagreeable. When you first began to write on the "movie" subject you were charming, but now you are saucy and conceited. You had better "tame" down or you will be minus a job.

READERS.

Dear Miss Tinee. I think it would be grand if you would answer questions sensibly, instead of such gush as "Bothersome" or "Silly Lilly" in today's paper. There is so much of that and Francis X. Bushman that one doesn't expect much else any more. It isn't what one expects of the paper. Cut out the "Peggy" stuff and give us more real movie news.

MRS. Q. E. WALLER.

Dear Miss Tinee: To my estimation, Miss Marguerite Snow of the Thanhouser company seems to represent Peggy more closely than any other actress mentioned, because she is jolly and quick and of that character. I have been watching Miss Snow's acting for three years, and find her the most beautiful and successful actress to impersonate Peggy.

Dear Miss Tinee: A certain ascetic minded individual writes your page a letter which was published last week, saying that he cannot enjoy a "movie" show if there is a Keystone comedy on the bill. I seldom go to a show unless there is.

He asks, "Do they think that we are a lot of vulgarians?" If he had used a moment for thought before he asked that question he would have realized what an asinine one it is. It seems peculiar, but he is the first person of whom I have heard that could not get a laugh out of a Keystone.

The slapstick and "vulgar" humor, as he calls it, is against the American sense of propriety, which is very great. We—the public—are bound by conventions. These pictures are based on the violation of all conventions and are usually made in such a natural way that they are humorous.

You will hear more laughter during one of these pictures than in the combined performances of half a dozen productions of the funniest farce of the day.

This R. S. Travers is an individual and so great a one that he had better get wise to himself and join the board of movie censors—those wonderful moralists.

Vivian Rich

INTRODUCING Miss Vivian Rich of the American Company! She whose appearance in "Flying A" productions is always so eagerly awaited. Miss Rich has been in the public eye since she was a child. She entered the theatrical profession when she was a mere toddler, and during her earlier years created a name for herself by specializing in boy parts. "I just loved being a boy," she says, with her hearty laugh. "Too bad I had to grow up!"

This young moving picture favorite enjoys the singular distinction of having been born on the high seas. "But," she says, "I'm an American and I insist on being recognized as such. You see my parents are U. S. citizens, so—this is my ain country and no one shall say it is not!"

The earlier years of her life, Miss Rich spent in Philadelphia. Her education was acquired in New York and Boston. Is she married? Well, what do you think? Those who claim to know say that she maintains bachelor quarters at Santa Barbara, California, and if one is married one's quarters are hardly designated as being "bachelor" are they? She is fond of all kinds of sport and has a penchant for the weird and uncanny. She declares herself to be anti-suffrage and, it is said, does not avail herself of the privilege of voting. To quote Miss Rich herself: "I'm just an ordinary, hard working, hard playing person who likes folks and wants folks to like her!" Folks do!

Answers to Movie Fans. - - By Mae Tinee.

Owing to the number of queries received and the somewhat limited space allowed for answers, it is not always possible to print information as rapidly as the writers desire it, as the letters must be answered in turn. All, however, receive careful attention.

When stamped and addressed envelopes are inclosed, Miss Tinee will be glad to answer personally any letters addressed to her. Address all queries to this department to Mae Tinee in care of this paper.

Questions that have been repeatedly answered will receive a reply only when a stamped and addressed envelope is sent.

Questions considered as ridiculous will not be answered.

Questions regarding relationship will be answered to the best of our knowledge, but we are not responsible if mistakes are made.

If you are interested in photo-play writing send a stamped and self-addressed envelope to this department for the information you desire.

C. B.: No, I know nothing about the vaudeville pianist you mention.

S. R. C. CLUB: When I interviewed Arthur Johnson I never thought to ask him if he was part owner of the Lubin company. So thoughtless of me!

J. E. K.: The Essanay company is the only one producing in Chicago at the present time.

HELEN S.: Edith Storey is to be seen in Vitagraph pictures. You'll have to tell me the name of the company producing the picture in which you were interested if you desire information regarding it. I'm so glad you like what I write. Thank you for telling me.

BROWN EYES: J. Warren Kerrigan is not married. Hooray!

AILEEN J.: Crane Wilbur is a grass widower. I had not heard he was engaged to Pearl White. You might write and ask him. Address him in care of the Pathe Freres company, 1 Congress street, Jersey City Heights, N. J.

ONLY MUZRY: Thank you for your pictures. They are vurry nice. You'd better write me a personal letter inclosing stamped and self-addressed envelope for reply. I couldn't begin to tell you all you want to know in this column. Best wishes, anyway!

HELENE: The company you refer to is the Pathe Freres, 1 Congress street, Jersey City Heights, N. J. I imagine you mean Crane Wilbur, but, as I did not see the picture you mention, I cannot state positively regarding the identity of the player.

K. N. C.: I believe Yale Boss is the young Edison player's real name. Yes, "One Wonderful Night" has been produced.

EFFIE: When you ask questions regarding the various pictures and the players you must mention the companies producing. Thank you for the nice things you said in your letter.

BEULAH: I only know of one House Peters. The picture to which you refer was not a good one. Didn't you see the one we printed later in the "gossip" column? You'll have to judge for yourself as to who is the most popular, Mary Pickford or Kathlyn Williams.

DOROTHY S.: A letter will reach Mary Fuller if addressed to her in care of the Universal company, 1600 Broadway, New York.

GENEVIEVE W.: In asking for information, please mention companies. O, yes, I think Miss Williams autographed the picture.

MAC C. T.: Alice Joyce is an American. Questions regarding religion I do not answer. Arthur Johnson is not married at the present time, I believe. I don't know, I'm sure.

MARIE V. W.: Write to the circulation department, telling what paper you wish. Inclose 5 cents for Sunday papers published within the month and 10 cents for those antedating. Awfully sorry you missed the one in which you had such interest!

M. A. E.: I have no information regarding the actor you mention. I'm sorry!

AN ADMIRER: Some of the most important pictures in which Arthur Ashley has appeared are "Officer and Gentleman," "Crucible of Fate," "Price of Vanity," "The Winning Trick," "Two Aristocratic Penitents," "Mrs. Upton's Device," and "Doctor Polly." No, he's not engaged to anybody. He's happily married and has two lovely children. Kathlyn Williams was recently divorced.

K. H. C.: I'm sure I don't know how you can get "flocks" of information regarding Arthur Johnson. My imagination and information do not travel in flocks. But don't think I'm snubbing you, child. He's 38 years old, is with the Lubin company, was born in Cincinnati, has been in pictures eight years, is 6 feet 1 inch tall, has black hair and blue eyes, and weighs 175 pounds. You're welcome.

LILLIAN: I should say I do think Morris Foster handsome. Yes, he was Joseph in the Thanhouser production "Deborah."

H. I.: Yes, Miss La Badie's picture has appeared twice in the "Frame." I am not permitted to give the home address of the stars, as they prefer to receive thir mail in care of the studios. A letter addressed to Mary Pickford in care of the Famous Players, 213 West Twenty-sixth street New York, will reach her. No trouble at all.

JAMES: Stamped and self-addressed envelope, please!

ANXIOUS: Pauline Bush and Pearl White say they are not married. Crane Wilbur is a grass widower.

BLANCHE C. McK.: I don't know Kathlyn Williams' age. Pearl White is 25 years old.

MME. X AND MME. Z: Are you? No, Mr. Travers is not married. Bryant Washburn is. You're welcome, mesdames!

KALEM FAN: I understand that Guy Coombs is not married.

Ethel Barrymore's Summer.

By Mae Tinee.

A WEE white doggie, whose soft curls lay close to his small body, greeted me at the door of Miss Barrymore's dressing room and wagged a convulsive welcome. Miss Barrymore came forward, and as she greeted me gathered him up.

"He's just new," she explained, as we sat down in front of her dressing table. "I saw him in a window on my way to the matinée, and I simply could not resist him. So I bought him for the children. They'll be crazy about him. I think I'm a little crazy about him myself," and she bent her bright head to his. He was a squirmy little morsel, though, and she had to let him down almost immediately. He trotted over to the other side of the room, where he dropped down in a soft, drowsy ball, and the interview proceeded.

I think that Ethel Barrymore grows more beautiful all the time. Some people liked her better when she was slenderer and more girlish. But to me there's something so satisfying about her now. Some people like spring. I'd rather have summer, myself. Wouldn't you? Anyhow she was lovely in the silky, gauzy white gown she had been wearing on the stage in "Drifted Apart," and the electric lights over her head were terribly becoming. I thought she looked a little tired and told her right away what I had come for.

"This interview is going to be just a little different from others," I explained. "You see, since your admirers heard of your appearing in 'The Nightingale' they have one and all become ardent 'movie' fans and scarcely an hour goes by that the moving picture department does not get letters about you. How did you happen to go into pictures? Do you approve of them or did some one coerce you into becoming a celluloid star and are you sorry you let them persuade you, or are you glad? Are——"

Miss Barrymore threw up her hands.

"O, wait!" she said, laughing, "please wait. Honestly have people asked you all those things about me or are you just ——?" She paused.

"Making 'em up? No, ma'am. I have the letters at the office and I'll send a small boy over to you with them if you'd like to have me."

"O, no, I'll take your word," she said graciously. "And since people really are that interested I'll answer your questions as best I can.

"You see, motion pictures are really becoming the thing. We people of the theater realize that. Those of us who are well known are constantly being approached by the various companies, and the propositions they make us are so attractive there is no gainsaying them. It was that way with me.

"When the All Star people made up their minds they wanted me they extended an offer I could not refuse. At first Mr. Frohman was not willing, but when he read the play—scenario—written for me by Augustus Thomas he admitted it was good, and at last said he guessed it would be all right. So I became a moving picture actress."

"Didn't it seem awfully queer—after having a whole stage to yourself, to be confined in a little set—able to walk only so far?"

"Well, yes, that was strange," Miss Barrymore conceded. "But, being possessed of some sense, after a few mistakes I learned to keep within bounds, and then I was all right. To tell the truth, I haven't found the work much different from 'legitimate' acting after all."

"O," I said, "then the camera didn't fuss you at all?"

"The camera!" she laughed. "I had forgotten the camera. Yes, it did worry me, I must confess. But, then, I am so terribly self-conscious when I'm rehearsing. O, it's about hoss and hoss. And pictures are fascinating. I love them!"

Girls! We're sure moving pictures are all right now, aren't we? Nothing low brow about them if Ethel Barrymore loves them, is there? Our taste is vindicated.

To continue: "I wonder, Miss Barrymore," I asked, "how you would like pictures in which you were compelled to take risks? How would you like to jump from the deck of an ocean-going greyhound, for instance?"

Said Miss Barrymore enthusiastically: "I can imagine nothing more delightful! Think of the sensation of going through the air and then swimming away through the sea! Why, I'd love it! O, I want to do things in the pictures! That's what I told the All Star people. I told them that the next time I appeared I wanted to be given something to really do. Since lines count for nothing, actions should count for everything. I wouldn't mind what they'd give me to do. I'd do it—gladly!"

This was, to me, a new Ethel Barrymore.

She went on: "My brother Lionel has been in pictures for over two years, you know. He is with the Biograph company. He has enjoyed his work so and long before I ever dreamed of being a motion picture actress he succeeded in arousing my interest. For a long time, now, I have been reading up on them, and I consider myself fairly well posted at the present time. I am realizing more and more what a wonderful field there is in pictures. The only thing I can honestly say I dislike about the work is——"

"——the awful waiting," I finished for her.

She stared at me.

"Why, how did you know I was going to say that?" she asked.

"O, they all do," I told her. "Everybody who goes into pictures enthuses. Suddenly they remember and say just what you did."

Miss Barrymore laughed. "Well, it is awful," she said. "You get all ready and then you wait for hours before the director and the camera man and the rest are ready. I've learned my lesson, though. Next time I act in pictures I'll take my books and sewing and be at least occupied."

From where the little doggie was came a scrambling sound. His Small Whiteness was on his four wee feet busily chasing something with his ridiculous nose. Miss Barrymore jumped up and ran over to him.

"No, no—I don't know what your name is yet—I guess we'll call it Kee Tee because I'm sure you're Chinese—you mustn't eat that chestnut. You must live until I can get you home, and chestnuts are not overly good for big folks, let alone small busybodies like you. Come!" And she rose with Kee Tee cuddled in her arms.

It was time for me to go and I came away, liking Miss Ethel Barrymore, motion picture star, a lot!

IN MOVIE LAND.

The Onyx club, with headquarters at Denver and many branches in towns of Colorado and Arizona, is a society composed of moving picture fans. They publish a brochure devoted to gossip of the moving pictures and have invited a contest voting the most popular player of the silent screen. The contest is yet young, but so far Ethel Clayton, the beautiful Lubin leading woman, is well at the head, having to her credit 4,445 votes. None of the members of the club has ever seen Miss Clayton; hence the voting has been inspired by her work as seen upon the screen, which is a tribute to her art rather than personal acquaintance or friendship.

The other evening when Mary Pickford was working in "The Stepsister" at the studio of the Famous Players, Daniel Frohman walked into range of the camera and stopped proceedings. Miss Pickford, garbed in the robes of a queen, descended from her throne to inquire the cause of the interruption. Mr. Frohman beckoned to Millarde Johnson of the Australasian Films, Ltd., of Sydney, Australia, standing at the side, to enter the improvised throne room. Mr. Johnson, accompanied by Mrs. Johnson and Miss Duffy, advanced in front of the camera. Mr. Frohman explained to Miss Pickford that Mr. Johnson had brought to her a message from the picture patrons of the far off city. Mr. Johnson then presented to the popular actress a silver loving cup, explaining that, as its inscription indicated, it was generally a token of the affection in which Miss Pickford is held by her fellow townsmen and specifically in honor of her work in "Tess of the Storm Country," in which she had particularly endeared herself to Australians. With the cup was a great album. Mrs. Johnson then presented to Miss Pickford a handsome bouquet of orchids. "O!" exclaimed "Little Mary"; "O-O!"—and then, overcome, she buried her face in her hands.

"The Girl Who Earns Her Own Living" is a series by Mark Swain, who has written exclusively for the Edison company for about two years. In this series each story will show the struggle of a young girl to maintain a decent existence and the girl in each story will be a different character. Each one, however, will be played by Gertrude McCoy. The first release of these stories will be "The Stenographer" on Dec. 5.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

November

November.

THE woods have on their winter clothes. Under the dry leaves the violets and hepatica had put out timid new growth. Before frost cut down the less sturdy remnants of green, the wild strawberry had been betrayed into blossoms and buds were swelling on sensitive shrubs. October had been full of warm urgence and deceit, using the arts of Indian summer to give vegetation and humans a false sense of security, to postpone the day of sawing wood and potting flowers.

All this guileless time the woods were unbeguiled and went steadily into their winter clothes, into the seeming monochrome which dissolves for the observant into subdued but infinite colors. Aisles were opened up and the ground softly covered with its winter blanket, which is also its granary.

In this monochrome there remained flecks of green where an aspen held to its leaves and they to their color, or a hazel held out against change. The seed bearing weeds were brown and yellow, the bracken had disappeared, the woodfern green only where leaves had protected it. Warblers and sparrows had made their visit and gone. Sap suckers, juncos, nuthatches, and the birds which, if promised a full cupboard over winter, will remain, had full possession of the woods, and in spite of the coax and urge of warm sunlight, the woods said winter.

They were in their winter apparel and presented, save for the flecks of green, their winter appearance. As tall gray and brown prophets they stood, and suddenly out of the northeast came a swirl of snow to give them honor.

The wood pile demands attention. The ax is master in November.

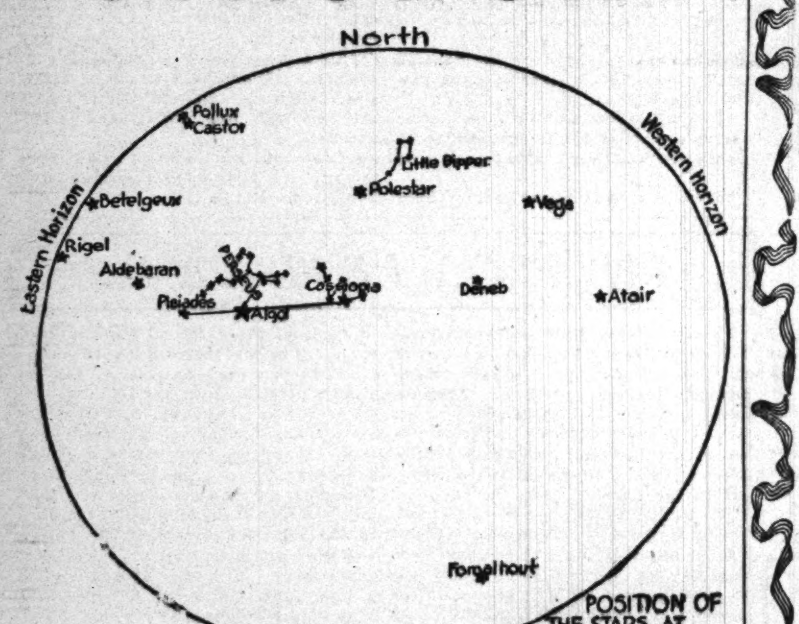
ASTRONOMY.



POSITION OF THE STARS AT 9 o'clock TONIGHT INDICATING LOCATION OF ALGOL

ALGOL, in the constellation Perseus, is known as the "Winking Demon." It flashes and wanes, flares and fades—dangerous manifestations of malignancy to the old astrologers. Algol is a variable, and its phases are due to a companion, invisible, which circles about it at a comparatively short distance, thus partly eclipsing it at short intervals.

Algol may be found in the northeast, arising about an hour before Capella. A line drawn from the hazy cluster of the Pleiades to the "W" in the constellation Cassiopeia will find Algol about half way along. This constellation is one of the half dozen well defined groups, and the "W" may be recognized to the west of the Pleiades, which are unmistakable.

Algol is at immeasurable distance. Its parallax cannot be found, and, therefore, its distance cannot be computed. Its companion is about four-fifths of its diameter, that of Algol being approximately 1,000,000 miles. The period of revolution is nearly three days. During all but about nine hours of the period, Algol is at its full brilliance as a second magnitude star. Then it begins to fade. In four and a half hours it diminishes until it is only one-fourth as bright as it was.

For eighteen minutes it remains at this low ebb of light, and then waxes, returning, in approximately four hours and a half, to its original brilliance as a star of second magnitude.

In less than three days the star makes this periodic change, and until the discovery was made that it was being eclipsed, it was a heavenly body for the astronomers to view with apprehension.

That its variability was periodical was not discovered until 1783, and then by an English astronomer.

It is in the evening sky now, being one of the stars that autumn brings, arising in September about sunset. The unaided eye can follow the Winking Demon in its changes.

The constellation of Perseus, in which Algol is the most interesting star, is north of the Pleiades, and that swarm can be found without direction by any one who will look at the sky for a cluster merged into a haze.

Algol is the best known of the variables. Another is the star known as Beta, in the constellation Lyra, which takes thirteen days in its cycle. The star Mira, in the constellation Cetus, requires 331 days for its changes, and during that time fades from a star of second magnitude to one of ninth. At its maximum it is brilliant; at its minimum it is invisible.

ART AND ARTISTS.

By Fabius.

NO ONE seems to have paid much attention to T. Austen Brown, a small, wiry Scotchman of large continental reputation. Mr. Brown has no dealer behind him. He apparently wanted to know what America is like, so he came, rented a room in the Tower building and hung his pictures. I found him there Tuesday smoking his pipe.

The pictures astonish. Mr. Brown belonged, I am told, to the Glasgow school, painting conservative pictures until he had made a substantial reputation (he is well known in England). But these pictures are far from conservative. Most of them appealed to me as primarily decorative. They are decidedly impressionistic, giving for instance in reproductions of sunshine, the shock which sunshine suddenly looked upon gives.

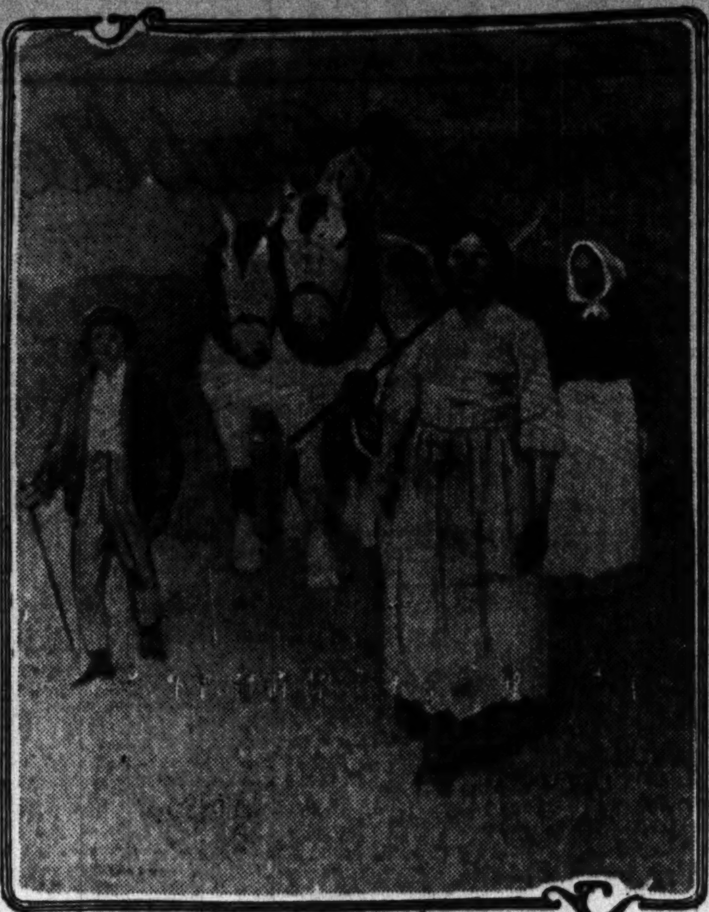
It cannot be charged against Mr. Brown that he is seeking sensation. His reputation in conservative, academic painting prevents that. There are great masses of color, not splashes. All of the pictures seemed to be painted solidly and carefully.

There are a few pictures there which I think belong to his period of change. They are not so impressionistic, serving in this particular collection as contrasts to the warmer, livelier pictures of a later date. Most of them are scenes about Etaples.

Concerning pictures of sunlight, which seem to be the fashion among artists, but less among purchasers of painting, the theory suggests itself that Americans in general don't want to be compelled to look at pictures. Most of the homes I know are hung with dark, subdued pictures, the only function of which often is to compel renewal of wall paper. At least they are never looked at. Lawton Parker, who saw the Brown pictures with me, was, however, more hopeful about the interest in pictures which command attention.

If you go up to the Brown exhibition Mrs. Brown will show you a number of Japanese wood prints done by herself. This art seems to have become popular. The prints I saw were satisfying.

The annual exhibit of American paintings opens on Tuesday at the Art Institute with a formal reception.



"AFTER THE DAY'S WORK IS DONE" By T. Austen Brown.

How the war rouses even artists to intemperate anger is exhibited in the Burlington Magazine, which says concerning the destruction of art treasures in Belgium and France: "The Germans may at least boast that should the allies catch their own destructive madness they could not find in the whole of Germany any building the destruction of which could be regarded as an equivalent ravage to that of Reims, and only one building which might be put in at all the same class, viz.: The cathedral at Bamberg, built for Germany by French artists." Again: "We must trust indeed that if the allies ever get to Berlin they will carefully preserve the unutterable Siegesallee."

When you make your calculations be sure that you're not estimating by air-line. Survey the ground before you invest your time and your money. Half the wrecks of enterprise can be traced to the miscalculations of theory.

An aeroplane can follow the shortest route because it encounters nothing but atmosphere on the way; but a railroad train must deal with rivers and mountains—grades and swamps, the best of engineers is challenged by physical conditions none of which are encountered overhead.

Pessimists are ex-optimists who didn't investigate before they invested.

The most prolific sources of opportunity are the junk-piles of misguided endeavor.

The majority of things which "didn't go through" were perfectly feasible but rashly maneuvered.

Many a millionaire owes his fortune to the same undertaking which is responsible for another man's bankruptcy. Management is the rarest of gifts. The ability to guide oneself and one's affairs along the lines of least resistance—to escape unnecessary waste and to avoid escapable hazards—these qualities stamp the true leader. You don't have to bother with new notions while so many excellent projects are calling for reclamation and efficient regulation. One of the greatest blessings of our day is also one of our greatest dangers. The existing generation places too much reliance upon instruction. We are flooded with ready to wear theories and systems and methods on every conceivable subject.

In whatever direction we turn there are convenient little books which explain "how to do it," and myriads of zealous and ambitious young-men-in-a-hurry devour the inexact and often impractical declarations of authors who assume authority without having undergone the requisite experience to qualify them for their roles.

As old Cyrus Simmons used to say: "I don't know much but I know it thoroughly. My general experience is limited but I can teach school in my own shops.

"I don't put my mind on more matters than I can put my fingers on.

"Considering how many folks there are trying to get along in this world it's a good sized life job to pick out a specialty and master its details.

"I've met lots of individuals who could take a map and construct a transcontinental line with a pencil and a ruler and a listener. The only thing that upsets their calculations is execution.

"If I could harness one per cent of the enthusiasm of fools, I'd rebuild the universe in a year.

"Come down to earth, it's the only place where you can find a solid foundation.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Salesmen and Solicitors.

SALESMEN—WE WANT A LIVE MAN IN each county in Illinois [Cook excepted] to have the exclusive sale of our Neu Gas 4-Way Cook Stove Burner and Gas Maker. Do not confuse the Neu Gas Burner with a dirty oil burner. It burns real gas. The gas is made outside of the burner, goes to the burner as gas from outside of the stove through a mixer, taking with it the greatest amount of air possible, air and gas being thoroughly mixed producing therefrom perfect combustion, giving greater economy, efficiency, and cleanliness than is possible with any other fuel, eliminating all dirt and labor incident to the use of coal and wood. The application of the Neu Gas Burner and Gas Maker to the present kitchen equipment is one of its most striking features. The Neu Gas Burner can be installed in any coal or wood cook stove or range. It is properly named 4-way, having two round top or lid burners, these furnish sufficient heat for all cooking purposes in a 6 hole range. On the side next the oven there is a separate long burner, operated only for the time baking. On the opposite side is another long burner for heating water fronts; this because of the intense heat is used only a portion of the time each day. The top burners can be operated independently of the oven or water front burners; or with either or both of them as desired; these burners are controlled with one valve. The Gas Maker is independent of the burner; it makes the exact amount of gas required for the particular burners in use; no more gas is made than needed, thereby preventing waste and expense. The Neu Gas Burner and Gas Maker will be sold only through an exclusive county representative. If you live in Chicago and are tired of the high cost of living and want to go back to your old Illinois home, or if you are living in Illinois outside of Cook County and want to secure the sale of an article without competition having unlimited selling possibilities, in any county in this state, this is the opportunity of a lifetime. Today you can get the county you want, tomorrow it may be gone. Call on or address Woods Kero Gas Burner Co., General Offices 246 W. 63d-st., or at our North Side office, 1557 Wells-st. Open evenings.

WEST RAVENSWOOD LOTS.

While we have very few lots left in our subdivisions at West Ravenswood and Albany Park, they are by no means tail-end and undesirable pieces. The present time offers many fine opportunities of investing in real estate. Our subdivision is unequaled for transportation facilities, and, while we are warranted in raising our prices, as a business policy, we will let the remaining lots go at the figures originally put on them. In purchasing in our subdivision you buy in a fully developed project.

Lots from $900 and up.

Beautiful bungalows and residences worth from $8,000 to $40,000 in adjoining block on same streets.

25 lots sold in two days and yet there are a few choice ones left at original land owner's prices. You cannot lose at such low prices and should more than double your money quickly on these lots, and you could not find a higher class lot of people for neighbors than the people who have already selected the spot for their future homes.

Prices $550 and up for 30 ft. lots, larger lots in proportion; nothing reserved; don't delay; first here gets first choice.

FOR SALE—GLENCOE PROPERTY—
The lands immediately adjoining the Skokie Golf links have a distinctive character.
Since specializing in them sales have been made to twenty-nine members of the golf club, who have erected homes averaging in cost about $10,000.
There are only 35 lots unsold, which command an unobstructed view over the links, which have just been scientifically rebuilt at great expense. When these lots are occupied present prices will seem like sacrifice bargains.
No lot is sold of less than 100 feet front. They are all beautifully wooded, and located less than three-fourths of a mile from Northwestern station. Glencoe's grammar school is exceptionally fine.
To acceptable parties who will build no cash payment will be required. Particulars and information furnished.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Michigan.

More Michigan Farmers.

[Private car excursion, Tuesday, Nov. 10.]

ONE-HALF OF MICHIGAN'S POPULATION four years ago was agricultural. During the 10 years previous the number of farms in Illinois dropped 13,000, Indiana 8,000, and Ohio 4,000, while Michigan increased her farmed acreage by 7 per cent. While some parts of Michigan gained and others lost as in the neighboring states, yet the gains in western Michigan, the Fruit Belt Country, were such as to cover the loss in the rest of the state and make the gain for the whole state 8,000 new farms. This shows that the people are coming to western Michigan for farm land.

FARMING IS POSSIBLE in Michigan for many to whom it is impossible in other states on account of the prices of the lands. In Michigan each year there are more farm owners, while in the next door states each year they become fewer, and the number of renters increased. There are only two states in the union that have as many farms operated by their owners as Michigan. It is a condition that tends to make better farms, better neighborhoods, more progress in road building, education and sociability and brings numerous advantages for the benefit of each farmer. Farm renters from the renting districts of Illinois and Indiana will especially appreciate what this means. Renters are naturally disinterested in their neighborhoods because they move too frequently.

THERE ARE A HUNDRED reasons why the big movement of farmers settling on new lands has turned to western Michigan, and they are contained in my 72-page book, a new edition of which is just coming from the printer's hands and contains 115 photographic views of the lands, farms, towns, crops, etc., in the Swigart Tract. Drop me a postal card and I will mail it or call if you can and also get a large map and see samples of our 1914 crops of rye, vetch, clover, alfalfa, 90-day and fodder corn, wheat, oats, potatoes, vegetables, and fruits.

THE TIME OF THE YEAR has come when people begin to sit by the landlords' firesides and think where they are drifting or aiming. Let each man who reads this decide whether or not he is a drifter with the current, as he surely is if he is not following some well defined plan for his future. The Swigart Plan opens the way to acquire a farm for many a man who could otherwise never own one. The prices of the lands are as low as any lands offered anywhere, considering their advantages, and the terms are as low as $10 to $50 down and $5 to $10 a month on 40 acres.

COME AND MAKE YOUR SELECTION from 50,000 acres. The tract lies in Mason, Manistee, Lake, and Wexford counties—the fruit belt center, handy to the biggest national markets, with good local markets, transportation both rail and water. Come and join this biggest colonizing project north of the Ohio river. We give insurance in our contract, as an additional protection to every man while purchasing.

MY NEXT PRIVATE CAR excursion will be Tuesday, Nov. 10, by the P. M. R. R., leaving my offices at 11:30 a. m. Fare $8.80 round trip from Chicago to Wellston, my Michigan headquarters, rebated on purchase. You return to Chicago at 7:20 a. m. the second or third day after. Automobiles and guides free. Offices remain open Monday evenings and Saturday afternoons. AN AGENT WANTED IN EVERY TOWN.

George Swigart, Owner.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy.

SPECIAL VALUES NOW

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been entirely taken apart, each part examined, and if necessary replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory; the entire car repainted and refinished like new; all parts put in first class condition—the whole car in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is as good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performances of these used cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In addition to service values, these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

PACKARD
USED CAR POLICY.

THE PACKARD square deal policy protects our patrons. It applies to a used Packard just as well as to a new Packard.

WE SELL USED CARS FOR OUR CUSTOMERS—NOT FOR PROFIT.

Every used car undergoes a rigid technical examination. Some we offer just as the customers turn them in and some we rebuild. The latter have all the appearance of new cars and are guaranteed. The former cost you less, but in either case you get full value for your money. The prices we are asking for the cars of various makes and types listed in our latest Used Car Bulletin are by no means commensurate with their intrinsic worth.

Ask for Bulletin.

BECKWITH TO URGE HASTE.

Corporation Counsel Will Go to Washington in Interest of Municipal Pier Breakwaters.

Corporation Counsel John W. Beckwith will go to Washington Wednesday to prevent a delay of six months in constructing breakwaters to protect the new municipal recreation pier. He will urge Secretary of War Garrison to set aside $100,000 from the war department's emergency fund to sink caissons this winter.

It was announced yesterday that no more payments will be made to the Great Lakes Dredge and Dock company till the investigation of the amount of stone used in the pier is completed. This inquiry is being conducted by the efficiency division of the civil service commission.

AUTO KILLS WISCONSIN BOY.

Arden Rice, Delavan, Meets Death and Two of Five Others Are Injured When Car Overturns.

Delavan, Wis., Oct. 31.—Arden Rice, 20 years old, youngest son of Dr. and Mrs. F. A. Rice of this city, was killed last night when a touring car in which he was riding with five companions overturned, throwing all of the occupants out. Stanley Ford, owner and driver of the car, was injured internally. Verne Locke had three ribs broken and George Rutledge, Ed Kieleen, and Joe Flynn escaped without injury.

CITY CLUB OUT FOR BOND ISSUES

Committee Favors Boulevard Link as Great Public Improvement.

HOOKER OPPOSES ACT.

The proposed boulevard link on Michigan avenue, for the realization of which a bond issue of $3,800,000 will be submitted to the approval of the voters next Tuesday, was indorsed by the city planning committee of the City club yesterday.

In the opinion of the committee the benefits to be derived by the city from the completed project should not be longer postponed.

Here's the Report.

The report in part follows:

"Your committee on city planning has made a study of the proposed widening and extension of Michigan avenue north of Randolph street.

"It has long been apparent that some improvement should be made to relieve the congested conditions at this intersection of one of the important north and south arteries of travel with the east and west traffic from the rail and water terminals to the distributing centers westward.

"The scheme proposed by the board of local improvement is the final result of years of study and the consideration of many different plans by various organizations. The plan now proposed appears to be entirely practicable and is probably the best and most economical solution of the various problems considered.

Positive Benefits to Come.

"In view of the positive benefits to be derived from the improvement, it would seem unwise to further delay its construction, particularly as such delay would undoubtedly result in a material increase in the cost.

"It is proposed that the cost of this improvement shall be provided for, 40 per cent from bonds issued by the city, and 60 per cent by special assessments levied upon the property contiguous to the improved street for its entire length. It is apparent that property in the territory near to Michigan avenue and its north side extension will be benefited to a greater extent by this improvement than property in other parts of the city, although the city-wide benefit will be material.

"It therefore seems entirely proper that the distribution of the cost should be made as proposed.

Favorable Vote Urged.

"In view of the foregoing, your committee recommends a favorable vote upon the proposed bond issue.

"The various committees of the City club which deal with public questions are chosen by the directors on account of their interest in these questions and their presumed capacity for investigating them and reaching intelligent conclusions. Such conclusions, however, represent the judgment of the committee only and do not profess to represent the opinion either of the club membership or of the board of directors."

Hooker Opposes Bonds.

George E. Hooker, civic secretary of the club, issued a statement opposing the approval of the bond issue. He declared that the double deck bridge left unsolved an important part of the problem of traffic interference, in that it did not eliminate the grade crossing north of the Rush street bridge. Mr. Hooker suggested the establishment of "universal" freight stations in the central district, with a view to eliminating most of the freight traffic from the down town streets. He said the problem of the freight traffic had not been broadly studied or endorsed by engineers.

"If this second story street is to be built," he said, "its cost should be paid by automobilists, for whose use it is intended, and not by the general public. Every other kind of traffic, street cars, elevated lines, and railroads have to pay for their right of way—why not the automobilists?"

FIGHT NEW LODGING HOUSE.

West Siders Object to Institution in Factory Section Where Girls Are Employed.

Plans for a new municipal lodging house on the east side of Peoria street, south of Madison, struck a snag yesterday. Ald. William J. Healy, in whose ward the proposed lodging house is to be located, announced his determination to defeat the project. Nearly 100 business men of the vicinity took a protest to the mayor.

"West of Halsted is a high class industrial neighborhood," said Ald. Healy. "Thousands of girls are employed there. It would be a shame to attract a lot of bums to the vicinity.

"One part of the scheme is to incorporate the Robert Waller bath into the lodging house. Last year 44,054 persons attended the bath, 1,902 of whom were women, 4,251 boys, and 2,381 girls. It wouldn't be safe to let the women and children go there if the lodging house is constructed."

THREE FIREMEN LOSE JOBS.

Dismissed on Charge of Having Been in the Pay of "Arson Trust."

Charged with having been in the pay of the "arson trust," three firemen were dismissed from the fire department by the civil service commission yesterday. The trials were held several days ago.

The men discharged are Thomas M. Hansen, truck company No. 28; James M. Waddell, engine company No. 109, and William H. Schaefer, truck company No. 5. It was alleged they accepted money from persons subsequently convicted of arson as payment for information regarding the location of fires as soon as the alarms were turned in.

Frank I. McMahon of engine company No. 85 also lost his position because he went to sleep on duty. He was charged with having failed to notify his company of an alarm at 2 o'clock on the morning of Oct. 21.

HERE'S THE BIGGEST CHEESE

Utica, N. Y., Oct. 31.—The largest cheese on record, weighing nearly seven tons, has just been completed at West Martinsburg, Lewis county. It measures 6 feet 6 inches in height and over 25 feet in circumference.
